HERRIOT'S PLAN FOR CAPITAL LEVY LEADS TO CRISIS

Poll Indicates That Senate May Be Expected to Block Premier's Financial Proposal.

NEW ELECTIONS LIKELY TO RESULT

President Doumergue Is Final Arbiter in Struggle Between Chamber and the Upper House.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, APRIL 4.—A poll of the Senate made today by experienced followers of French political affairs indicated that a capital levy now generally understood to be the key of Premier Herriot's plan for the reform of French Finances, would meet the support of fewer than one-third of the members of Parliament.

For some time the Cabinet has been aware of the Senate's opposition to any radical innovations in the Government's financial policy, and has, therefore, been prepared for a severe revision of the budget by the upper House. The cabinet, however, relies upon the Chamber, which is elected by universal suffrage, to bring the Senate to terms.

Nevertheless, the poinion of political experts is that the Cabinet will have a difficult time overcoming the opposition from the upper House. This situation gave rise today to more talk of a dissolution of the Chamber, with new elections within three months.

The final arbiter in the struggle between the Chamber and Senate will be President Doumergue.

If he approves the Senate's attitude in the present struggle, President Doumergue can dissolve the Chamber. Thereupon the Government in power must call for a new election within 30 days after the decree is issued.

Many French radicals have concluded that dissolution is inevitable and consequently they favor a policy that will bring it about while the present government is in power, so that it may have control of the election machinery.

Millerand Assails Levy.

Former President Millerand, who is a candidate for the Senate in the elections tomorrow to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Senator Magny, made severe criticism of the Government in an election speech tonight. He described the idea of a capital levy as "not merely odious, but absurd." Referring to the incidents in the Senate which led to the resignation of M. Clementel as Minister of Finance, Millerand said:

"The Minister of Finance, in accomplishment of his duties, gave some indications as to the measures which the Government had in mind. The Premier arrived in haste and went to the tribune, not to deny what the Minister had said, but to regret that he had spoken the truth."

40 YEARS FOR ARMY PLOT

Infantry Private Sentenced as Communist Leader in Honolulu.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, April 4.—Three [illegible] soldiers were dishonorably discharged today following charges that they attempted to organize a revolutionary communist league among the enlisted men of Schofield Barracks. Walter Trumbull, another private, is to be tried on the charges Monday.

Private Paul Crouch, Twenty-first Infantry, was sentenced by general courtmartial to 40 years' imprisonment and dishonorably discharged as the ring leader in the communist. As the alleged leader of the Hawaiian Communist League," Crouch issued propaganda under pretext of being a teacher of Esperanto at army schools. In a letter to the league produced as evidence, Crouch, Trumbull and Walter Na were named as the Executive Committee. The arrests were made March 10, after Crouch had declared communism in a local newspaper, but the fact was not made public by the army authorities un-

IGOE VINDICATED, MILLER EXPOSED

The publication of the full text of the letter by William L. Igoe, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, to President Wilson, in behalf of Max Greenberg, convicts Victor J. Miller and his campaigners of gross, deliberate misrepresentation of Igoe's conduct in the Greenberg case for the manifest purpose of branding him with gangsterism and blackening his official record.

In the letter written by Igoe to the President, he does not ask for a pardon for Greenberg, but states that Greenberg, a resident of his district, asks him to request the President's personal consideration of his application for a pardon.

Mr. Igoe merely submits Greenberg's statement of his case, with all the information that he could gather with regard to it. He frankly puts both sides of the matter to the President. He gives Greenberg's record so far as he knows it. He refers to the charge that he is a man of bad moral character and had been arrested a number of times, but submits Greenberg's defense that he had never been convicted on any of the charges brought against him previous to the conviction in question, but was arrested several times on suspicion. He states that the Attorney-General opposed the application, but that Assistant Attorney-General Finch, who investigated the case, had recommended the pardon. He refers to the favorable recommendation of United States District Attorney Karch, under whose authority the prosecution was conducted. Mr. Igoe does nothing more than present frankly and fully both sides and all the facts known to him, for or against a pardon, and expresses the hope that the President "will give the application careful consideration."

The malicious and false assertion of the Millerites that Igoe got the pardon, that he had exerted himself to get a convicted criminal out of prison, and their depiction of Igoe as the friend of gangsters who lets them out of prison, is completely refuted by the record which they grossly garbled.

In order that the readers of the Post-Dispatch may form a fair and accurate judgment on Mr. Igoe's conduct, we reprint the full text of his letter:

"My Dear Mr. President: In the matter of the application for a pardon filed by Max Greenberg and other defendants in the case of the United States vs. Max Greenberg, et al., the defendant Greenberg, a resident of my district, asks me to request your personal consideration of his application.

"The Attorney-General who has examined into the case very thoroughly does not feel that a pardon should be granted. Although I have not seen the report, I understand that the pardon attorney, Mr. Finch, has recommended favorable action.

"Greenberg maintains that he is innocent of the charge on which he was convicted and since the sentence of five years will be enforced in a very few days I hope his appeal for your personal consideration of the case may be granted.

"He contends that the witness upon whose testimony he was convicted in a subsequent statement before an agent of the Department of Justice and under examination by the District Attorney explained his testimony at the trial so that innocence of Greenberg and the other defendants is clear.

"It is urged against Greenberg that he is a man of bad moral repute and has been arrested and indicted on numerous occasions.

"His answer to that is that on a charge of arson he has been twice tried and in each instance the jury failed to agree. On another indictment for larceny he was acquitted on showing that at a time when he was alleged to be in St. Louis he was in fact in Chicago in conference with his attorney.

"In still another case wherein he was charged with burglary the case was dismissed without trial and the special prosecutor admitted an injustice was done Greenberg.

"At no time, he says, has he been convicted except in the case now before you. Many times he was arrested but he says no prosecutions were instituted on the charges and he ascribes this to the police practice of arresting on suspicion.

"If innocent of the crime as charged he feels that he should receive a pardon and if any other crimes are charged against him that as to them he should have his day in court.

"I am also informed that the District Attorney who while he did not conduct the prosecution was present during the trial, has also reported to the department that in his opinion the defendants were not guilty as charged.

"In view of the foregoing claims, I hope you will give the application careful consideration.

"Very Truly Yours,
"WILLIAM L. IGOE."

Mr. Igoe's conduct as exhibited in the record of this case was that of a conscientious, careful, judicious man, who as Congressman submitted an appeal of a resident of his district to the President. He is not only vindicated by the facts, but his high character, honesty and sound judgment shine the brighter in the light of them.

In sharp contrast with the character and record of William L. Igoe are the character and record of his opponent for the Mayoralty, Victor J. Miller, who was ousted from the presidency of the Board of Police Commissioners for his vile, unsubstantiated charge of immoral practices against the girls and boys of the Soldan High School and was dismissed from the police board as a discord-maker and a nuisance by the Governor who appointed him.

Miller's dishonest Kentucky bond deal; his official lawlessness in his invasion of homes, hotel rooms and restaurants, and wholesale arrests of citizens without warrant; his reckless, slanderous utterances and his denunciation of all who oppose him as thugs, thieves, gangsters, liars, blackmailers are of common knowledge.

Which man do you want for Mayor—Igoe, conscientious, capable, judicious, tolerant; or Miller—reckless, unscrupulous, intolerant? Do you want a safe official or a blatant, spectacular demagogue?

JUNE 25 IS FIXED AS DATE CHAPMAN GOES TO GALLOWS

Jury Discussed Case Seven Hours Before Finding Verdict of Guilty on First Ballot.

CONVICTED OF KILLING POLICEMAN

Scornful Smile Is Prisoner's Only Outward Reaction to Pronouncement That He Shall Be Hanged.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 4.—On the twenty-fifth day of June, 1925, before the hour of sunrise, within the prison walls and by the prison warden, or deputy warden, Gerald Chapman shall be hanged by the neck until he shall be dead.

He was convicted this morning of murder in the first degree. The jury of hard-faced Connecticut Yankees who had listened to the testimony for nine days and had discussed the case for seven hours and 35 minutes took a secret written ballot inside the box-like jury room which looks out on a great factory building in which coffins are shaped and put together. When the ballots were opened, each bore the single word "guilty."

Guarded by Six Men.

When Judge Jennings arrived in the courtroom and the jury came in, Chapman was in the cellar lock-up guarded by six men. State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn and Frederick J. Groehl, chief of Chapman's lawyers, were ready. Chapman was ordered brought up.

The big bell in the lockup connecting with the jury room rang loudly. Samuel S. Chamberlain, Hartford clothier, was ringing as foreman of the jury to bring the prisoner up. Chapman only turned his head and looked curiously at the quivering bell on the wall. Then he turned swiftly and followed the guards up the stairs. It was 10:32 o'clock.

"Guilty," said Chamberlain, when asked for the verdict. "Guilty of murder in the first degree."

There came no expression to the face of Chapman. He was playing his role of the extraordinary criminal though to its conclusion. Only later, when he returned from his cellar prison to be sentenced, did his face lose its mask-like quality. Then there came a hint of a scornful smile on his lips.

Convicted of Killing Policeman.

The jurors who had come to the juryroom after a four dollar breakfast, found Chapman guilty of murdering Policeman James Skelly in a department store in the early morning of Sunday, Oct. 12.

Immediately, after the verdict the jurors returned to the hotel, where they had been locked up and ordered another large meal. It has cost the State of Connecticut $4 apiece a meal for each of the jurors for nine days. They have ordered and eaten the most expensive dishes, the favorites being lobster and fresh strawberries.

It developed that the test between Chapman's story and that told by the state witnesses, including Walter E. Shean, scapegrace son of a wealthy family of Springfield, Mass., who turned underworld "squealer," came on the point of Chapman's alibi.

Alibi Was Unavailing.

Chapman's alibi witnesses had said they saw him in a stationery store on Albany avenue, Brooklyn, at 8:30 o'clock the night of Oct. 11. Shean had said, and other witnesses had corroborated him, that Chapman was with Shean eating the chicken dinner at the Old Colony Inn in Meriden, Conn. It had been believed that only Sam Chamberlain would know enough about Brooklyn to know if Chapman could have been at the stationery store at the time claimed in his own story. This was that he left Springfield, Mass., after 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Oct. 11. The only possible train, the 4:10 out of Springfield, would have reached the Grand Central terminal at 8:02 p. m. This left him only 28 minutes to get to the store on Albany avenue, Brooklyn.

But Chamberlain was not the man upon whom the jury determined to decide the value of Chapman's alibi. It was Bowers. The ex-Senator, during the years he was advertising manager for Frank Munsey in New York City, lived in a hotel just across the East River in Brooklyn. Ex-Senator Bowers told the other jurors he knew Brooklyn well enough to pass on this point.

Later it was learned from Thomas S. Rourke, who had been juror No. 2, that Chapman's conviction could be laid to the testi-

50 ZULUS DROWNED TRYING TO REPEAT RED SEA MIRACLE

After Praying, Leader Struck Waters With Rod and Asked for Passage.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 4.—An attempt by the leader of a party of Christian Zulus to repeat the miracle of the Red Sea has resulted in the drowning of 50 Zulu men, the Cape Town correspondent of the Sunday Express cables.

Floods have turned Zululand into a swamp. The party of Zulus, returning from a tribal gathering, reached a wide drift which had become a raging torrent. Determined to ford it, they knelt down and prayed; then the leader struck the waters with an iron rod, commanding the waters to roll back and let them pass. The party advanced and all were swept away, according to the cable.

BUILDING TRADES OFFICIALS URGE SUPPORT FOR IGOE

Letters of Indorsement, Signed by President and Secretary, Sent to Union Workers.

Indorsement of Igoe for Mayor is given in a letter to members of organized labor by Thomas J. McNamara, president, and Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council of St. Louis, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"His public and private life stamps him as a man whom every man and woman, regardless of political affiliation, can conscientiously support, the letter says, and we urge that every member of our unions, their families and friends, go to the polls April 7 and vote for William L. Igoe. His nonpartisan attitude and his position on all questions of public importance prove beyond all doubt his ability to serve as Mayor of this great city in a creditable manner."

Citing Igoe's record as Congressman and his interest in the welfare of soldiers during the World War, the letter states, "no party ever presented a candidate for Mayor of this city who possessed better qualifications as chief officer than Mr. Igoe, and for that reason he should be overwhelmingly elected."

SENATE PASSES ZONING BILL BY VOTE OF 22 TO 0

Amendment Excluding Cities Under 50,000 Sends Measure Back For Conference.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 4.—The Senate tonight passed the zoning bill, enabling St. Louis and other cities to enact and enforce zoning regulations, by a vote of 22 to 0, after amending the bill to exclude cities with a population of less than 50,000. This amendment will necessitate sending the bill back to the House, which already had passed the bill, for concurrence in the amendment.

The bill is an enabling act, authorizing cities to pass zoning ordinances, dividing the cities into zones and regulating the type of buildings constructed and uses to which property is put within those zones. Senator Kinney of St. Louis called up the bill for passage and saved it from being caught in the eleventh-hour jam before adjournment. The amendment eliminating cities of less than 50,000 population was introduced by Senator Phil Donnelly of Lebanon.

DR. COOK GOING TO PRISON TODAY FOR 14-YEAR TERM

Explorer and Promoter of Fake Oil Schemes Hopes for Reduction of Time at Leavenworth.

"TO EARN LIVING AFTER RELEASE"

Says He Could Get Good Money for Leading Expedition to North Again but Won't Do It.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FORT WORTH, Tex., April 4.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, Arctic explorer and reputed discoverer of the North Pole, will depart from here tomorrow in custody of Federal officers for the United States prison at Leavenworth, Kan., to begin serving a sentence of 14 years' imprisonment imposed upon him by Federal Court here after his conviction of promoting fake oil schemes.

Sixteen months behind the walls of county jail have made him an old man. He was in better spirits yesterday than he has been for several months. For the first time in more than a year he left the jail and in custody of a United States Deputy Marshal visited offices of his lawyers to complete business affairs.

Hopes for Shortening of Term.

"Texas spring is wonderful," he said, moving his chair into the rays of sunlight streaming in through a window. "You fellows don't know how to appreciate God's sunshine because you have never been deprived of it. However, ——," this with a wry smile—"I will have it better than you when it gets hotter than blazes down here I will be up North."

Then suddenly: "But I hardly think I will be there 14 years. The court has agreed to allow the 16 months I have served in the county jail to apply on my sentence, and my attorneys are doing all in their power to have my term reduced. But even if everything goes against me, I won't spend more than four years there—I will be eligible for parole then."

Dr. Cook's attorneys have prepared a pardon petition, addressed to the President, seeking their client's release, and it is being widely circulated throughout this Federal district.

No Plans for Future.

The explorer has not planned what he will do when released from the penitentiary. "My aim is to keep my health," he said. "When I am released I will be penniless and so I must look forward to making my own way. I have friends, many of them, to whom I will turn when I am free, but this will be only for a little while. I intend earning my own living. I hardly think I will go to the extreme North again, even though I should be paid well for leading an expedition. I am getting old. I am 59 now, you know."

Dr. Cook does not expect to write while in prison. "Did you ever try to write—even a letter—while in jail. Try it some time, if you are ever there."

Says Indictments Were Faulty.

At this point he was handed a newspaper carrying the story that indictments against Harry Sinclair, E. L. Doheny and A. B. Fall had been quashed because they were faulty.

"By George, fellows," he cried, his eyes brightening, "I guess there is a chance for me, after all. The indictments on which I was prosecuted were faulty all the way through."

After dinner, the explorer was taken automobile riding by the officer and reporters before being returned to his cell for the night.

COOLIDGES TO TAKE CRUISE

Early Spring Weather Prompts President to Decision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Washington's first touch of spring weather prompted President Coolidge today to change his mind about taking a week-end cruise on the Mayflower. Although it had been indicated that he would not leave the White House, announcement was made that after attending church tomorrow he would board the Mayflower and depart for an over-night trip down the Potomac.

Attorney-General Sargent, Secretary Davis and Senator Wadsworth of New York have been invited to take the trip with him and Mrs. Coolidge.

20 BISHOPS AGREE TO ATTEND OPENING OF MYSTERIOUS BOX

Four Persons Know Hiding Place of Box Left by "Prophetess," Who Died in 1814.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 4.—The desire of 100,000 followers of Johanna Southcott to have the famous secret box she left opened in the presence of 24 bishops probably will be released this year. Twenty bishops have agreed to attend the ceremony and a committee of her followers has promised to produce five others who will attend if the clergy of their diocese will permit.

The Southcott box has been a mystery for more than 100 years. Johanna was an English domestic servant who asserted that she possessed prophetic powers. Her followers believed the box contains writings capable of uniting all the churches of the world. Johanna, who was born in Devonshire, died in London in 1814.

Johanna insisted that the box must be opened only in the presence of 24 bishops, and although efforts have been made every few years, only a few high ecclesiastics would recognize its existence, and it was never possible to assemble 24 at one time.

This year, for the first time, the archbishops of Canterbury and York have agreed to witness the ceremony and their action has created interest among other churchmen, Johanna's followers will meet April 23 to make arrangements for opening the box, the hiding place of which is known by only four persons.

MAN DETAINED HERE AS ONE OF BIG TICKET SWINDLE RING

O. H. Shirley Taken on Indictment in New York Which Accuses 15 Others of Defrauding Railroads.

CHARGE OF USING MAILS TO DEFRAUD

Pullman Conductors Alleged to Have Retained Tickets and Mailed Them to New York for Resale.

The operations of a ring of ticket scalpers and of railroad and Pullman conductors, who, it is charged, carried on a large-scale business in the resale of used railroad tickets, and defrauded a group of railroads of large sums, were revealed here yesterday by the arrest of one of the alleged scalpers.

The Federal grand jury in New York City has indicted six of the alleged scalpers, nine Pullman conductors and one railroad conductor. The indictments state that many others, not known to the grand jury, had part in the swindle.

Man Arrested Here.

A copy of the indictment was made public here, through service on the man arrested here, O. H. Shirley, who lives at the Laclede Hotel. The names of the others indicted appear on the indictment. Shirley gave bond in the sum of $5000 for his appearance next Wednesday before United States Commissioner Adkins.

Another of the alleged scalpers, Ross Frazier, was arrested in Kansas City yesterday, according to a dispatch, and gave $5000 bond.

Adolph A. Blum, one of the alleged scalpers was arrested in Memphis late yesterday by Government officers. The Atlantic Coast Line railroad was said to have been the heaviest loser in the alleged operations of Blum. He was released under a $2000 bond pending a preliminary hearing before a United States Commissioner Monday.

The list of those indicted, as shown on the copy of the indictment served on Shirley, is:

Pullman conductors—Charles D. Davis, Harry H. Scudder, George H. Wertz, Robert L. Wilson, Herbert Kendall, Floyd Reed, Walace T. Candler, John S. King and Marion S. Averette.

Ticket scaplers—Shirley, Frazier, Adolph Blum, David Lyons, J. Font Smith and Charles Barton.

Railroad conductor—William G. Yates, Pennsylvania System.

The home addresses of the men are not shown on the indictment. It appears that a number of the 16 reside outside the immediate jurisdiction of the New York Federal Court. The swindle involved a number of railroads, running west and south from New York, and extended to Florida, to which State there has been a flood of travel in the last few months.

The railroads alleged in the indictment to have been defrauded are the Atlantic Coast Line, Florida East Coast, Norfolk Southern, West Shore, Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac, Southern, Pennsylvania and the Seaboard Air Line.

Use of Mails Alleged.

Six counts of the indictment charge the men with using the mails to defraud, and a seventh count charges conspiracy.

A long grand jury investigation preceded the voting of the indictments. Arthur N. Sager, formerly Circuit Attorney of St. Louis, now a member of the New York bar, represented the Government as special counsel in the inquiry.

The method of the alleged swindle, so far as has been learned, was for conductors to retain tickets given them by passengers, and to mail such tickets back, from stations not far outside New York, to the headquarters of the swindle ring in that city.

At one time during its operations, the ring is said to have had an office in the Pennsylvania railroad terminal building in New York. Later, it had its office at 1?8 West Thirty-fifth street, adjoining the terminal. The scalpers and conductors who figured in the operations of the rings are said to have met frequently in a Y. M.

'NOT A FANATIC,' SAYS MILLER IN CLOSING SPEECHES

Denies He Ever Called Democrats Thugs and Thieves — Utterances Garbled, He Asserts.

ADVOCATES BETTER STREET LIGHTING

Declares No "Respectable" St. Louisan Need Fear Raid on Home if He Is Elected.

"I am not a fanatic," declared Victor J. Miller, Republican candidate for Mayor, in the closing speeches of his campaign last night. He said his utterances had been garbled, and that he had never called the Democrats thieves, thugs and crooks. He asserted that no "respectable" St. Louisan need fear that his home would be raided if the speaker were elected Mayor.

These, together with a declaration for better streets, more street lighting, and his familiar plea for law enforcement, comprised his final pronouncements. He spoke before a politely friendly crowd of 1200 to 4425 Olive street; addressed an audience of 1800 at Tower Grove Turner Hall, Grand avenue and Juniata street and an overflow meeting of 200 outside, and finished before a gathering of 1000 at Mueller's Grove, 5900 Gravois avenue.

Reference to Prohibition.

A reference to prohibition enlivened the latter meeting when Miller entered his usual denial that he had arranged to engage a squad of "expert smellers" in case he was elected.

"Boy, they'd have plenty to do," called a voice from the audience. "I'll say they would," the candidate replied, with a broad grin.

His composure was not disturbed when a number of small boys in the alley behind the Tower Grove Turner Hall joined in several lusty shouts for Igoe, that were audible throughout the hall.

Miller declared that he had fought hard, but cleanly. He admonished his hearers to be certain to vote, telling them that "the thieves will be at the polls early and late."

Law Enforcement Theme.

"The people want decent Government," he began. "The support I have in this campaign is an expression of the desire of people, irrespective of party, for law enforcement. There is only one way to have good Government. It is: Enforce the law.

"I have many enemies. No man can stand for law enforcement as I have stood without making enemies. No man can enforce the law unless he can withstand unjust criticism and pressure. The rights of the people cannot be protected by an official who can be swayed by intimidation."

He repeated his familiar declaration that his opponents are his best recommendation. He reiterated the statement that he did not want to be under obligation to the "lawless element." He said again that candidates who do not disavow the support of lawbreakers are not entitled to the support of decent people. His statements, he said, had been distorted and garbled during the campaign.

"I have been quoted as saying that all Democrats are thieves, thugs and crooks. This is a plain, unadulterated lie. I never said it. There are Democrats who are of the highest type of citizenry. Thousands of them are supporting me in this campaign. What I said, and what I repeat, is that every thief, thug and crook in St. Louis is against me."

The opposition, he said, had made itself ridiculous. "They say that I will violate the law, that I will raid homes. I am running on a law enforcement platform. I believe it the first duty of the Mayor to protect homes. No respectable citizen need have any fear of being raided when I am Mayor."

Partisan Plea by Newton.

The nominee was making his appeal from a nonpartisan standpoint, and it was in striking contrast with the speech of Congressman Newton who had preceded him on the platform, and who made a direct appeal for votes on the ground that "this is a Republican city and is entitled to a Republican Mayor," a speech plentifully sprinkled with allusions to President Coolidge and attacks on the Democrats in Congress.

Miller devoted considerable time to a discussion of street lighting, drawing from its benefits the inevitable moral: "Crime is the only thing that thrives in the dark." He said it had been demonstrated that as street lighting increased, crime decreased. "Notice the difference in the crowds on Washington avenue since lighting has been increased," he said.

"A smoky city," he continued, "is not a healthy city. By intelligent application on the part of city officials, with the co-operation of citizens, this problem can be solved.

"I am not a fanatic," he declared in conclusion. "I do not deal in fads or fancies. True progress is made through safe and sane methods. I believe that a majority of the people have decided to vote, not as Democrats or Republicans, but as people who believe in decent government. If any judge or clerk of election sees any known crook vote for me Tuesday, I hope he will throw the vote out."

Judge Robert W. Hall, who also spoke at some of the meetings, referring to the Democratic candidate's remarks that he was running for Mayor, not Chief of Detectives, said: "It takes a man with the eye and brain of a detective to handle a city the size of St. Louis. The training of a detective will be useful in handling the bond issue money."

Increases K. K. K. Offer.

Miller yesterday increased from $5000 to $25,000 his offer for proof that he is, or ever was, a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Reports that this charge was being persisted in caused him to increase the offer, he said.

A circular in English and Yiddish has been issued from the Igoe-for-Mayor headquarters, declaring that Louis P. Aloe was defeated in the Republican primary because he was a Jew, and declares that the proofs are political and public. Pointing out that Igoe opposed immigration measures which proposed literacy tests for immigrants rather than character tests, it concludes:

"He harbors no prejudice of race or religion. Make him Mayor, and you will have a friend at the City Hall." It is signed with the names of former Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, Prof. Gustave Klausner, Max G. Baron and M. Grand, for the Jewish Municipal Non-partisan Committee.

Grimm Pleads for G. O. P. Victory, Warns Party Against Over-Confidence

Candidate Defeated in Primary Makes First Speech of Campaign — Will Vote a Straight Ticket.

Former Circuit Judge J. Hugo Grimm, an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor, made his first speech of the Mayoralty campaign at Tower Grove Hall, Grand boulevard and Juniata street, last night. He declared he would vote a straight Republican ticket and urged his Republican audience to do likewise. His address follows:

"My presence here on this platform and the fact that I address you on behalf of the Republican ticket does not signify that I am doubtful of the result of next Tuesday's election, but it does mean that I propose to support the ticket of my party just as I said I would on the day following the primary election. I would not think it necessary to make this statement but for the fact that it has been announced in the press that an organization, which thought well enough of me to give me its support in the primary, intended to support the Democratic candidate for Mayor at the general election.

"This organization was not and did not claim to be a Republican organization, but said it was strictly non-partisan. Of course, an organization of that character may support any candidate it pleases, just as an individual may; that is their privilege. But, it is my privilege as a citizen to support any candidate I please, and it is my duty as such to give my support to those whose election I consider would be to the interest of our city.

Urges Support of Whole Ticket.

"We are to vote on next Tuesday for Mayor, for City Comptroller, and for 14 members of the Board of Aldermen, and I want to say to you that it is important for our citizens to consider the whole ticket. We are so much interested in the contest for Mayor that we are apt to lose sight of the fact that it is almost as important that we have just the right man as Comptroller, and that it is very important that we select the proper men to go into the Board of Aldermen.

"We hear much said about the expenditure of the monies raised by the bond issue—the $86,000,000—and about the annual current expense of almost $30,000,000, and if you believe some of the speeches you hear you would believe that the Mayor alone will control these expenditures. But that is a mistake.

"As to the annual expenditures, the appropriations are in the first instance recommended by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, composed of the Mayor, the Comptroller and the president of the Board of Aldermen. The present Comptroller, Louis Nolte, and the President of the Board of Aldermen, Judge Walter Neun, are men of high character and great ability, and Judge Neun holds over; but the Comptroller and Mayor are to be elected on Tuesday, so you see the importance of electing the right men to those offices.

Praise for Incumbents.

"Mr. Nolte has been tried and found to be just the right man for Comptroller, and I predict his election by a rousing majority. But there is a bitter fight over the office for Mayor, and I want to tell you, my friends, that it will be a mistake to be over-confident and take things easy. If we want to win there is just one way to do that, and that is by going out and working hard every minute of the time between now and next Tuesday. Take no chances.

"And don't overlook the Board of Aldermen, for that is a very important branch of our city government. Don't forget that all appropriation bills must be passed by that body, that all ordinances for public improvements and for the appropriation of money to carry them out must be passed by the board, and unless we have the right kind of men on that board the Mayor will be seriously handicapped and his best efforts may be thwarted.

"The office of Mayor is one of great power, but it is not one of unlimited power, so don't overlook these other offices.

"Now, most of the employes of the city are found in the classified service and under the charter must be appointed after examination by the Board of Efficiency, which is appointed by the Mayor. That board has great power for good or evil. Do you want that board named by a Republican Mayor or by a Democrat? Stop to think what this means to you and the other people of St. Louis. As Republicans I know you will want those appointments made by a Republican.

Party Candidates First.

"But I tell you that I am going to vote for my party candidates first because I am and always have been a Republican, and will vote for my party candidates, unless I believe them to be unworthy. But there is a second reason, and that is because I was a candidate for the nomination of Mayor myself, and if I had been fortunate enough to have been nominated I would have expected my competitors to be big enough men and stanch enough Republicans to have supported me, and if I would have expected that of others I must be big enough and loyal enough to my party to support the man who defeated me. And so I shall vote my ticket, and particularly give my support to my successful competitor.

"Now, let's get together and do our best for the success of the Great Old Party."

HOUSE, WITH 200 CLERKS, FINDS RECORDS IN TANGLE

Journals in Such Condition That They Must Be Rewritten at Cost of $2400.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 4.—Records kept by the clerical force of the House of its proceedings are in such condition that the journals will have to be rewritten, it was declared today, when the Senate was asked to include an appropriation of $2400 in one of the appropriation bills, to pay for rewriting the journals.

As has been told in the Post-Dispatch, the House Journal does not give the text of many amendments to appropriation bills introduced by Democratic members of the House, seeking to reduce the size of appropriations. Most of these were rejected by the Republican majority. The text of such amendments is given in full where they added anything to the bills. It is required that the journal, which constitutes the official record of the House proceedings, give the full text of all amendments, whether adopted or rejected.

DENTIST'S DEATH A MYSTERY

Fatal Anaesthetic Case in Kansas City Unsolved.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 4.—The report of the Coroner's jury late today on the death of Dr. J. B. Kelly, dentist, whose body was found in a hotel room here Thursday, left the case as much in the air as before its deliberations. The jury found that the dentist met death by inhalation of an anaesthetic, but professed ignorance as to who administered it.

Mrs. Garnett Kelly, wife of the dead man, fainted as she finished her testimony, which was mainly a recital of mystifying incidents preceding the murder, already made public. She was soon revived and resumed her seat as the inquest proceeded.

PRE-HISTORIC ARMS FACTORY

ROCHESTER, England, April 4.—Professor Ernest Albert Hooton of Harvard University, is among the archeologists who are investigating the accidental discovery near here of what seems to be a pre-historic factory for tools and weapons.

Some 4000 stone implements have been unearthed and experts are of opinion that about 50,000 years ago the place was a considerable arsenal, as things went then.

VOTE ON ISSUES URGED BY IGOE IN RADIO TALK

Democratic Nominee Asks Electorate to Consider Management of Affairs, Not Party Triumph.

PUBLIC RESPONSE GRATIFYING, HE SAYS

600 Meetings in Various Parts of City Tune in on Candidate's 10-Minute Address.

William L. Igoe, Democratic candidate for Mayor, spoke last night over radio station WIL. More than 600 Democratic meetings in various parts of the city were tuned in on the 10-minute address.

Igoe expressed full confidence in the outcome of Tuesday's voting and reiterated his campaign pledges. The full text of his address follows:

"Throughout this campaign I have confined my discussions to the issues and problems upon which I was convinced the people would decide the election next Tuesday. I have addressed myself to the intelligence and interests of the people. I have avoided personalities or appeals to prejudices or passion. The honest, efficient and economical government of the city is paramount to personal ambitions or party labels. My firm conviction is that the citizens of St. Louis want success in the management of their affairs, rather than the triumph of any individual or of any party.

"The response which has been made by the people, in the form of pledges of support which have come to me from Republicans and Independents, is more than a cause of gratification to me as a candidate. It bespeaks a very widespread and sincere determination to make the election next Tuesday a decision upon the issues which were really involved in this contest, and which the people did not permit themselves to forget, notwithstanding the efforts to becloud or ignore them. It would be mere pretense on my part to say that I did not feel proud and grateful of the general and generous support which has come to me. I have the deepest gratitude for all these expressions of confidence in me and I want all citizens, irrespective of race or religion or politics, to know that I thank them with all my heart and assure them that the trust which they have placed in me as a candidate will not be forfeited by any act or omission of mine if I am elected Mayor.

Expresses Confidence.

"On the eve of the election, I have the utmost confidence in the result of the voting next Tuesday. My election will mean not so much a preference for me as a candidate, as it will mean a demand for the kind of municipal government for which I have tried to stand and resolve to represent.

"I want a full and free expression of the people at the polls next Tuesday. Every citizen, of whatever race or creed or color or political connection, ought to exercise his franchise and to be absolutely certain that his ballot is counted for those candidates for whom it was cast. I warn against any attempt to defeat the will of the people of St. Louis, and I condemn any misuse or abuse of the sacred privilege of suffrage, no matter in whose interest or against whose interest it may be undertaken. I have complete confidence in all those who have given their kind and their best efforts to the success of my candidacy. I know they share my abhorrence of any act or practice intended to thwart the popular will as registered at the polls. I know that these good men and women join me in this appeal for a rigid observance and enforcement of every law intended to safeguard the election and to record the choice of the people.

"Facing Epochal Period."

"Let the forthcoming election be the beginning of clean, fair, impartial and righteous administration of the city's business during the next four years. We are entering an epochal period in the history of St. Louis. We are about to undertake public improvements which will cost an aggregate of $87,000,000. This amount is more than seven times greater than the largest sum ever voted in one bond issue by our taxpayers. The selection of the men who are to govern these immense expenditures is to be made next Tuesday. When elected they will serve for four years. It is imperative that the election which gives them power and tenure should be beyond any suspicion of its honesty and fairness. No fraud should be permitted to taint the result. The men and the people should know that there has been no effort or attempt to defeat the will of the voters.

"I take this occasion to reiterate the statements I have made and the pledges I have given during the last six weeks. If I am elected Mayor I will give the people of St. Louis the kind of municipal government which I know they demand. I will appoint only men of unimpeachable character and outstanding ability as heads of municipal departments. No narrow partisanship shall influence my selection of these men. I will insist upon economy in every expenditure. I will demand that every associate and subordinate of mine shall think first of his duty to the taxpayers. I will respect and enforce every provision of the Charter and every law by which I am obligated. I will not raise or allow to be raised any question of race or religion in making my appointments. I will welcome the co-operation of unofficial agencies which are showing their interest in public affairs and endeavoring to improve our government and civic conditions.

Pledges Co-operation.

"I will co-operate with the party of opposition to make my administration a success in which my opponents may share if they are willing. I will take the office of Mayor with a proper sense of the grave duties and heavy responsibilities it imposes on me. I will regard my election as a popular insistance upon right management at the city hall, and not as a token of my popularity.

"It is with these thoughts and resolutions that I await the verdict at the polls next Tuesday. Whatever the outcome may be, I will accept it cheerfully. I thank again all those who have given me their good will and loyal support, and I ask all of the other people of the city to decide the election on the issues presented and upon no other basis."

DEMOCRATS DRAW UP BATTLE LINES FOR ELECTION DAY

Perfect Organization in Each of 624 Precincts at Meetings in Homes and Clubs.

5 MASS MEETINGS TOMORROW NIGHT

Leaders Generally Express Confidence in Swing of Sentiment Toward Igoe's Candidacy.

Democrats spent last night in perfecting their organizations in each of the 624 precincts of the city for a final drive in furtherance of the candidacy of William L. Igoe, Democratic nominee for Mayor. The meetings were held in homes and clubs and were addressed by speakers who outlined plans for the election Tuesday.

Five mass meetings will be held tomorrow night, but it is unlikely that Igoe will deliver any additional addresses. The meetings today will be held at 1602 Belt avenue, Gatesworth Hotel, 1800 North Grand boulevard, 3606 North Market streets, and at the Euclid Theater, Euclid and Easton avenues.

R. Wayne Ely, former Assistant United States District Attorney, speaking in the tenth precinct of the Twenty-second Ward, at 4031 North Newstead avenue, humorously referred to Miller as a "Don Quixote sallying forth with drawn blade to charge the windmill."

That Joplin Vote.

Ely pointed out that Miller's campaign slogan of "Ask your neighbor" might be taken back to the gubernatorial campaign of last August when Miller received only 1500 votes in Joplin, his home city, where Gov. Baker received 3000. He reviewed Miller's record satirically and expressed his inability to find any noteworthy phase of his career.

Roscoe Anderson, speaking before the Fifth Precinct meeting of the Twenty-eighth Ward, at 5606 Vernon avenue, said that Miller's service on the Police Board gave him no insight into the administration of the city and contrasted it with Igoe's four years in the House of Delegates and eight years in Congress.

Emil P. Rosenberger, speaking in the Tenth Precinct of the Twenty-eighth Ward at 5870 Romaine place, termed Miller "a mere political accident" and said he was a "soldier of fortune." He pointed out that Miller's entire public career was one of "talking too much" and referred to Miller's business activities, which he said indicated he was incapable of managing the affairs of the city.

Igoe a Man Tried and True.

Rosenberger said Igoe was a man who had been tried and never found wanting. He referred to the fact that Igoe, a native St. Louisan, had received his education here, practiced law here, served in the Municipal Assembly and was fully conversant with the needs of the city.

At the Missouri Athletic Association a meeting of Igoe's supporters adopted a resolution pledging their co-operation in furthering his candidacy. Col. Martin J. Collins, presiding at a meeting at the Century Boat Club, referred to Igoe as a "safe, sane man" and expressed confidence in his election.

The meetings generally expressed a tone of confidence in the swing of sentiment toward Igoe but impressed upon those present the need for intensive work up to the day of election.

Mayoralty Betting Odds Even First Time in 12 Years; $600,000 Put Up

Supporters of Either Igoe or Miller Must Place 5 to 4 on Their Choice to Win Election.

For the first time in 12 years the betting odds on the mayoralty candidates are even.

Immediately after the primary Victor J. Miller, the Republican nominee, was a 2-to-1 favorite over William L. Igoe, the Democratic nominee. As the campaign progressed the odds shifted and last night Tom Kearney, the betting commissioner who fixes the odds, announced the odds were even. A conservative estimate, Kearney said, would be that more than $600,000 has been wagered on the mayoralty election.

Kearney stated that supporters of either Miller or Igoe must place 5 to 4 on their choice to have a bet registered with him. On the other hand, he will wager 1 to 2 that Igoe will win by 5000; 1 to 3 that Igoe will win by 10,000; 1 to 4 that Igoe will win by 15,000, and 1 to 5 that Igoe will win by 20,000.

One of Kearney's large wagers yesterday afternoon was with Charles B. Gerhart, a real estate dealer. Gerhart bet $5000 against $4000 that Igoe would be elected.

In the three previous mayoralty campaigns Mayor Kiel, Republican, was an overwhelming favorite, the odds at this stage of each campaign being from 3 or 4 to 1 on Kiel's election.

Miller's supporters made a clean up in the primary election, winning about $500,000. At first they got odds of 3 to 1, then 5 to 2, and finally 3 to 2.

IGOE AND MILLER WILL BE BROADCAST BY KSD TOMORROW NIGHT

WILLIAM L. IGOE and Victor J. Miller, the Democratic and Republican nominees for Mayor, will conclude their campaigns with addresses over KSD, the Post-Dispatch radio station, tomorrow night.

Igoe will begin his address at 8:15 o'clock. He has one other speech scheduled for tomorrow night.

Miller will begin at 11 o'clock, following three or four addresses in various parts of the city.

IGOE - FOR - MAYOR TEA GIVEN BY WOMAN IN BED WITH INJURY

Wheel Chair Used by Mrs. J. W. Grace of 4393 Forest Park Place in Greeting Voters.

There are more ways than one to give a political tea. Confined to her bed for 14 weeks because of a broken hip, Mrs. James W. Grace of 4393 Forest Park place, a vice president of the Jeffersonian Democratic Women's Club, fretted because she could not join in the club's active work in support of William L. Igoe for Mayor.

Finally she decided it would be possible to give an "Igoe-for-Mayor" tea at her home, and give it she did, last Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Robert A. Crabb, president of the club, fulfilled the active duties of hostess, but Mrs. Grace, in a wheel chair, sat at the top of the broad staircase and smiled on the gathering. Propped up in bed, she had sent out postcard invitations to all the women voters of her precinct, and 82 responded.

Mrs. Crabb, in an address, told, among other things, how Igoe, as Congressman, had helped kill a bill to repress amateur radio operators. Other speakers were Mrs. Grace's husband, Mrs. W. O. Hill and John J. Nangle, an attorney, who addressed the women as "My fellow gangsters," satirizing Victor J. Miller's charge that Igoe was supported by gangsters.

Afterwards punch and cake were served and the guests strolled upstairs to congratulate Mrs. Grace.

ENOUGH ROADS TO ENCIRCLE EARTH TO BE BUILT IN 1925

Project Scheduled by Various States Call for Expenditure of $540,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—About 24,000 miles of highway, nearly enough to encircle the earth, are scheduled for construction during 1925 by the various State highway departments, reports to the Bureau of Public Roads showed. Maintenance of 217,794 miles of road also is planned.

Approximately $405,000,000 was reported available for construction and $135,000,000 for maintenance of State departments, while it was estimated that counties would spend approximately $463,000,000 for road work.

Comparison of funds available this year with those for previous years indicated, the bureau said, that road construction would be at about the same rate as in 1924. Since 1921 between 30,000 and 40,000 miles of surface roads have been built each year.

FASCIST DUELIST WOUNDED

Deputy Bottai Injured in Forearm in Clash With Critic.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 4.—The Fascist Deputy, Bottai and ex-Commandant Deputy Viola, fought a duel with swords today near one of the bridges across the Tiber. The Fascist duelist was wounded in the forearm in the second passage, and the duel was ended on surgeon's orders.

The affair was the outcome of a challenge issued after a scuffle in the Chamber of Deputies resulting from Viola's criticism of the concentration of "Black Shirts" in the recent municipal elections at Caserta. When Viola expressed dissatisfaction with the Government's explanation that the election was conducted in an orderly manner, the Fascist deputy shouted remarks across the chamber which Viola took as an insult. He ran across the floor and hit Bottai in the face. The Fascist answered with a challenge to a duel.

TWO ACTIVE COOLIDGE BACKERS INDORSE IGOE

A. H. Bauer and Theodore F. Lange Were Summoned to Conference by Dawes.

The names of A. H. Bauer and Theodore F. Lange, prominent supporters of the Coolidge-Dawes ticket at the November election, are included in the list of names of leading citizens indorsing William L. Igoe, Democratic nominee for Mayor, as published in newspaper advertisements.

Bauer, who is president of Bauer Bros. Brokerage Co., and Lange, who is president of the Louis Lange Publishing Co., were in a group of St. Louisans that conferred with Charles G. Dawes, Republican nominee for Vice President, at his Evanston, Ill., home last October, at Dawes' request. They were asked about political sentiment in the Middle West and the prospects of the Republican party carrying Missouri. Dawes wanted this information in advance of his St. Louis speech at the Coliseum.

In confirming the report that he is backing Igoe, Bauer said yesterday that he has consistently voted the Republican ticket in national elections, but has disregarded party lines in local elections. He declined to discuss the mayoralty candidates, except to say he considers Igoe the best man.

Lange is out of the city and could not be reached for a statement. Joseph J. Hauser, a third member of the group that conferred with Dawes, declined to affirm or deny a current report that he favors Igoe. Hauser is a past president of the Central Trades and Labor Union.

DIVORCE SET ASIDE, TEXAN HAS 2 WIVES, ONE A ST. LOUISAN

Married Marie Coleman of This City March 19; Judge Holds Decree of Feb. 4 Fraudulent.

FORT WORTH, Tex., April 4.—Divorce of Lee Campbell, ranch foreman, from Maude Campbell, on Feb. 4, was set aside by court order yesterday. Campbell, March 19, married Marie Coleman, who came to Fort Worth from St. Louis for the ceremony. Campbell's age was stated to be about 32. His second wife has returned to St. Louis, according to county officials.

Mrs. Maude Campbell testified today she did not know she was signing a divorce waiver when her husband presented it to her, and that she thought it was a release to her claim to the community property. It was on this ground that the divorce was set aside. Campbell, who explained he wished to do the right thing, testified he told his wife the waiver was his release for the divorce.

The court's action leaves him with two wives, one here and one in St. Louis.

JAPANESE COMMITS HARI KARI

Wealthy Aged Farmer Kills Self Because of Age Controversy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOKIO, April 4.—Kipu Tajima, a wealthy farmer believed himself to be only 89 years old while the records showed he was 91. On May 10, when the Emperor of Japan celebrates his silver wedding all non-agenarians in the empire will receive medals. Tajima, convinced that the records were wrong and that he would be unable to change them today, dressed himself in his uniform, and committed hari kari before the decorated photograph of the Emperor and Empress, using the ancestral sword of his family.

He left a note saying his act was committed rather than deceive the Emperor.

BOTH SIDES IN MAYORALTY RACE CLAIMING VICTORY

Plurality of 25,000 to 35,000 for Igoe and 20,000 for Miller Predicted in Election Forecasts.

The headquarters of William L. Igoe, Democratic nominee for Mayor, and Victor J. Miller, Republican nominee, each expressed confidence that their candidate would be the next Mayor in forecasts last night on the municipal election to be held Tuesday.

Igoe's managers placed his plurality at 25,000 to 35,000 votes in their forecasts. L. J. Becker, chairman of the Republican city committee said that Miller would win by 20,000 and Robert J. Kratky, Miller's campaign manager, that the Republican nominee would receive 140,000 votes. Becker estimated that Miller would receive 130,000 votes. Kratky made estimate as to Miller's plurality.

Vote of 225,000 Likely.

The sole disinterested voice in evidence was that of Harry C. Wilson, election commissioner, whose interest lies in an honest election. He estimated that 225,000 votes would be cast and said that the total might even go 15,000 beyond that. He said that approximately 80 per cent of the registered voters would vote. The total registration is 298,095.

W. Frank Carter, chairman of the Igoe Campaign Committee, has not been in active touch with headquarters because of an operation from which he is recovering. However, a statement from O. W. Hammer, vice chairman, placed Igoe's plurality at 25,000 to 35,000 votes.

William H. Hughes, general secretary of the Igoe committee, said Igoe's plurality would be not than 25,000. He said reports from South St. Louis indicated that Igoe was showing great strength in South Side wards. He estimated that in the wards comprising the Eleventh Congressional District, which Igoe represented in Congress for eight years, his plurality would be 15,000.

What Women Leaders Say.

The women's division of the Democratic headquarters, through Mrs. Nat Brown, chairman, and Mrs. Fred A. Reid, vice chairman, predicted his victory. Mrs. Brown estimated that he would win from 25,000 to 35,000. She said that he would get a material vote from women.

Mrs. Louis J. Brooks, chairman of the women's division of the Miller campaign, said he would win by an overwhelming majority and would receive 75 per cent of the votes cast by women.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Attention the call of domestic conditions, ich demand "A consecration of art and mind second only to at which built the Republic it-lf" with the part America shall ay in international affairs a atter of debate and determinable the future alone, was the plea oiced by Senator William E. rah of Idaho, chairman of the nate Foreign Relations Committe, before the Izaak Walton ague of America here tonight.

"I do not think it any part of duty, either to ourselves or to anity in general, to discriminate against our own citizens or impair our own institutions der the delusion that we are by doing serving the cause of the ace," he said.

"The men who organized this public, who have built here a tion of commanding influence d power, were intense nationals. "Super-Rogue" in Court

GERALD CHAPMAN

Sketched in Connecticut courtroom, where he yesterday heard sentence of death pronounced.

E 25 IS FIXED AS DATE CHAPMAN DIES ON GALLOWS

y of Henry Heller, young facworker. Heller, a roundman with a pugnacious jaw horn shell glasses, told that he waited for a trolley car the New Britain departstore that Sunday morning he a shot and saw Chapman . The defense had hoped 's testimony would not be eriously because he told though Chapman circles him with a gun in his Heller's wife was so ind in a tray of rings in the window she did not even come out. Heller was very positive it had been Chapman he saw.

Chapman returned to the cellar lockup after his conviction, was looking out the single window, smoking a cigarette, when Groehl, his lawyer, came down. Groehl held out his hand. "I'm sorry, Chappie," he said.

"That's all right, Judge," was the reply. "You did the best you could."

Calls Jury "Prejudiced."

An hour later Chapman was brought up again to face sentence. There seemed a swagger in his step which had not been there before. Groehl whispered to him and then gave out the following statement as having come from Chapman: "It's what I expected. The men on that jury were prejudiced before they went into the box. The public had made me a super-bandit. They didn't convict the accused. They convicted a man named Chapman."

And again later: "I had to combat the ambitions of the State's Attorney, the wealth of the Sheans and the prejudice of the public mind, due to the word pictures of Gerald Chapman which the jury was trying in this case, rather than the accused. It was a suer-man which the newspapers exploited who was convicted."

The hanging device is unusaal in this State. The victim is not sprung through a trap. He will enter dressed in black from his neck to his black felt slippers. He will stand on an almost invisible spot on the floor which releases a weight in another part of the building. With the black hood and noose over his head and his arms strapped to his sides, he will be suddenly jerked 20 feet in the air, as the weight, far away, drops into a well. His body then will drop back to within six inches of where he just stood and he will hang by the neck until he is dead. It will require only 12 seconds.

Attorney Groehl said: "Of course we'll appeal. The jury was prejudiced. They convicted the wrong man. I'm sure of it."

Chapman Led Robbers in $2,400,000 Mail Truck Holdup.

Gerald Chapman, often called a modern Jesse James, first gained notoriety in his daring leadership of the sensational $2,400,000 holdup of a Government mail truck on Broadway, New York, in October, 1921.

Chapman and his band had watched the downtown postoffice for weeks. Learning of a rich shipment of registered mail, they followed the selected mail truck in an automobile when it started to the general postoffice uptown, just before daybreak. Drawing alongside, they crowded the truck to the curb. With both vehicles still moving, Chapman boarded the Government van and covered the driver with a pistol. Then the robbers turned the truck into Leonard street and removed its wealth of cash and securities at their leisure.

Chapman was caught a few months later in fashionable Gramercy Park, where he was found living in a luxurious apartment.

During his subsequent grilling on an upper floor of the Federal Building, he suddenly disappeared through an open window while his captors' backs were turned. He was cornered after crawling along a narrow ledge, high above Broadway.

Escaped After Conviction.

Chapman and George R. (Dutch) Anderson, an accomplice, were sentenced for the mail robbery in August, 1922, both receiving 25-year terms in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. Both afterward escaped. Anderson has never been caught.

Chapman made his own first successful dash in March, 1923. He was recaptured two days later, bleeding from various wounds, and placed in a hospital in Athens, Ga.

Within a month, and still in the care of surgeons, he escaped mysteriously a second time. For months he eluded a nation-wide search in which some of the best man-trackers in the country took his trail. Various crimes, which apparently could not be otherwise explained, were attributed to him. Almost invariably, however, they proved to have been done by some one else.

GLENDALE AND ITS 3D WARD PART COMPANY

Vote for Separation Is Overwhelming—Bond Issue Defeat Led to Move.

The population of the village of Glendale, which lies midway between Kirkwood and Webster Groves, in St. Louis County, is today approximately 1150. Yesterday it was 1500. Today it has about 200 homes. Yesterday it had 260.

There was a special election yesterday and Glendale's Third Ward, with approximately 350 residents and some 60 scattered residences, is no more a part of Glendale. The vote was overwhelming—145 to 60. The Third Ward voted almost as enthusiastically to get out, as the First and Second Wards, where the movement started, voted to oust the Third Ward.

Opposed Bond Issue.

In some circles, it is thought that the Third Ward should consider itself duly and fittingly punished for its recent opposition to a propoesd bond issue for waterworks improvements. In other circles, particularly what was the Third Ward, the opinion is that the Third Ward is just as well off. At any rate, the Third Ward will not vote in Glendale's election Tuesday, when a Mayor and Aldermen will be elected. But the Third Ward apparently cares little, for it has not even bothered to name an aldermanic candidate.

The history of the Third Ward dates back but 18 months. At that time Glendale's old Second Ward, feeling that it had outgrown Glendale, voted itself out and became Oakland, Mo. The city fathers of Glendale, to bolster up its slipping population, voted in the territory which comprised the Third ward.

Laid to Third Ward.

March 14 last there was a special election to vote $60,000 in bonds for water mains and fireplugs. It was defeated by a narrow margin and the blame laid at the Third Ward's door. Mayor E. A. Holscher, candidate for re-election and champion of progress promoted the election to oust the Third Ward.

Holscher's opponent, O. K. White, declared last night that the special election was a political expedient to cinch Holscher's election because his (White's) support lay mainly in the Third Ward. This Holscher denies.

EX-LEADER OF K. K. K. HELD ON WOMAN'S CHARGE

Victim Attempted Suicide After Alleged Assault on Train Where, It Is Said, She Was Taken by Force.

SLIGHT CHANCE OF HER RECOVERY

Suspect to Be Arraigned on Five Indictments at Indianapolis — Two Other Men Sought.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 4.—D. C. Stephenson of Indianapolis, formerly known as "the old man" of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, will be arraigned in Criminal Court here Monday on five indictments charging him with assault and battery, kidnaping and intent to kill Miss Madge Oberholtzer, 28 years old, of this city.

Stephenson today employed a leading Indiana criminal attorney to defend him. He refuses to discuss his case publicly. His arrest and the alleged charges in connection with Miss Oberholtzer have created a sensation throughout Indiana.

Miss Oberholtzer's life still hangs in a balance. Dr. John K. Kinsbury, her phyhician, has resorted to blood transfusion. Whether this will save her will be in doubt until tomorrow.

Earl Klenke, a former Deputy Sheriff, and Earl Gentry, formerly of Evansville, indicted with Stephenson on the charge of conspiracy to kidnap Miss Oberholtzer, were still at large this afternoon.

Victim Makes Statement.

William Remy, State's Attorney, has obtained a statement from Miss Oberholtzer regarding the alleged assault, which is said to have been made the night of March 16 in a Pullman car attached to a Monon train from Indianapolis to Chicago.

Miss Oberholtzer is said to have taken bichloride of mercury at Hammond after she is said to have left the train there with Stephenson, Gentry and Klenk.

Miss Oberholtzer is said to have met Stephenson during the recent session of the Indiana legislature, when she was interested in the enactment of educational measures. Members of her family say that Stephenson called at their home the night of March 15 or 16, leaving an urgent message for her to come that night to his home in Irvingston. The girl is alleged to have gone to the Stephenson house without a hat and to have been forced to drink something soon after her arrival. That night, according to the family, she was taken aboard the train for Chicago. The indictments grow out of alleged attacks Stephenson made on her in the train that night.

Ousted From Klan.

Klan leaders continue the issuance of statements that Stephenson is not a member of their order and that he was banished from it with complete ostracism last year.

Stephenson is said to have married Miss Nettie Hamilton of Hugo, Okla., in 1915. Following a divorce, Stephenson is said to have married Violet M. Carroll at Akron, O., in 1920 and moved to Evansville. She was granted a divorce on grounds of neglect and extreme cruelty Feb. 28, 1924, in Summit County, O., it is said.

Mrs. Nettie Stephenson-Brehm, of Polean, Ok., who said she was Stephenson's first wife, filed a suit here March 18 asking $16,795 damages. She charged Stephenson had failed to support her or her child, Catherine Stephenson, 8 years old. The suit alleged Stephenson deserted her seven months after they were married. She said she was granted a divorce in 1917 in Oklahoma and afterwards remarried.

GIRL, 14, IS INJURED WHEN RUN DOWN BY AN AUTOMOBILE

Margaret Fox, 14-year-old daughter of Mrs. Marie Fox, of 513 North Whittier street, suffered lacerations of the scalp and possible skull fracture yesterday afternoon when she was struck by an automobile driven by Ernest F. Bugbee, a salesman, 4561 Laclede avenue, on Riverview drive. Bugbee escaped injury in a plunge over an eight-foot embankment when he lost control of the car after hitting the girl. He is being held for careless driving.

Three young girls were walking down the center of the road and attempted to gain the roadside when they heard the warning of Bugbee's horn. Two of the girls jumped to one side while one ran to the opposite side. In attempting to swerve his car to miss them Bugbee struck Margaret. She was taken to her home.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 4.—Kenneth Wilthire of North Cambridge, 19 years old, was convicted today of having written threatening letters with intent to extort money from Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet, and three other women residents of this city. A reformatory sentence of one year was suspended.

BILL TO HASTEN TRIALS OF BANK LOOTERS PASSED

Makes It Mandatory for Finance Commissioner to Turn Over Evidence of Criminality at Once.

MEASURE AWAITS BAKER'S SIGNATURE

It Would Have the Effect of Compelling Prosecuting Attorneys to Take Early Action.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 4.—A bill intended to hasten prosecutions of bank officials or other persons criminally responsible for bank failures, has been passed by both Houses of the Legislature and is in the hands of the Governor for his signature.

Representative Lon S. Haymes of Sringfield introduced the bill in the House. It makes it mandatory for the State Finance Commissioner, upon taking over any bank, to place before the Prosecuting Attorney of the county in which the bank is situated immediately all information and evidence showing, or tending to show, any violations of the criminal laws by any officer, director or employe of the bank.

The purpose of this bill, it was stated, is to eliminate delays that have resulted in some instances before information of any irregularities in a closed bank was placed in the hands of the Prosecuting Attorney. It was pointed out that this bill also would compel prosecuting attorneys to take early action, as he could not postpone an inquiry on the ground information of the condition of the bank was not available to him.

The present law contains no direct requirement upon the Finance Commissioner to place all information of the condition of a closed bank before the Prosecuting Attorney, it was said.

TWO ST. LOUISANS HELD AFTER MAIL CAR ROBBERY

Theft Occurred on Detroit-Chicago Train—Value of Loot Not Determined.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, April 4.—Four men were arrested today and are being held for Federal authorities in connection with the robbery of the mail car of the Detroit-Chicago train at Decatur, Mich., early yesterday. They are John Collins, alias "Fear Not" of St. Louis; Frank Casey, also of St. Louis, Dan Cherry of Toledo, and Gene McMahon of Chicago. Six bags of mail in the mail car of the Detroit-Chicago train were stolen from the car at Decatur when the train stopped to take on passengers. The theft was not noticed until after the train had started. The value of the mail has not been determined.

Police here are of the opinion John Collins, arrested in Detroit, is a former well-known pickpocket and ex-convict of this city, who left St. Louis in February, 1910, following the revocation of a parole.

At the time, Collins, then charged with pocket picking, accepted a plea and took two years in the penitentiary. He was paroled immediately, disappeared, and was not seen again in St. Louis. The circuit attorney's office, then under the incumbency of Seebert G. Jones, explained a pa role was recommended by his office for Collins with the view of having it revoked if he committed another crime, and that his plea of guilty was accepted under these terms.

MASONS GIVE K. OF C. EMBLEM

Illinois University Students Honor Priest at Banquet.

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., April 4. — Acacia, a Masonic fraternity of University students and faculty members, presented a gold Knights of Columbus emblem to the Rev. Father John A. O'Brien, Ph. D., chaplain to the Catholic students at the University of Illinois, today, at a banquet at which the Rev. Father O'Brien was the guest of honor. Among the Acacia members participating in the ceremony was the Rev. Dr. J. C. Baker, a Methodist minister. In presenting the Knights of Columbus emblem to Father O'Brien, John Wendell, a senior, said:

"In these days of racial prejudice and religious rancor, we deem it an event of unusual and far reaching significance as an organization composed entirely of Masons to bestow a Knights of Columbus emblem upon a Catholic priest in recognition of the great services he has rendered in breaking down the barriers reared upon misunderstanding and in fostering the splendid spirit of harmony and good will between Catholics and Protestants and people of all creeds, that prevails at the University of Illinois. We look upon this occurrence as heralding the dawn of a new day of religion and racial tolerance among the citizens of America."

Former Preacher Off On His Third Elopement, This Time With Brother's Wife

W. W. Culp of South Bend, Ind., Deserts 10 Children — Ran Off Two Years Ago With 18-Year-Old Choir Leader.

By the Associated Press.

XENIA, O., April 4.—W. W. Culp, 40 years old, of South Bend, Ind., former pastor of the M. E. Church at Spring Valley, whose sensational elopement with his 18-year-old choir leader created a furore in Ohio, two years ago, has eloped with his sister-in-law, according to word received here today by Probate Judge S. C. Wright.

Culp is said to have eloped a week ago for the second time with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy Culp, 22, wife of his brother, Clio Culp, 27, of Nappannee, Ind. William E. Miller, Chief Probation Officer of St. Joseph County, Ind., has notified Judge Wright of the new escapade in the life of the one-time minister.

Acquainted Three Weeks.

Culp is said to have become enamored of his sister-in-law when she and her husband visited the Culps in South Bend. Three weeks after the visit, Culp, deserted his wife and 10 children, one having been born to them since his Greene County affair, and disappeared according to Judge Wright. The girl disappeared simultaneously from her home in Nappannee.

Both returned to their homes a week later and were received when they expressed penitence. Culp said his sister-in-law reminded him of the girl with whom he eloped the first time. They admitted they had gone to Chicago and obtained employment but that they were sorry for the misdeed. They remained at their homes a week and then, a week ago, both disappeared again. This time they took all their clothes and personal belongings. The woman deserted her husband and two children when she left home.

Escaped Punishment.

Judge Wright advised South Bend authorities that in the event Culp is captured he should be prosecuted on the new charges there, although the case against him here has never been settled.

Two years ago Culp left his wife with nine children when he eloped with the choir singer who was making her home with the Culp family. They were located in Michigan after several weeks' search.

The girl was released to her parents, but Culp was charged with desertion here and was fined $500 and costs and sentenced to a year in the Dayton workhouse. He served only a few days of his sentence when he was released on a technical error in the commitment papers.

With his wife and children he went to Nappannee, Ind., where he obtained employment in a cabinet factory. Later he moved the family to South Bend.

MAN ARRESTED HERE AS MEMBER OF BIG TICKET SWINDLE RING

C. A. building in the neighborhood of the Pennsylvania station.

Postoffice box 216 was used by the ring, the inquiry has shown, and stamped envelopes, addressed to that box number, were furnished to the conductors before they went out on their runs.

On receipt of a bunch of railroad tickets from a conductor, the scalpers in the ring would make haste to sell the tickets to outgoing travelers, as the time limit on tickets is short.

In cases where no sale was made within the time limit, the scalpers were frequently so bold as to present tickets at the general passenger office of the railroad issuing them, with a claim for a refund. These claims are said to have been paid in a number of cases.

While most of the conductors named in the indictment are those of the Pullman Co., it has not been learned whether it was possible for the Pullman conductors to carry on the business of the ring without connivance with the train conductors. The Pullman conductors collect railroad tickets from Pullman passengers, but train conductors are supposed to keep themselves informed on the number of Pullman car passengers, and to get railroad tickets for them all from the Pullman conductors.

Letter Signed With Number.

Correspondence between the conductors and the New York ticket scalpers was included in the evidence placed before the New York grand jury. One such letter, sent to Postoffice Box 216, and addressed to one of the scalpers not thus far indicted, was signed with a number, 50, indicating that the conductors cennected with the ring were known by number and not by name. The letter read:

> Jack: When you send return, do not mention anything about tickets, in case any of the folks should open my mail. Just look this bunch of roses over. I go out on 121, at 1:10 p. m. Thursday. No. 50.

Other letters show that some of the conductors spent their receipts from the ring's operations in "good times" in New York. One wrote: "Prepare for a big party when I get in. Tell all the girls."

Another, writing from Jacksonville, Fla., said:

"I have made the acquaintance of the world's greatest shimmy shaker. Tell everybody to get ready for a big party."

Several letters from Wertz addressed to E. G. Bird at the lockbox of the "ring" in New York are set out in the indictment. The letters were written in Jacksonville, Fla., and mention the fact that Wertz was acting as agent for the scalpers in the South.

In one letter the Pullman conductor complained that as agent he was receiving many complaints because of the slowness of the scalpers in making cash remittances and to stop the "hollering" was paying the amounts due the various conductors with whom he was dealing out of his own pocket. "The pocket is getting empty, though," he wrote, "so hurry up with the cash."

One letter said "inclosed you will find some that are pinned together that have been cancelled to Savannah, so look out for them." Another said, "inclosed find a bit for you. I am going to St. Louis and will be back Monday on train No. 20, due in at 1:55 p. m."

Railroad ticket scalping has been an illegal business for several years, but, as stated, the indictments in the present case are based on the use of the mails by the alleged conspirators. The penalty for using the mails to defraud, on conviction, is five years' imprisonment and $1000 fine on each count and for conspiracy to use the mails to defraud, two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, or both.

Kansas City Prisoner Was Enjoined in 1920.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 4.—Ross Frazier, who was arrested here today on orders from New York in connection with a ticket-scalping fraud case there, was enjoined in Federal Court here in 1920 from operating his ticket-selling scheme. He pleaded not guilty today before a United States Commissioner and gave $5000 bail.

EFFORT TO BRING HINDENBURG OUT AGAINST MARX

Conservative Bourgeois Bloc Fails to Agree on Candidate for German Presidency.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 4.—After conferring all day upon the question of retaining Dr. Karl Jarres as candidate for the German presidency, the national conservative bourgeois bloc failed to reach an agreement, and announced further conferences were necessary before a definite proclamation could be issued to the voters.

Meanwhile the conservatives adopted a resolution expressing their determination to oppose the Weimar coalition of centrist, democratic and social democratic parties, whose candidate is Dr. Wilhelm Marx, the ex-Chancellor.

That the coalition's opposition is badly demoralized is indicated by the hectic attempt made today to induce Field Marshal Hindenburg to come forward as a standard bearer in the election of April 26, in the fear Dr. Karl Jarres cannot defeat Marx. The opponents of the Republican parties announced that their definite platform and the name of their candidate would be made known next Wednesday.

The Reichstag and Prussian diet adjourned today until April 28.

JOHN D. DODGE'S SUIT THREATENS TO BLOCK BIG DEAL

Son of John F. Dodge Contends He Is Heir-at-Law of Half-Sister Who Died Last Year.

WILL GAVE HIM ONLY $150 A MONTH

Secret Marriage Before He Was 21 Caused Breach With Father That Went Unhealed.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, April 4.—A legal fight revolving around the estate of a deceased child threatens to prevent or delay consummation of the sale of Dodge Brothers, Inc., to Dillon, Read & Co., New York bankers.

John Duval Dodge, cut off with a $150 monthly allowance under the will of his father, John F. Dodge, founder with Horace E. Dodge of Dodge Brothers, Inc., today filed in Circuit Court here a bill of complaint seeking to enjoin his stepmother, Mrs. Matilda E. Dodge, from disposing of any part of the estate of Anna Margaret Dodge, her 4-year-old daughter, who died last April. Part of this estate, young Dodge's bill avers, is a one-eighteenth interest in Dodge Brothers, Inc.

Plaintiff's Contention.

John Duval Dodge contends in his action that he is an heir-at-law of his dead half sister and as such is entitled to share in the division of her estate, which he estimates as worth $12,500,000.

In his action today Dodge asked for a temporary and permanent injunction to restrain Mrs. Matilda Dodge from disposing of any part of the Anna Margaret Dodge estate without the approval of the Wayne County Probate Court and without the consent of the heirs.

Circuit Judge Dingeman denied the prayer for a temporary injunction but ordered that Mrs. Dodge appear in court next Wednesday to show cause why such an injunction should not be issued.

The secret marriage of John Duval Dodge to Marie Ann O'Connor, in Pontiac, Mich. in the spring of 1918, was the signal for an open breach between young Dodge, then under 21 years of age, and his father, half owner of Dodge Brothers, Inc.

This breach remained open until the father's death in 1920 and resulted in John Duval Dodge being cut off under his father's will with an allowance of $150 a month. It had its rebound today in John Duval Dodge's commencement of an action to get a portion of his father's estate.

Got $1,600,000 Settlement.

The department of young Dodge during his adolescent years was said to have led to the open break that finaly came. Following his marriage, John Duval Dodge and his young bride, barely 18 years old, went to El Paso, Tex., where Dodge worked for 13 months as a mechanic in a garage.

Following the reading of his father's will, young Dodge filed notice he would appeal from the probating of the testament. Before the litigation got under way, however, the other Dodge heirs settled with him for $1,600,000.

1922 Bad Year for Him.

In 1922 there came a bad year for John Duval Dodge. In January of that year, a motor car he was driving ran down and injured a boy of 13, a $10,000 suit against Dodge resulting. This was settled last year for $200. Two months after this accident, Dodge was arrested for speeding but before the case went to trial, he was again arrested, this time in Kalamazoo, Mich., where he was charged with violation of the prohibition law for having liquor in his possession and also for driving while intoxicated.

A girl student at the Kalamazoo Normal School whom young Dodge had offered a lift in his automobile, was severely injured in the ride that led to Dodge's arrest when she leaped from the speeding car, her head striking the concrete pavement. Dodge was acquitted of driving while intoxicated but was convicted on the charge of violating the prohibition law and was fined $1000.

Served Five-Day Sentence.

While awaiting trial in Kalamazoo, however, Dodge returned to Detroit to face the speeding charge and was sentenced to serve five days in the Detroit House of Correction—a sentence he served with good grace, according to officials of the prison.

One of the outcomes of the Kalamazoo trial was that he was placed on probation for a year, a condition being that he find and keep employment in Detroit during the probationary period. Henry Ford acted as the young man's custodian.

Since the expiration of this probation, Dodge has kept clear of the courts excepting for minor civil suits.

Dodge and his wife now are living quietly at their home here where he has a pretentious laboratory in which he works on inventions for the automobile. They have one daughter, Mary Ann, born Feb. 5, 1924.

U. S. Fleet Spread Out Over Area of 30 Miles

Mightiest Concentration of American Ships Ever Seen in Pacific to Steam Into San Francisco Bay Today.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD U. S. S. SEATTLE, AT SEA, April 4.—The United States fleet, greatest concentration of American sea power to follow the lane once steered by Sir Francis Drake, will enter the Golden Gate between 9 and 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, weather conditions permitting. The battleships and scout cruisers will present an unusual spectacle of patriotic thrill when they launch their airplanes from the catapults on the decks of the men-of-war as they steam into San Francisco Bay.

The battleships, light cruisers and auxiliaries will anchor on man-of-war row, while the destroyers and submarines will take berths alongside the docks.

With the precision of a gigantic machine, the formation of more than a hundred splendid vessels of the American navy moved up the coast from San Diego and San Pedro, occupying a circular area of more than 30 miles. Several of the men-of-war left the cruising columns and darted out on engineering runs, the annual tests for engineer ratings that to the crews below decks who keep the battle craft in action have as much zest and afford as keen competition as those more spectacular gunnery exercises recently engaged in by the deck crews off Southern California's coast.

All these battle craft which left the fleet were under orders to return to the fleet formation before 5 o'clock tomorrow morning so that the fleet may make its entry through the Golden Gate in all its glory.

The armored cruiser Seattle, flying the blue four-starred flag of Admiral Robert E. Coontz, commander-in-chief, is the brain center of the vast concentration of sea power, moving up the coast. Rear Admiral A. C. Cole, chief of staff for Admiral Coontz, is the leader of the chiefs of departments who co-ordinated the movements and activities of this vast formation of vessels and who meet daily for a conference in the cabin of Admiral Cole. Strategy, plans and employment schedules are in the hands of Capt. Sinclair Gannon, assistant chief of staff.

BALANCE OF FORGED CHECK IN COAL PILE

Detectives Recover $82 After Locating Stolen Stamp in Cemetery—Salesman Held.

A coal pile in the home of Walter Graf, 4637 Rosa avenue, was shifted around by Detectives Kelly and Coakley of the bank detail yesterday before it yielded $82 in bills. They had been told by Graf they would find there the balance of a $275 forged check the prisoner admitted having cashed. Graf had tossed it onto the pile when the detectives entered his home Friday night to arrest him, but the coal had been shoveled since then and the money had slipped under the pile.

Graf was originally arrested after a check for $45 he had cashed with a saloon keeper bearing the forged signature of William J. Kennedy of the William J. Kennedy Stationery Co. had found its way back to the Kennedy company. The left corner of the check bore the rubber stamp of the Kennedy company, and Graf had represented it was a pay check, but made out to another name. Investigation at the Kennedy company revealed the stamp had been stolen from the shipping room. Suspicion was directed against Graf because he apparently had been "dodging" a member of the firm who had employed him and had disappeared when the detectives arrived.

After his arrest he led the detectives to the St. Marcus Cemetery, where he recovered the rubber stamp hidden behind a grave and turned it over to the detectives.

Yesterday the transaction of the $275 check came to light through William H. Bick, hardware dealer of 5825 Gravois avenue. Bick called the Kennedy company after he suspected the check. Graf had called at his store on Thursday and had picked out a washing machine, lawnmower and 100 feet of hose. The bills came to $179.45. He said he was a salesman for the Kennedy company, boasted of his "good salary" and asked Bick if he could cash his salary check.

Bick gave him $25 change and told him to return that evening for the rest. Graf returned and was given $70.55.

At that time he had said his name was "Hammer" and gave an address at 4725 Dahlia avenue, where he said his "wife" would receive the goods bought. When Bick sought to deliver the articles he learned no one was known by that name there and no one there had bought any washing machines or lawnmowers. He telephoned the Kennedy firm.

When Graf was arrested he had but 73 cents. Only a few hours had elapsed between his arrest and the time he received the cash from Bick, so the detectives yesterday questioned him as to what he had done with the money. He told of having darted into the cellar when he realized he was to be arrested, saying he had tossed $81 into the coal bin. The detectives recovered $82.

Graf is single and at the time of his arrest was at liberty on bonds on two other charges of passing worthless checks a year ago. He had been employed at the Kennedy company but two weeks.

Mussolini Takes Long Rides.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 4.—Premier Mussolini's condition is improving daily, those who have been watching him closely since his recent illness report. Not only did the long speech he delivered in the Senate Thursday not affect him adversely, but he is rapidly becoming stronger, it is declared, and is taking long excursions in his motor car to the parks in the suburbs and is a frequent visitor to the Zoological Gardens.

ONE MURDER OUT OF 22 IN MARCH IS LISTED UNSOLVED

Shooting of Fred W. Heuerman, 62, Dry Goods Merchant, Still Baffles Police.

With March a record month for murders—22 persons slain by violent means—the police have on their reports but one death which they class as unsolved.

This was the shooting of Fred W. Heuerman, 62 years old, a dry goods merchant, who was killed by a robber when he failed to obey promptly the command, "Stick 'em up," in his store at 3501 South Jefferson avenue, the morning of March 19.

25 Were Questioned.

Although more than 25 men have been questioned in this crime, all have been released for none fitted the detailed description given to detectives by Heuerman before he died the next day. After two weeks, the Homicide Bureau admits that nothing but an unexpected circumstance will bring about a solution.

Another March murder borders on the unsolved, although two people, a mand and his wife, are held pending grand jury action. This is the killing of Julius Krome, 39, of 3136 Vine Grove avenue, who was found fatally shot at the wheel of his automobile March 22. Krome said he was shot by a highwayman, but a friend named the couple who are held, stating that Krome feared them after being caught in a compromising position with the woman.

Two Slayers at Liberty.

March also leaves two murders in which the slayers are still at liberty. One is the stabbing of a negro woman who was fatally injured when she sought to stop a fight between two negro men, and the other is that of a negro man who was stabbed in a quarrel. Both slayers fled, leaving no clew to their whereabouts.

As a rule, each month leaves behind at least one automobile killing at the hands of a driver who fled from the scene. The March list, however, includes no unsolved autmobile death. Of four unsolved homicides each in Januray and February of this year, two in each month were automobile fatalities.

WOMAN GOVERNOR IN CLASH

Wyoming Executive Charges Game Official With Misconduct.

By the Associated Press.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 4.—Gov. Nellie T. Ross today took up the gage of battle for Wyoming's fishermen. Because of failure of the State Game and Fish Department to provide license application blanks for the opening of the fishing season, April 1, Gov. Ross today charged Commissioner Frank S. Smith with "misconduct and neglect of duty." April 11 was fixed as the date when Smith may be heard in his own defense. His removal from office is sought.

Gov. Ross also charged Smith with using "insulting, obscene and scandalous language" in a letter and that he has been "frequently" intoxicated.

ILLINOIS REAPPORTIONMENT REFERENDUM TO BE URGED

Down-State Men in Legislature to Make Another Fight to Curb Chicago's Influence.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 4.—A third fight on reapportionment of representation in the General Assembly is promised as the result of another move which Representative Lincoln J. Bancroft, Greenup, said will be made by the down-State men to limit Chicago's voice in the assembly for all time to come and insure down-State control. Bancroft said the new move will come in a week or two in the form of a resolution for a referendum vote on a constitutional amendment prescribing an entirely new system of apportionment.

Hopes of Democrats and anti-administration Republicans to bring about another vote on the subject of publishing State expenditures were given a jolt this week, when the Adcock bill, after having been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee, was re-referred to the Appropriations Committee because it carried an appropriation of $20,000 to pay for publication of the State's financial transactions. It is expected to die there. The administration went on record against such publication when it resisted a Democratic effort to amend the House rules to require such publication. The Appropriation Committee is packed with administration men and the Adcock bill is not expected to fare well at their hands.

FRIENDS THINK DAWES MAY SEEK PRESIDENCY

Gen. Pershing May Be Running Mate, Washington Rumor Says.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Vice President Charles Gates Dawes is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency in 1928, according to a rumor current among the Vice President's friends in Washington. According to the same authority, the Vice President is laying the groundwork for his candidacy in the speeches he will make this summer and his attack upon the rules of the Senate will be carried on with the expectation it will furnish him with an issue before the public.

Another part of the story is that Gen. John J. Pershing, if he can be induced to take second place, will be the Vice President's running mate on the proposed ticket.

Dawes and Pershing, it is pointed out, would enable its sponsors to capitalize the war records of both men.

Vice President Dawes and Gen. Pershing the same long-range political forecasters say, are close personal friends, and that if it should appear that Vice President Dawes could not land the Republican nomination he might switch his influence to Gen. Pershing.

A little juggling in residence is being done by the advance agents for Dawes and Pershing. While Vice President Dawes resides in Illinois, he was formerly a resident of Lincoln, Neb., which is the place which Gen. Pershing was assigned to when his Nebraska friends started a presidential boom for him a few years ago.

However, Gen. Pershing is a native of Missouri and for the purposes of the ticket, it is proposed to assign him to Missouri as a place of residence, thereby avoiding duplication of states.

All of these plans are predicated upon the assumption that President Coolidge will not be a candidate to succeed himself in 1928—and President Coolidge is preserving grim silence on that subject.

WOMAN SOUGHT IN SHEPHERD INQUIRY

Former Business Manager of Faiman's School Wanted as Inquest Witness.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Mrs. Luella Rheubell, formerly business manager of the National University of Sciences, operated by Charles C. Faiman, who was indicted with William D. Shepherd, for the alleged murder by typhoid innoculation of Shepherd's foster son, young William Nelson McClintock, "millionaire orphan," is being sought to testify before the re-opened Coroner's inquest into the youth's death, it was announced by Coroner Wolff tonight.

"We want to question her as to whether or not Faiman had any germ cultures at his school and to get from her a list of students in attendance there during the past year," the Coroner said.

Mrs. Rheubell is said by attorneys for Shepherd to have asserted that Faiman's school never had living typhoid cultures in his laboratory despite Faiman's confession that he had supplied the germs to Shepherd with instructions how to administer them, for a promised $100,000 to be paid him from the McClintock

OFFICIAL RECORD MADE PUBLIC IN GREENBERG CASE

Clemency Was Recommended by Atorney-General Palmer and Pardon Attorney Finch.

ARGUMENTS FOR AND AGAINST WERE GIVEN

Findings Resulting From Exhaustive Investigation Then Were Presented to Wilson.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Post-Dispatch is able to state with authority, after an examination of the official record, that in commuting the sentence of Max Greenberg, in September, 1920, President Wilson acted on the recommendation of the then Attorney-General, A. Mitchell Palmer, and of James A. Finch, then as now the Pardon Attorney of the Department of Justice, charged with passing upon all appeals for executive clemency.

Finch, the record shows, made an exhaustive investigation of the case and drew up a brief for the President, giving the arguments both for and against the granting of Greenberg's application. On Sept. 10, 1920, the file of papers relating to the Greenberg case went to the President from the Department of Justice with the indorsement of the Attorney-General written on their face.

"The Attorney-General," wrote Palmer, "recommends that the sentence be commuted to expire at once."

On the following day President Wilson wrote on the papers his approval of the Attorney-General's recommendation.

OFFICIAL RECORD MADE PUBLIC IN GREENBERG CASE

Clemency Was Recommended by Atorney-General Palmer and Pardon Attorney Finch.

ARGUMENTS FOR AND AGAINST WERE GIVEN

Findings Resulting From Exhaustive Investigation Then Were Presented to Wilson.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Post-Dispatch is able to state with authority, after an examination of the official record, that in commuting the sentence of Max Greenberg, in September, 1920, President Wilson acted on the recommendation of the then Attorney-General, A. Mitchell Palmer, and of James A. Finch, then as now the Pardon Attorney of the Department of Justice, charged with passing upon all appeals for executive clemency.

Finch, the record shows, made an exhaustive investigation of the case and drew up a brief for the President, giving the arguments both for and against the granting of Greenberg's application. On Sept. 10, 1920, the file of papers relating to the Greenberg case went to the President from the Department of Justice with the indorsement of the Attorney-General written on their face.

"The Attorney-General," wrote Palmer, "recommends that the sentence be commuted to expire at once."

On the following day President Wilson wrote on the papers his approval of the Attorney-General's recommendation.

Igoe's Action Not Unusual.

All the officials of the Department of Justice who know anything about the case are agreed—and the record shows—that there was nothing mysterious or even unusual in the action of William L. Igoe, then a Congressman from St. Louis and now Democratic candidate for Mayor, in writing to President Wilson on behalf of Greenberg.

Hardly a day passes when some Congressman does not write to the department or the President, or call upon one or the other in person, to present the appeal of a constituent for executive clemency. Igoe's letter to President Wilson about the Greenberg case was unusual only in the sense that it was much less ex-parte in character than are most such communications from Congressmen. It had, on the contrary, a somewhat judicial tone.

With the permission of former Congressman Igoe, the Department of Justice yesterday made public his letter to President Wilson in the Max Greenberg case. Written under date of Aug. 28, 1919, it follows:

"Mr. President:

'In the matter of the application for pardon filed by Max Greenberg and other defendants in the case of the United States vs. Greenber, et al., the defendant Grenberg, a resident of my district, asks me to request your personal consideration of his application.

"The Attorney-General, who has examined into the case very thoroughly, does not feel that a pardon should be granted. Although I have not seen the report, I understand that the pardon attorney, Mr. Finch, has recommended favorable action.

"Greenberg maintains that he is innocent of the charge on which he was convicted and since the sentence of five years will be enforced in a very few days, I hope his appeal for your personal consideration of the case may be granted.

"He contends that the witness upon whose testimony he was convicted in a subsequent statement before an agent of the Department of Justice and under examination by the District Attorney, explained his testimony at the trial so that innocence of Greenberg and the other defendants is clear.

"It is urged against Greenberg that he is a man of bad repute and has been arrested and indicted on numerous occasions.

"His answer to that is that on a charge of arson he has been twice tried and in each instance the jury failed to agree. On another indictment for larceny he was acquitted on a showing that at a time when he was alleged to be in St. Louis he was in fact in Chicago in conference with his attorneys in the case of United States vs. Greenberg.

"In still another case wherein he was charged with burglary the case was dismissed without trial and the special prosecutor admitted an injustice was done Greenberg.

"At no time, he says, has he been convicted except in the case now before you. Many times he was arrested, but he says no prosecutions were instituted on the charges and he ascribes this to the police practice of arresting on suspicion.

"If innocent of the crime as charged, he feels that he should receive a pardon and if any other crimes are charged against him that as to them he should have his day in court.

"I am also informed that the District Attorney, who, while he did not conduct the prosecution, was present during the trial, has also reported to the department that in his opinion the defendants were not guilty as charged.

"In view of the foregoing claims, I hope you will give the application careful consideration.

"Very Truly Yours,
"WILLIAM L. IGOE."

Whether or not Igoe's letter had weight with the late President is a question impossible to answer. But to say, in the face of the record that "Igoe got a pardon for Greenberg" is manifestly absurd.

Everything on file regarding the case shows that it followed the usual routine: it was examined by the pardon attorney who briefed the arguments pro and con; passed upon by the Attorney-General, and finally decided by the ultimate authority, the President, in accordance with the findings of the two subordinate officers.

If Igoe erred in seeking clemency for Greenberg, then Pardon Attorney Finch, Attorney-General Palmer and President Wilson all erred more grievously.

And if an error was made in freeing Greenberg, then President Coolidge also was at fault when he restored Greenberg to his full civil rights. This was done Nov. 2, 1923, on Greenberg's application. The President acted, according to Warren F. Martin, spokesman for the Department of Justice, on a sufficient showing that since his release from jail Greenberg had been steadily employed and had behaved himself satisfactorily.

In such cases, Martin explained, restoration of citizenship is "almost automatic" after the applicant has been at liberty for three years. Greenberg had been free for a little more than this period when President Coolidge approved his application.

The record shows that Greenberg and his co-defendants, Ben Milner, Ed Powers and William Hempling (all of whom received commutation of sentence on Palmer's recommendation at the same time), were tried in the Federal Court of the Eastern Illinois District on a charge of stealing from interstate freight shipments, were convicted, and on Sept. 19, 1917, were sentenced to five years. The case was carried to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Seventh Circuit, which affirmed the conviction at its April, 1918, session. In October of that year a petition for rehearing was denied.

Wilson Commuted Sentence.

The prisoners were received at Leavenworth on Sept. 23, 1917, but after a short time were released on bond. Greenberg got out on Oct. 22, 1917. He was returned to the penitentiary to begin serving his sentence on March 13, 1920, and was released by President Wilson's commutation order in the following September. With allowance for good behavior, his five-year sentence, if served, would have run to Oct. 15, 1923.

It is easy to take the record at the Department of Justice, present a part of the department's summing up of the case, and say that Igoe was not justified in seeking clemency for Greenberg or President Wilson in granting it. Apparently that is what has been done in St. Louis in an effort to make political capital against Igoe in his race for Mayor.

The department's digest of the case, on which President Wilson acted, contains first the arguments against clemency and then the arguments for it.

James G. Burnside, United States Attorney at the time that a pardon was applied for wrote that the defendants who lived in St. Louis went to East St. Louis and conspired with Gilbert C. Falls, a special railway officer, and Virgil L. Lechner and F. A. Snyder, switchmen, to break into cars in the East St. Louis yards and steal freight. In June, 1917, in pursuance of this conspiracy, Burnside continued, they broke into a number of cars and stole 64 cases of cigarettes, worth $41 a case. Burnside recommended against clemency.

The trial of the case for the Government was actually in charge of A. B. Dennis and McCauley Baird, assistants to the District Attorney.

Defended by Thomas Webb.

Baird made a point of the fact that the defendants were represented by Thomas Webb, whom he described as a highly able criminal lawyer, and were convicted in spite of Webb's best efforts. He said the defendants did not take the stand in their own behalf, and that consequently the jury knew nothing about their previous record—a record which, if known, might have created prejudice against them. Baird said he was satisfied of the defendants' guilt.

Dennis referred to the testimony of Gilbert C. Falls, who turned State's evidence. Though admitting that "Falls apparently wavered under pressure," Dennis expressed the opinion that the men were guilty as charged. He added that the contention of the defense appeared to rest not on the innocence of the accused men, but on some "fancied technical mistake," in the trial.

It was a matter for regret Dennis said, that the men had been able to call to their assistance "such an influential man as Hon. James A. Reed."

In a letter dated Jan. 6, 1919, United States Circuit Judge Samuel Alschuler wrote that according to his recollection of the case, the evidence for the Government was mainly, if not entirely, that of accomplices. He said that the jury was duly cautioned in regard to such evidence, but nevertheless found the men guilty. Nothing, he added, had come to his attention to impeach the verdict of the jury.

So much for one part of the record—the case against clemency.

Case for Clemency.

Another portion of the record, which seemingly has been omitted from the published attack on Igoe, deals with the matter from the other angle. In commuting the sentence of Greenberg and the others, President Wilson was doubtless moved by the belief that the testimony of Falls, who "apparently wavered under pressure," was not worthy of credence, especially as Falls, in a later statement, seems to have wavered still further.

A strong appeal for clemency was made by Charles A. Karch, who wrote to the department that as United States District Attorney at the time of the trial, he sat in the trial, but took no part in it. Karch, as quoted in the department's summary, said that "at the conclusion of the entire case there was a very strong doubt in his mind as to the actual guilt of the defendants, and that this doubt grew and worried him to such an extent that he requested the Department of Justice to make a thorough investigation."

This was done, Special Agent Rosen being detailed.

Karch said further, according to the record, "that at the instance of Rosen, Falls was brought to his office in East St. Louis and under questioning by Karch and Rosen, made a detailed statement of what he claimed were all the transactions in which he had a part."

Still quoting Karch, the synopsis says: "The question of doubt was then erased from his mind. And he was then convinced and now unhesitatingly says that the applicants had no guilty participation in the crime; that he feels there are elements present in the case requiring a most careful analysis by the pardoning authority, so that no irretrievable injustice may be done them, and to that end he joins in the appeal for clemency."

Ctrroll's Argument.

James E. Carroll of St. Louis, who had been an attorney for the defendants, presented an argument signed by the defendants, which, according to the department's summing up of the case, "very strongly sustains their claim of innocence."

Carroll was quoted as arguing that "the Government did not claim that the petitioners either actually or constructively took part in the breaking, entering, stealing or having in their possession the stolen goods." He said that the Government presented only very "meager" evidence to connect the defendants with the stealing.

"Whether the President, on the foregoing presentation of both sides of the case, made a mistake in granting the commutation is a question on which there may be a sincere difference of opinion. It is beyond question, however, that Igoe, in his capacity both as Congressman and citizen, had a perfect legal and moral right to call the attention of the President to the obvious element of doubt in the Greenberg case, entirely regardless of the man's previous record

It is the rule of the Department of Justice to treat as confidential all recommendations in pardon or commutation cases. Publication of the record in this instance is made possible by the fact that what appears to have been a garbled and one-sided version has been printed in another St. Louis newspaper, as political ammunition against Igoe. In fairness to Igoe, both sides are here presented.

Department of Justice officials denied again today that the previously published version emanated from the department. Spokesmen of the Attorney-General said they wanted it understood that the department was in no way entangled, and did not intend to become entangled, in any political contest in St. Louis or anywhere else.

THE WIRE-HAIRED TERRIER IS KING AT KENNEL SHOW

Airdale and German Police Dog Yield to New Social Rage and Not a Pug Is Entered.

ESKIMO SLEDGE DOGS WIN FAVOR

Five of Them That Have Seen Service on the Frozen Trails of Labrador Are on Exhibition.

The taste in dogs changes quite as much as it does in the width of trouser bottoms or the style in women's bathing suits. Consider the pug. You will have to consider it through your mind's eye as it is extremely difficult to find one to consider in the flesh. For pugs are a thing of the past; they went out with two cylinder motor cars and magic lanterns.

Theer isn't one pug on exhibition at the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show at the Coliseum. There hasn't been one pug on the bench at any dog show in the country this year. G. K. Blakely, superintendent of the show, is authority for it and Blakely says he attends about 60 contests a year.

Two of the most favorite breeds to follow the passe pugs were the airdale and the German police dog. They are still popular, but another dog is the latest thing. Meet the wire-haired terrier, for he is the swagger of the year. Just why the wire-haired dog is the social rage and just why he is called a wire-haired dog are two things which are not at all obvious. When someone tells you "This is a wire-haired terrier," you wonder why he is a wire-haired terrier. If you have great power of concentration and you look at him long enough, you begin to believe his coat does resemble wire. Thin strands of wire used to hang pictures.

"Something About Him."

But why is the wire-haired terrier "plus 4" in dogs? Even powers of concentration so great that they leave you to believe this dog's hair resembles wire will not lead you to believe he is handsome. He isn't. But neither was the pug. The answer seems to be that the wire hair has "something about him." You know he'll look good on the end of a chain. He's collegiate. He's "campus." Fur overcoats, made popular by the gentlemen attending institutions of higher learning are hardly beautiful. Their lines are something like a Mother Hubbard. But they have "something about them," or everybody thinks they have, which is quite as good, and wire-haired terriers are the same way.

But there is a breed of dog at the show that might push the wire hairs for popularity if there were more of them available. They are the five Eskimos belonging to Edward P. Clark of West Milan, N. H. Clark got them in Labrador, and they've been over the snow-clad trails. They're sledge dogs, and there's something of the frozen north about them. There is nothing flowery about their names. Beginning with the leader and proceeding through the wheeler they answer to Sitty, Rip, Yank, Ranger and Darky. They haven't show names and kennel, or real, names like the other dogs in the exhibition. They're not especially beautiful, but they radiate power. And their ears are chewed till they resemble saw edges.

When They Fight.

Clark tells a story about their tenacity. He was showing them in Detroit, when Rip and Darky had a disagreement. They went to it. Each dog got his hold, and proceeded to chew away on the other. Clark tried to stop them. So did everybody else. But no one succeeded. Finally Clark got out his leather and sealskin whip. He lashed Darky for two minutes. But it took that two minutes hiding to make Darky decide to stop. And then he and Rip wagged their tails at Clark, looked at each other, and decided to call it quits. Clark reports they've got along fine ever since.

Yesterday and Friday the beagles had their show, and the judge of the Beagle Club's special exhibition was not George Wollmershauser, master plumber, with a penchant for judging beagles, who after being elected judge by his club brethren last February, for this show, was rejected and Ed Bender of Wheaton, Ill., elected in his stead. Wollmershauser took it to court, and Circuit Judge Miller refused to grant an injunction keeping all judges out the field but Wollmershauser. Nevertheless, it is said that Wollmershauser found a seat at the very edge of the judging ring.

St. Louisans Win Honors.

When Wollmershauser was rejected, some of the club members opposed to him said he had been chosen first so a St. Louis beagle would be made champion. Of course everyone among the St. Louis beagles was willing for a native beagle to be declared champion, but they wanted an outsider to declare it. And Binder of Wheaton, named Lex Sir Kitchener, a St. Louis beagle, as the best of the breed. Technically, Lex isn't a St. Louisan, for he belongs to W. W. Leck of Webster Groves, and Webster Groves is in St. Louis County. But Leck is a Beagle Club member.

Another St. Louis dog to take several prizes was Frank Mommoney. Dr. A. C. Minges is his master, and the dog took three firsts and two specials among the setters. The Boston terrier "best of breed" honors also stayed here. "Who Knows Me" got it, so it may be assumed the terrier's question is answered. M. C. Thorpe owns him.

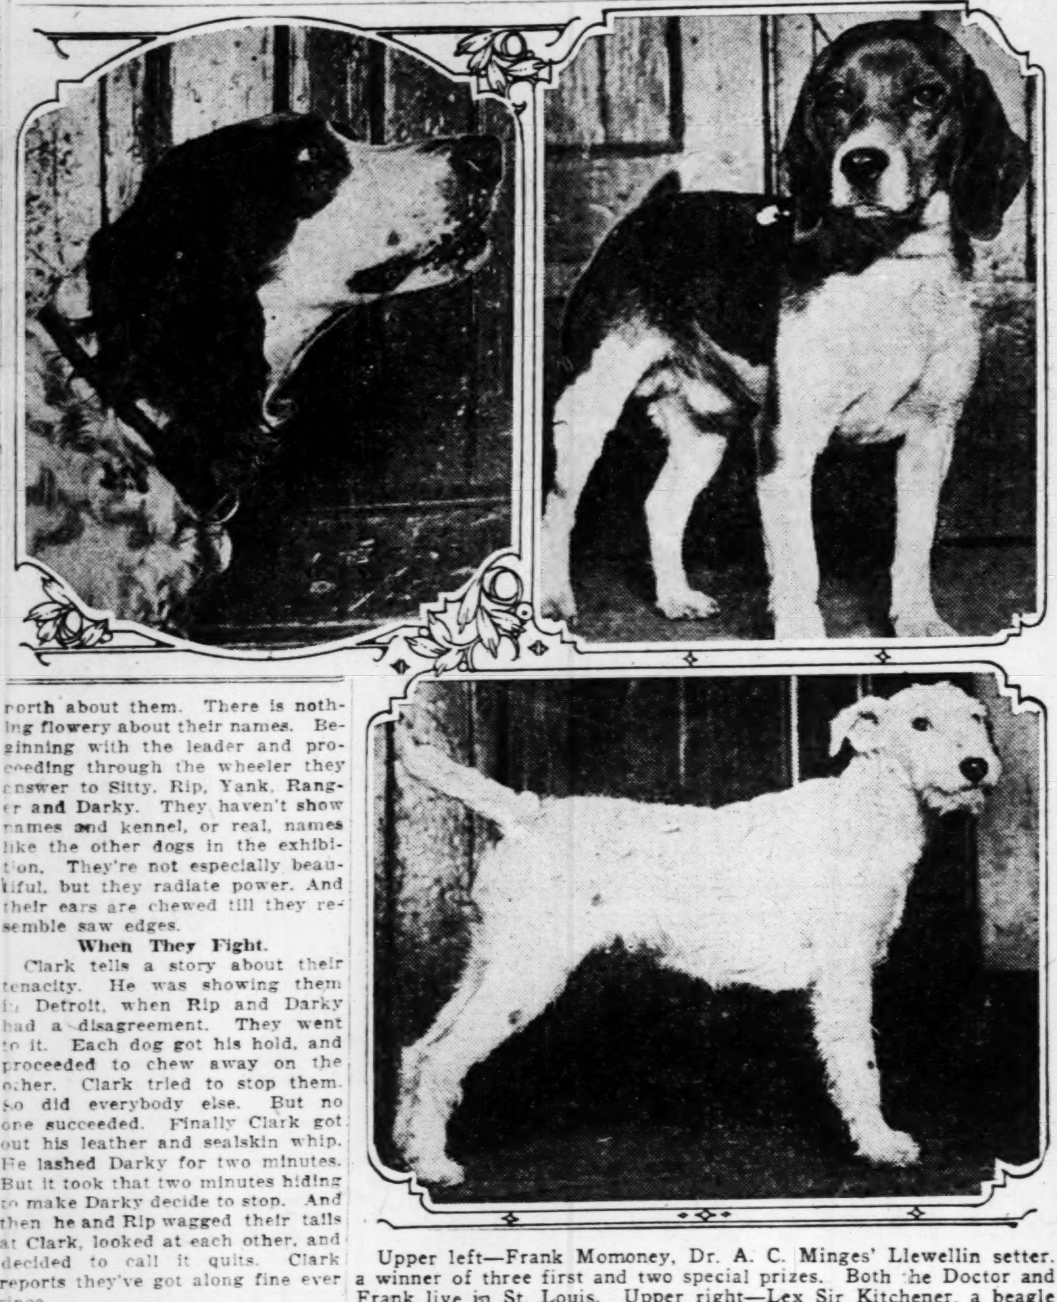
Two little dogs, Chihuahuas, tiny but equipped with excellent marking apparatus, have been attracting much attention. They are Jack and Jill, and their owner, F. G. Nicolay, who lives here, leads them about on a leash that branches off at the bottom, thus giving each dog a connection. Jack took the ribbon as the best male Chihuahua.

Show Ends Today.

Among the sporting dogs, C. A. Crawford's Dandy Jim, who came with his owner from Benton, Ill., took first in his class of puppies: English setters. Warland Footprint, an airdale, was declared the best of his breed. Gus Loures, St. Louis, owns him.

The final day of the show opens at 10 o'clock this morning and is over at 10 tonight. It is tonight the "best dog in the show" will be picked. And as always the German police dogs will scale the walls and go after men covered with pads and other protectors. And Clark's Eskimos will drag their sledge around the pen.

Prize Winners at St. Louis Dog Show



Upper left—Frank Momoney, Dr. A. C. Minges' Llewellin setter, a winner of three first and two special prizes. Both the Doctor and Frank live in St. Louis. Upper right—Lex Sir Kitchener, a beagle who was acclaimed the best of his breed. He is owned by W. W. Leck of Webster Groves. Below—The social rage among canines. A wire haired terrier, whose name is Fox Hurst Topsy and who belongs to Miss Ida Schaefer of St. Louis.

MORMON HEAD CONDEMNS DRINKERS OF TEA AND COFFEE

Also Says at Conference That Those Who Use Tobacco Are Unfit to Hold Office.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 4.—The reported drinking of tea and coffee and the use of tobacco by some officials of the Mormon church was condemned by President Heber J. Grant in his opening address to the ninety-fifth annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which opened here today.

"No man who uses tobacco is fit to hold office in the church," President Grand said. "Such a one cannot serve as an example for his people. They owe it to their manhood to cleanse themselves of this habit or step aside and make way for better men."

Smoking tobacco and drinking of tea and coffee is against the "word of wisdom," one of the churche's edicts.

ROBBERS RAID CLUB IN $20,000 HOLDUP

Forty Members of the Showmen's League Herded in Room by Six Men.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Forty members of the Showmen's League of America, meeting in their club rooms in the heart of the business district, were held up last night by six men, two of them armed with shotguns, and robbed of money and jewelry valued at $20,000.

So quietly the robbers worked they failed to attract attention from wives of the members, meeting on the floor below. They escaped after herding their victims into a small adjoining room and threatening them with death if they stirred for five minutes.

Fred M. Barnes, president of the league, had opened the meeting to discuss plans for the coming carnival and show season when the men entered. The members were lined up against the wall, several were called upon by name to step forward and be searched and a few were struck when they resisted. Leon A. Berezniak, attorney for the showmen, was struck on the head with a pistol and required medical attention. Most of the loot was diamond studs and stick pins, and sums of money ranging from $2 to $1500. Edward I. Newman, club treasurer, saved $460 of the league's money by tossing it behind a radiator.

As the men passed the women's meeting on their way upstairs one of the women endeavored to sell them tickets to a party.

"Wait a minute," the robber responded. "I'm going upstairs to get some money. I'll stop on the way down."

On the way out, one robber told another woman the meeting upstairs was over and the members would "be down in a minute."

FOUR ADMIT LIQUOR GRAFT

Two Cincinnati Policemen and Two Village Agents Plead Guilty.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., April 4.—Pleas of guilty were made in Federal court here today by two members of the Cincinnati police force and two agents of neighboring village "dry" courts, included in the list of 71 enforcement officers recently indicted by a Federal grand jury. The indictments followed an investigation into an alleged liquor graft ring. Sentence was deferred by United States District Judge Hickenlooper.

Attorneys for the four entered the pleas when Judge Hickenlooper opened the hearing of the technical objections to the indictments entered last Saturday by defense counsel for most of the indicted men.

MAN TALKS HIMSELF INTO LOT OF TROUBLE

Jenemora Chillllello Held for Inquiry After Telling Policeman of "Murder."

Jenemora Chillello, or Grandi as he first called himself, talked himself into a lot of trouble when he confided in a citizen at Fourteenth and Hickory streets the other day he was a bootlegger from Spokane, Wash., and had shot a policeman—even if that assertion wasn't the truth. The citizen happened to be Patrolman Mobrak on recreation, and Mobrak took Chillello to the station and locked him up.

"I was only kiddin' about Spokane," said Chillello then, but he was held just the same. He said he was hungry; wanted to get to Cincinnati and just made up the bootleg story to work on Mobrak's sympathy. That was three days ago. He has occupied a cell ever since.

Yesterday the police received a telegram from Chief of Police W. H. Turner of Spokane in reply to their letter inquiring about Chillello.

"Release Chillello as far as we are concerned," read the massage. "No officer shot here."

But in the meantime, word of Chillello's arrest had reached the United States Immigration office here. T. J. H. Nash, in charge, asked that Chillello be held for investigation into his presence in this country. Chillello has said he came here several years ago, spent part of the time at Spokane, and that his presence in this country is legal. That is to be investigated by the immigration office.

-and God made Holiday Land

SO that cool, clean, invigorating air may be breathed, God piled rock on rock to form mountain peaks and crests so high they stab the sky. That man might behold and marvel at His sublime artistry, He carved and fashioned cliff and crag and canyon into masterpieces of colossal statuary. In between, He put pleasant valleys filled with roaring torrents or quiet, limpid lakes, singing streams and murmuring brooks; to meet, with wondrous completeness, man's every divergent taste and desire.

Motor out to "Holiday Land" this year—through the quaint old cities and Indian pueblos of New Mexico; San Isabel and Grand Mesa National Forests, with their trout-filled streams and relics of the Cliff Dwellers; by the way of the Pikes Peak region and the Garden of the Gods, or the wonderful mountain parks and resorts near Denver—with good roads, good hotels and pleasant camping places all the way.

Whether you follow the Park-to-Park Highway through the Yellowstone, with its wild-life and geysers, and Glacier Park, to Bryce Canyon, Zion Canyon and Cedar Breaks near Salt Lake City; whether you visit Great Falls, Montana, "The Niagara of the West," and bathe and fish in the "Lake Country" of Idaho; or just pitch your tent in some nearer place, you will enjoy a splendid vacation, away from summer heat and discomforts.

Let us send you Blazed Trails before you start. Fill in and mail the coupon to us in Denver. Attendants at service stations and all dealers displaying the Conoco sign are prepared to meet your motoring needs with courteous service and good products. They are always pleased to supply local touring information. Look for the Conoco sign.

BACKERS OF RIVAL SCHOOL TICKETS IN FINAL DRIVE

Volunteer Workers of Two Organizations to Continue Their Activities Throughout Election Day

STATEMENTS ISSUED BY BOTH FACTIONS

14 Candidates in Field for Four Full Terms and Three Others Seek the Unexpired Term.

Volunteer workers of the two principal organizations supporting slates of Board of Education candidates will continue their activities up to the time the polls close Tuesday night.

Today and tomorrow they will continue urging voters to cast their ballots for the favored candidates, and Tuesday they will escort some voters to the polls and present "literature" to others outside the boundaries of the voting places.

The two organizations are the Citizens' School Board Committee and the Public School Patrons' Alliance. The committee has indorsed the candidacies of Mrs. Elias Michael, John C. Tobin, Ernest A. Green, Isaac Lippincott and Myrt Rollins, and the alliance has indorsed Henry P. Schroeder, Emil Barth, Robert H. Ballman, John Marsalek and Rollins, who is general president of the alliance and is seeking the unexpired term. There are 14 candidates for the four full terms of six years and three candidates for the unexpired term.

Auto and Phone Crusade.

An automobile and telephone crusade will be launched tomorrow by the Citizens' School Board Committee in behalf of its candidates. Many young women volunteers will be the workers, under the direction of Mrs. Irvin Bettmann. Volunteers not enlisted already are asked to report to Mrs. Bettmann at committee headquarters, 602 Chamber of Commerce Building, tomorrow.

The Public School Patrons' Alliance has issued the following statement:

"The alliance does not assume that the matter of selecting candidates for the Board of Education is a matter of concern to only members of their organization, as was stated by the chairman of a rival organization, and a statement of this kind can only serve one purpose—to try to put the alliance in the position of dictators on a question that is of the utmost concern of every thinking citizen.

"The alliance is an incorporation holding a state charter issued in 1898, and consists of some 70 branch associations, and through its membership represents approximately 50,000 fathers, mothers, principals, teachers and citizens, who are united for the sole purpose of advancing the many and varied interests of our public schools. For the past 27 years, by their untiring efforts and hearty co-operation these associations have accomplished much and lasting good for the advancement and well-being of our schools.

"Our contention is, that as a permanent body functioning for the betterment and welfare of the public school and the persons interested in them, with a long service record of accomplishments and the confidence of the public behind us, we are the logical authority to turn to when the question of candidacies for the Board of Education comes up and because our familiarity with the problems of the public school, an insight on these questions and close association with the functioning of the board, we are best able to judge just what requirements are necessary to make good members of the Board of Education.

"We are not an assembly hurriedly thrown together for the purpose of picking persons to place on the board, and, after this has been accomplished, to vanish as suddenly as it came, and only come back to life when there is another election. We have been doing much constructive work, defeating bad legislation and lending aid to that which is good for the school and its charges, as well as looking after the interest of the man who pays the bill, the taxpayer.

Advice Is Welcome.

"We at all times welcome the advice and assistance, and constructive criticism of any and all organizations interested in public school work, but before we can accept this advice, assistance or criticism the body giving it must have some record of activities in behalf of the public schools and manifest an interest other than the mere selecting of a slate that they would like to have put over in behalf of their particular choices for the School Board.

"The candidates indorsed by the alliance were not selected solely because of their affiliation with this body, but because of their insight on questions and problems that come before this body or the School Board, and each has been an active participant in his particular school district. They are men of the highest type and positions, successful in business and stand high in the communities in which they reside and all are in a position to give as much time as might be needed in their duties as members of the School Board. They favor open meetings of the board, appointment and promotions of teachers and principals solely on merit and without favoritism, and keeping the School Board out of politics."

In reply to this was the following statement of the Citizens' School Board Committee, through Chairman Samuel B. McPheeters:

"A kind of a rumor campaign has been in porgress for the past few days originating sometimes with friends of some of the candidates for the School Board, and sometimes from other sources, seeking to discredit the Citizens' School Board Committee in the eyes of voters. It has been charged that the committee's five candidates were selected by 30 men and women of the committee. This is not true. They were selected by ballot among the committee's 3000 members, following the sending out to the committee of the qualifications of all candidates known to be in the field. And it is a citizens' ticket, the committee being representative of all groups and every section of the city.

A Permanent Organization.

"Our Citizens' Committee, which is a permanent organization, is not only interested in keeping the School Board out of politics, but it desires, as do all good citizens, the election of the highest type of men and women, intelligent, experienced unselfish, for membership on the board. The candidates we have selected and offer to the consideration of every voter are of this type, worthy of the support of every citizen."

W. Frank Carter and Jesse McDonald, attorneys, who are former members of the Board of Education, have made statements in support of the candidacy of Richard Murphy for re-election to the board.

Rhodes E. Cave, an attorney and a retiring member of the board, has issued a statement in support of the re-election of Mrs. Michael, praising her activities and qualifications.

OSBORNE WOOD MAKES $357 FEE ON FIRST REALTY SALE

Gets Wire From His Father Giving Him Sympathetic and Paternal Advice.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TAMPA, Fla., April 4.—Two events today raised the spirits of Osborne C. Wood, who in his recent gay European career gambled away almost all of a Wall street fortune of $850,000. The first when he obtained a signature on the dotted line in his first real estate sale and a commission of $357. The second was receipt of a wire from his father, Gen. Leonard Wood, showing a sympathetic attitude and giving a bit of paternal advice.

When asked if his father had taken him to task, Wood said: "Indeed, no. He's pretty human. He advised me to be good and go to work and make good. And that's what I intend to do. He knows, I know, I've been a damn fool."

Wood said that he would forego his plans to play the stock market. "Perhaps I'll take a fling at it when I've made some money in real estate," he added, "but I'll never plunge heavily again."

HEAD OF ARMY AIR SERVICE HERE ON INSPECTION TOUR

Major-General Patrick Is Pleased With Progress on Non-Rigid Ship at Scott Field.

Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, has been here since Thursday night, largely for a routine inspection of Scott Field, the Army's chief lighter-than-air station, and of Lambert-St. Louis Field, the city's airport.

The General spent all day Friday at Scott Field, where he was particularly interested in the RS-1, the Army's first semi-rigid airship which is in process of assembly there. It is a big craft, much larger than the non-rigid ships which St. Louisans are accustomed to see. The head of the service expressed himself as being pleased with progress on the new ship.

Today the General will inspect Lambert-St. Louis Field, to see developments there since he last saw it at the national air meet in 1923. Gen. Patrick will go to the air service center at Dayton, O., tomorrow and then return to Washington.

MURDER TRIAL OF FOUR TO JURY

Men Are Charged With Killing Express Messenger.

By the Associated Press.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., April 4.—The fate of the four men charged with the murder of Russell S. Dickey, express messenger, in an attempted $110,000 express robbery on the Viking Express of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway last Dec. 30, went to the jury today, after a trial of three weeks.

The four defendants are Edward J. Smith, Milwaukee; Bernhardt Mylin, Milwaukee, alleged to have fired the shot which killed Dickey, and Ralph McKee and Bernard Smith, the latter a policeman, both Chicagoans. Murder, manslaughter or not guilty may be the verdict.

The State asked for hanging for all four defendants.

The start of De Pinedos' long flight will be made in May, it is expected. A 400-horsepower hydro-airplane will be used.

Mme. Easton as Gracious to Juvenile Audience as if Singing at Metropolitan.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

BRIGHTENING the brick-walled gymnasium at the Principia with a gown that would adorn a Sunday night concert at the Metropolitan, Mme. Florence Easton last night lavished as much graciousness upon an audience composed mostly of boys and girls in their 'teens as if she had been exerting all her sorceries upon the Golden Horseshoe.

The diva, a luminary of first magnitude at the Mertopolitan and one of the most illustrious of American cantatrices, began early to establish an itimate, big-sisterly relation with her hearers. Explaining Bruneau's "Pavane," she said that the name means "peacock," and signifies a slow, majestic dance. The story of Fourdrain's "celle que je prefere," she continued, is about a young man who is attracted by three young women, the first of them a Japanese, and who finally tells the first two they mustn't feel badly, because the third is the one he must marry.

Children Name Encores.

Next she called upon the children to pick their own encores from a list in the program, and after the first invitation they sang out their choices without waiting to be asked. These included such ditties as Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Song of India," Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me," "My Laddie, and "Annie Laurie."

Mme. Easton, in her formal numbers, paid her juvenile audience the compliment of supposing they had a more developed taste than John McCormack credits to his adult following. Thanks to their school training, the youngsters heard with every sign of enjoyment Mozarts aria, "Deh vieni, non tardar," from "Le Nozze de Figaro," Puccini's aria, "In quelle trine morbide,' from "Manon Lescaut," followed by the minuet; the two French songs mentioned above, three German lieder—Schumann's "Widmung," Schubert's "Auf dem Wasser zu Singen," and the "Zueignung" of Strauss; and Cyril Scott's "The "Unforeseen."

Singing of Intelligence.

The prima donna's interpretation was signalized by the intellectual brilliance for which she is famous, and then, in turn, by emotional fervor and vocal comeliness. The full splendor of the dramatic soprano at which we marveled a few years ago in the role of Santuzza at the Odeon was not unveiled until she reached a dynamic song called "Joy," by Wintter Watts. Occasionally the higher notes were shrill and slightly off pitch.

The accompanist, Miss Elinor Remick Warren, who began composing at the age of 5 and is now 21, gained favor both as a gifted pianist and as the composer of a singularly imaginative piano piece called "Frolic of the Elves," and of a poetic song entitled "Children of the Moon." It was announced that the course next year will begin with Louis Graveure and conclude with Giovanni Martinalli, leading tenor at the Metropolitan, who has never sung in St. Louis.

Monsignor Hogg also served as vicar-general of the diocese. He retired about nine years ago and had been living at St. Mary's Home, in St. Louis County. He became seriously ill last Tuesday.

SYMPHONY PLAYS AT MEMPHIS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 4.—The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra gave two performances at the Goodwin Institute here today that were musically perfect but drew just a handful of people. Many factors interfered to prevent a large attendance. The Beethoven Club, under whose auspices the St. Louis Symphony appeared, has been in the midst of a drive for members, with little time to give to a promotion of the symphony performances. There has been an excess of music for Memphis' music-going public. Whatever the audience lacked in number they made up in enthusiasm. The afternoon performance, for children, came at the end of a series of continued music memory contest articles for school children.

Miss Helen Traubel was the soloist at the two performances. The night concert was concluded with the ever popular Berlioz Rakoczy March. A concert will be given Sunday at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Brewery Found on Farm.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 4.—An ultra modern brewery, electrically operated, valued at $50,000, was found in operation on a farm a mile west of this city today by prohibition agents. Fifty barrels of beer were taken as evidence. The brewery, which neighboring farms had been led to believe was a refrigerating plant, manufactured beer during the day and deliveries were made at night, truck loads being shipped openly and without causing suspicion, the agents said.

HOUSE REJECTS CONFERENCE REPORT ON MOTOR BUS BILL

New Committee Named in Effort to Reach an Agreement on the McCawley Measure.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 4.—The McCawley bill to establish State control over motor bus lines operating in Missouri struck another snag tonight, when the House rejected the report of a conference committee which sought to compromise differences between the Senate and House over House amendments to the measure. Another conference committee will be appointed.

The Senate had rejected all the House amendments. The conference committee recommended dropping an amendment which would have excluded St. Louis and other cities from provisions of the bill. At the same time it recommended adoption of another amendment which would enable the cities to designate streets that could be used by the busses, and exercise police regulatory powers over the bus lines.

Strong opposition developed to a new amendment included in the conference committee report, which would enable steam railroad companies to substitute a bus line for a line of the railroad. Rural members declared this would enable the railroads to junk any of their branch or feeder lines and substitute busses.

Charges also were made that the bill, as revised by the committee, would enable the granting of monopolistic rights to bus companies, or street railway companies operating supplementary bus lines. Supporters declared the bill empowered the Public Service Commission to grant permits to as many competing bus lines as it desired.

The boy was last seen at 8 a. m., when he left home to walk to the Mount Pleasant School, a mile away. He was dressed in a brown coat, brown knee trousers, white sport shirt and black shoes and stockings.

'BROADWAY ANGEL' NOW HAPPILY MARRIED

Former Rheba Crawford Mistress of Spanish Mission Type Home in Florida.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 4.—Rheba Crawford, former "Angel of Broadway," who defied a New York policeman's efforts to dissuade her Salvation Army exhortations before an immense night crowd at Broadway and Forty-sixth street, has forsaken the metropolis.

Metropolitan headlines about two years ago brought national publicity to the girl, who, in the uniform of a captain of the Salvation Army, led the New York night crowd of the Rialto district in fervid hymns.

To the policeman who commanded that she desist from blocking traffic—for the crowd had assumed such proportion—Capt. Crawford issued determined defiance.

"Move on!" was the demand.

"I won't!" was the retort.

The menacing moments ensuing on the touch of the policeman's arm against the girl's shoulder brought another policeman to his aid. As they started toward the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station, the Salvation lass between the blue-coated stalwarts, the fair prisoner called back to her audience, "Keep on singing."

Those that remained obeyed. The many others followed to the station, a howling, enraged mob that demanded her release and became so strenuous in its vehement threats against the police that the latter were moved to draw their revolvers. At the station steps the policemen took it on the run toward the desk. The crowd surged in, yelling and protesting. The reserves rushed them out and threw back the mob outside. A dead line was established.

In West Fifty-fourth street Court next morning, George M. Cohan and a myriad other friends of the "Angel of Broadway" came to the girl's rescue. Magistrate Oberwages bitterly assailed the arrest, suggested that every street preacher be hailed into court if the police were to be logical.

It will be recalled that the Shuberts, the Selwyns and Sam H. Harris offered their theaters to the girl's meetings. Capt. Crawford, however, resigned her post and went to the home of her father, dean of the Salvation Army Training College in San Francisco. She spurned several lucrative motion picture offers. When she returned to New York in January, 1923, she conducted her own evangelistic meetings for eight months. In October of that year she went to St. Petersburg. She has been here since, happy as the wife of J. Harold Sommers, author and publisher, at their magnificent Spanish mission home at Shore Acres.

It had been her intention to be in St. Petersburg only on a brief vacation, then to return to New York. But she was introduced to Sommers and she changed her mind.

In St. Petersburg she engaged in evangelistic meetings. Here, too, her efforts were marked by stormy sessions for a time. St. Petersburg's fire regulations, she was informed by the authorities, demanded that her tent have an asbestos top. The alternative, she was warned, was discontinuance of her meetings.

As in New York, so in St. Petersburg. Irate thousands foregathered in behalf of the girl now become the "Angel of St. Petersburg." They marched indignantly to the city hall and demanded the order be rescinded. The order was rescinded.

Religion in Russia Only Partially Destroyed by the Communists' Propaganda

Youth Chiefly Affected by Atheism of Bolsheviki—Marriage Ceremony Abandoned and Funeral Customs Changed

By LOUIS FISCHER,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

MOSCOW, March 12.—A great deal has been said and written about the destruction of religion in soviet Russia. There is no doubt that the communists were bent on its uprooting; nevertheless, they have succeeded only very partially. It is only among the youth that a real impression was made by the athiest propaganda of the bolsheviki.

But in near-religious fields the coming of the bolsheviki has had a visible effect. Thus there are many couples in Russia which do not have a church wedding. They merely register with the civil authorities.

Such a thing would have been a startling wonder in prerevolutionary days. Likewise, numerous funerals now take place without the participation of a priest. Partly this is accounted for by the desire to economize, partly, however, by the antireligious spirit which makes itself felt in the Russia of today.

Funeral Customs Changed.

Funeral processions in Russia always used to be preceded by a member of the clergy bearing an ikon or a tremendous crucifix. On the bier were candles and a cross. Thus was the coffin borne through the streets. Now in many cases the priest is dispensed with. So also the candles and the cross. Sometimes in the place of the cross there is a soviet star. The driver, who walks beside his horses, is dressed in white and wears wide red ribbons bandolier fashion around his shoulders and about his waist.

Lenine's lay funeral, which hundreds of thousands saw with their own eyes and which millions saw in the movies, made a deep impression. It is not an uncommon thing for a Russian, especially of the new generation, to charge his parents on his deathbed to bury him "according to Lenine"—that is, without the intervention of the church.

Inroads, too, are being made into the custom of baptism and christening. Instead of being christened in a church, many babies are now brought to communist meetings or to workers' clubs, where they are wrapped in red and consecrated to the cause of bolshevism. This ceremony is called an "Octobrina," because the soviet revolution was participated on Oct. 25 (old style), 1917.

It is interesting also that at these Octobrinas the children receive new revolutionary names. A most popular name is Lenina for girls and Ninele, which is Lenine read backward, for boys. Others are called Revolutzia, Krasnaya (red), Svoboda (freedom), etc.

Jewish Communists and Moslem Communists are not permitted to have their sons circumcised. This is part of the party discipline of the Bolsheviki, but very often Mohammedans avoid it by arguing that their wives are not progressive and insist on the old religious custom. And because the Bolsheviki in all their antireligious campaigns have been more lenient with the fanatic followers of Islam, of whom there are millions in Russia, such excuses are generally accepted.

On the other hand, there have been cases where Jewish Communists were expelled from the party because they submitted their newborn to the ancient rite.

Speaking generally, it may be said that the antireligious efforts of the Communists have borne most fruit among the workingmen of the cities and least among the peasants of the villages. The character of church attendance in Moscow, for instance, has changed radically since the revolution. In 1914 the body of worshipers in any given church would have been a cross-section of the entire population, with the exception of the educated class, or intelligensia, which in Russia was always atheistically inclined. Now few workingmen attend.

I remember a service at which Tikhon, the ex-patriarch, officiated. Most of the people were of the merchant class. Then there were house servants, isvostchiks, and finally members of the intelligentsia, for the intelligentsia, once so ungodly, has turned to religion for comfort, because it suffered so much at the hands of the revolution.

The Russian Church is the one great organized antiBolshevik force which the Bolsheviki had to leave standing, simply on account of the fact that they were too weak to undermine it. It is only natural, therefore, that all persons who detest the Soviet regime should concentrate around the church which more or less symbolizes resistance against Communism.

The consistent hurling of Tom Stanton, six-foot pitcher for the St. Louis University Billikens, and the timely hitting of his mates proved too much for the University of Wisconsin baseball squad yesterday, at the St. Louis U. Athletic Field. The score was 9 to 8.

The game yesterday was the first played by a team representing St. Louis University in many years. Baseball has been played at St. Louis University in recent years only by an undergraduate team and by teams representing various departments.

The game was a thriller right up to the final hit when Hannegan punched a single to center, scoring Levis with the deciding marker. With the Billikens leading by one run, at the start of the ninth, the Badgers by virtue of wildness on the part of Stanton and hits by Ellingson and Steen, scored three runs for a two-run lead.

The locals, however, staged a fine comeback and with a base on error, O'Reilly's triple, Levis' double and a single by Hannegan, put the game on ice.

Stanton Hurls Good Ball.

Stanton's steady fighting was perhaps the outstanding feature of the contest. Schrenk got along nicely but a bombardment in the fifth inning caused his withdrawal and he was replaced by Stohl, who showed lots of speed but less control and curves.

When the game started the husky looking Northerners appeared to have a decided edge on the Billikens who, handicapped with but a week of practice, lacked confidence and bobbled several chances. The psychological hazard in the fact that their opponents ran second in the Big Ten race last year had something to do with it. By the middle of the affair, however, the Savagemen rallied around Stanton, who was more than holding up his end and went into the lead in the sixth.

Stanton Good Under Fire.

Stanton during his stay on the mound passed five batters, but fanned nine. In the third inning, when the visitors were ahead, 3—0, long brought cheer to the hearts of the rooters by striking out three batters in a row. Again in the seventh he fanned two men and caused the other to ron to the Bob Hannegan in left for the locals lost a fine chance to end the game favorably in the early part of the ninth when he dropped Ellingson's liner for the last out and gave the Badgers a new lease on life. Hannegan, however, plentifully redeemed himself by driving over the winning run in the last half of the session. Al Kapl added the thrills with the crowd by getting a triple in the

Two Outfield Positions and Shortstop Open, Rickey Says

"Unofficially, I Would Pick Thevenow for Short," Cardinal Manager Declares—No Game Yesterday, Rain Threatens to Stop Today's Program at San Francisco.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 4.—Two outfield positions, center and right, and short stop are still open to competition with the Cardinals on the eve of their departure from California. Branch Rickey made his announcement to his players today and durring a dinner conference with President Samuel Breadon this evening.

Whether Tommy Thevenow or Jimmy Cooney will cover the shortstop position in the opening game of the season with the Cincinnati Reds will not be determined until all of the Cardinals are under the same tent at Sportsman's Park next Saturday, and Rickey watches Cooney make his throws from deep shortstop.

"If I am allowed to render a guess and not an official statement," said Rickey, "I would pick Thevenow for shortstop. How long he will remain there I do not know. Cooney did not press himself in his throwing this spring and wanted to bring his arm around gradually. As I have not seen him throw for a week, I do not know what his condition is."

Six Outfielders Ready.

In the outfield there are six players for the two positions. Ray Blades is the occupant of left field, while Heine Mueller, Max Flack, Taylor Douthit, Jack Smith, Ralph Shinners and Charley Hafey are in the tussle for center and right.

"I haven't the remotest idea of what I am going to do with those two outfield positions," continued Rickey. "I'd like to play the six, but I can't."

Ralph Shinners was a strong favorite for center field, but he twisted an ankle more than two weeks ago and when he returned to his uniform he was playing under a severe handicap, as he was unable to let himself out in running.

Mueller will not be the center fielder against southpaw pitching. This is Rickey's own decision, which will put Shinners, Douthit and Hafey, right-handed pitchers in line for the position.

Rickey also announced that he has not been able to pick between Flack and Smith.

Trip Generally a Success.

Barring minor injuries the Cardinals' training trip has been a success. Ray Blades and Eddie Dyer, who were put out with sore arms, had old cases in their injuries and California is not blamed for their kinks. Walter Mails sprung a muscle some place between the toes and the head, reported by Walter in his left shoulder, and there was the slight sprain for Shinners. Otherwise, all of the players are in the well-known pink of condition.

But for the spell of rain during the last week, Rickey and Breadon both would have voted California a huge success. As it is they may think several times before deciding whether to repeat this journey in 1926.

In accepting the invitation to visit California, Rickey was told of the large attendance at exhibition games in the spring, but barring one Sunday afternoon at Oakland, the attendance has been conspicuous by its absence.

Rain canceled yesterday's game and is expected to do the same thing tomorrow morning and probably tomorrow afternoon.

All members of the team were taken on a sight-seeing tour of the city yesterday. Approaching the Golden Gate, Heine Mueller wanted to know who polished the brass hinges each morning. The boys wanted to feed Heine to the seals out on the rocks for that one. Heine called Chinatown "The Bunk" becaues he did not see any opium joints.

C. gained sweet revenge for two previous defeats this season when today the Steelworkers ran wild in defeating the New York Giants in an American Soccer League contest, 5 goals to 0. Speedy Ben Miller Team Opposes Boston Eleven in Soccer Title Match Today

Championship of Professional Soccer in United States at Stake in First Match of Three-Game Series — Second Game in Boston.

By Dent McSkimming.

For the past 15 years St. Louis soccer teams, composed of youngsters born and raised in this city, have astonished all visitors, however skillful, with their bursts of speed and their daring eagerness to score.

Today the Ben Miller team represents St. Louis and its peculiarly effective style in a test against what is known as "old country" football. The old country men in today's match are the Boston Soccer Club, champions of the American Soccer League cup competition. The game will be the first of a series of three for the professional soccer championship of the United States. The second game will be played at Boston next Saturday.

In the course of the past 15 years these young "rabbits," as St. Louis players have been dubbed by some of the defeated visitors, have increased the effectivensa of their game by retaining all the startling speed of their predecessors and by absorbing some of the fine, scientific ball control which distinguishes the play of the British-born stars.

Have Absorbed Ball Control.

In past years, for instance, the most attractive feature of a local professional team's play was its attack. Now, defensive football has come in for an equal share of attention and ti was this dogged defense of the home goal that won fame for the Scullins of this city in a cup final two years ago.

Just as is the case with almost every other St. Louis team, the Ben Miller goaltender and fullbacks are among the outstanding stars of the club. Bartnett, the goaltender, has been recognized as equal to any other goal guardian in this city for the past four years. Fullbacks Erbe and Vaughn are strong kickers, are fast and have never failed to show good judgment.

The forwards, upon whom depends the responsibility of scoring goals for St. Louis, are the strongest part of the machine.

In Tel Mulroy and Leo Fitzgerald, who form the left wing, St. Louis has an asset in which the greatest confidence can be placed, regardless of the reputation of the men who will oppose it. Tate Brady, Richard Brannigan, Harry McCarthy and other veterans who played with or against the great St. Leos, Innisfails, Scullins and other clubs who made St. Louis soccer

Sisler's Men Show Real Batting Punch, Getting 14 Safeties

McManus Plays Second Base in Game With Southern Association Club—Two Doubles for St. Louis Manager.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 4.—Elam Vangilder, the sturdy farmer boy from Cape Girardeau, Mo., was a great pitcher yesterday afternoon.. He had everything a pitcher should have. His curves were sharp breaking shoots that cut across the corners of the plate with baffling abruptness. His speed was something to throw a scare into timid batters. His control was good. And with Vangilder pitching so effectively the Browns broke their losing streak, threw off the shackles of batting impotence and swamped the Nashville team of the Southern Association under a 15 to 1 score.

There was little to the game except Vangilder's pitching and the batting of the Browns. Sisler and his men collected 14 hits. Of course they were batting against "Crow" pitchers, as ball players call the young men who come to baseball camps in the spring and finish the summer at an agricultural factory or other laborious pursuit. But even against weak pitching the batting of the Browns was encouraging. It was the Brownie team of old, an array of batters who carried devastataion in their bludgeons.

The 15 runs were made in four innings. The day was cold. A chilly breeze swept over the field, soggy from an all night and morning rain. And after they had run wild on the sacks for four innings the Browns became tired. They were retired in a hurry in the fifth, sixth and seventh, after which the game was called with the consent of players and cash customers alike.

Bennett Has Great Day.

Herschel Bennett, who played right field to give Tobin a rest, had a perfect day at bat, with three singles and a base on balls. Two of his safeties were perfectly executed bunts, the other being a line single to right on the first ball pitched in the game.

Gene Robertson also had a great day, with three singles and a walk in five times at bat. Sisler looked like the George of olden days as he crashed out two doubles and a sacrifice fly. George did not miss a swing all day. Last year he frequently went days at a time without a solid smash at the ball, but today he was crashing fouls against the fence. He got a piece of the ball every swing. He was a real menace up there at the plate and his performance was impressive. George knows what he is talking about when he says he is set for a great season.

Williams continued in his hitting slump. He walked once and failed to get a hit in four other trips to the plate. His timing is bad, but he is a natural hitter and he will strike his stride soon. Practice is what he needs. He is grunting better now and soon he will be meeting the ball.

Despite a soggy diamond the Browns played an excellent game in the field. The support they gave Vangilder was perfect. Van went the seven innings and gave only three hits, one in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh. The hit in the sixth was good for three bases and drove in a run, as the preceding batter had walked.

Vangilder walked the first batter in the game and thereafter his control was perfect until the sixth, when he walked a man with two down. He struck out eight men in the seven innings and his work was highly encouraging. It was the third straight exhibition of merit by the Brownies staff. Bush and Davis performed in excellent fashion in the two games at Birmingham.

The Browns will oppose Nashville again tomorrow and Monday. Gaston probably will pitch tomorrow, going as far as he chooses before being relieved by a youngster. Fred Toney, former Cardinal and Giant, has signed a Nashville contract and may appear on the hill during the Brownie series.

Dempsey Has No Contest in Sight —Kearns

No One Willing to Take Chance on Promoting Bout With Wills.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—A fight for Jack Dempsey, the world's heavyweight champion is just as far away as ever, said Jack Kearns, his manager here today after a trip to New York. Kearns saw Tex Rickard and Jack Curley in New York, but said there was nothing definite in sight for Dempsey during 1925.

Kearns said he would like to have a fight for Dempsey next September, but nobody was willing to take a chance on promoting a contest with Harry Wills, the negro heavyweight.

Dempsey will be through with the picture he is making at Hollywood in two or three weeks, said Kearns and could get ready for a meeting this year if an opponent and a promoter could be found.

Frenchman Wins U. S. Tennis Title

Jean Borotra, Davis Cup Star, Beats Anderson in National Finals.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The tricolor of France was carried to a sweeping victory in American tennis today when Jean Borotra, a member of the 1924 French Davis cup team, won the national men's indoor singles championship on the courts of the Seventh Regiment Armory, defeating Fred C. Anderson of New York, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—0, in the final round of the tournament.

Shortly after his triumph, Borotra, paired with A. W. Asthalter of New York, won the doubles title, defeating Watson M. Washburn and E. T. Herndon of New York, 6—3, 6—2, 8—6.

By virtue of his victory in the singles, Borotra became the second foreign player to win a major American tennis championship. H. L. Doherty of England took the all-comers title in 1903.

YANKS WILL HAVE TO BEAT SENATORS TO WIN FLAG, RUTH WRITES

Bucky Harris' Team One of Best in Baseball, Despite Poor Showing This Spring

Bluege One of Most Improved Players He Has Seen, Home Run King Asserts—Thinks New York Club Owns Better Reserves Than Washington.

By Babe Ruth.

(Copyright, 1925.)

It's going to be Bucky Harris and his crowd that we'll have to beat this year to win the American League pennant. I think that the Yankees are a much stronger ball club, but I don't mind saying that we'll have a hard time beating out the Senators.

Harris has one of the strongest teams in baseball. A lot of people are being fooled by their spring showing. I am glad to say the Yankees are not among them. We all know that we are going to be in a hard fight before this pennant thing is decided. We are all ready for the battle.

The Senators are the kind of ball club that it is hard to defeat. Nearly all of the players are seasoned. They have gone through the mill. Many of them were in baseball a good many years before they got into the world's series. They are not apt to give up their championship without putting up a hard battle.

Bluege Improved Player.

I saw them in a few games in Florida. They seemed to have all the scrap they had last year and more. The infield work struck me more than anything else. With Oscar Bluege playing at top speed, Harris has as good an infield as he could possibly want.

Speaking of Bluege, he is the most improved player I've seen this year. He has become expert at making throws to first, while still straightening up from fielding a grounder. This is one of the hardest things in the world for an infielder to do. If you don't think so ask Joe Dugan. We saw Bluege make one of these throws during a game between the Senators and Giants this spring. He did it so perfectly that Joe shouted:

"How do they get that way?"

Of course, the whole Senator infield will depend on Roger Peckinpaugh, our old Yankee friend. Peck, besides being a great shortstop is a fine player to have around in an infield. He steadies the other players. His experience is a sort of balance on the others. With Peck at short and Harris at second the Senators have as good a double play combination as there is anywhere. They ought to cut off many runs this year.

McNeely Better Batter.

The outfield of the champions is as good as could be wanted. Rice and Goslin can do plenty of damage to any pitcher. McNeely has a lot to learn, and he is learning it. Harris tells me that McNeely's batting has improved a lot since last year.

"He is learning to take a cut at the ball. He is still young. But he is one of the best youngsters I've seen around in a long time. All he needs is a little more experience," said Harris.

Reuther and Coveleskie should help Harris' pitching staff a lot. Both are smart. When Reuther is right he is one of the best southpaws in the game. He had a bad season in 1924, but with the change of scenery he may turn right around and have a sensational season.

Covey is still there too. The last time he pitched against the Yankees in New York, he let us down with two hits and one of these was a fluke. He still has a lot of stuff left. He may show it this year. But I will say this: Dangerous as the Senators will be, they'll have to have a lot of luck to beat us out. Harris has no secondary defense, while the Yankees have plenty. What he will do in case several of his regulars are on the sick list is something to think about. He had a lot of luck last year. But there is no telling when or where the string will break. And when it does break, Bucky will be up against it.

Amateur Boxing Card Wednesday

Funds Will Be Raised to Send Local Boxers to National Tournament.

Amateur boxing fans will be given another opportunity to view an indoor show before the close of the season. The Municipal Athletic Association, which held an interesting program two weeks ago, will hold a show Wednesday evening at the Battery A Armory, Grand boulevard and Hickory street.

William F. Yorger, Superintendent of Public Recreation announced yesterday that the proceeds from the show would be turned over to the Western A. A. U. to help defray expenses incurred in sending several local boxers to the National Senior A. A. U. trials at Boston late this month.

All of the Western district champions with the probable exception of Mike Sansone are expected to compete. Sansone received a severe cut over his right eye in his recent bout with Mike Collins of New York and he has asked to be excused from this week's show.

The entire teams from Mullanphy and Sherman Park community centers will be entered.

WICHITA FIVE DEFEATS EL RENO TEAM FOR BASKETBALL TITLE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Wichita (Kas.) High School basketball squad tonight won the University of Chicago national interscholastic invitation basketball tournament by defeating the El Reno, Ok., five in an extremely one-sided contest, 27 to 6.

Scoring almost at will, after a cautious start, Wichita presented such a tight defense that the Oklahomans were unable to get within scoring distance until after Wichita ran in a number of substitutes at the beginning of the second half.

El Reno staged a desperate rally during the last part of the game, managing to solve the Kansas guards for two baskets. Free throws from fouls accounted for their other two points.

Westport High of Kansas City tonight won the third place in the tournament, defeating Wheeler, Miss.

St. George (Utah) High School tonight won the consolation tournament of the national interscholastic basketball tournament by defeating Detroit Southeastern High, 21 to 18.

WRAY'S COLUMN

A Real Test.

TODAY a team of American-born soccer players will represent St. Louis against the Boston Football Club, in the first game of the national professional championship series. The visiting club is without one American-born player in its lineup. Practically the entire team is made up of Scottish players, some of whom have seen big-league experience on British fields.

The St. Louis eleven is considered one of the weakest that has represented this city in its history—and it must be recalled that St. Louis teams have been finalists in every championship since they entered national competition.

And yet, it is by no means certain that the strong Boston club is going to win today's game, or the series. Men who know soccer consider that the St. Louis champions have a weak halfback line, and some pessimistic predictions have it that the locals will be defeated by not less than three goals.

But it has always happened in the past that, when the occasion arose, the Mound City men rose with it. Today Boston, playing on a strange field, against a club that will be inspired by a desire to show up its Eastern rival, may not live up to the predictions of the money men who are laying 8 to 5 against the St. Louis club.

Why Belittle Us.

THE East and Europe have never taken St. Louis soccer football seriously. Nevertheless, and at no distant date, this city will make an even greater impression on the soccer world than it has in the past—and that means something.

The explanation lies in the fact that St. Louis is the greatest producer of soccer talent, American-born, in the United States, due to the municipal league, largely.

While the old-timers and the foreign-born experts of other days think that our soccer has deteriorated—and perhaps it has—it is still good enough not to deserve to be underestimated.

A Case in Point.

LAST YEAR two British players, the Jackson brothers, were brought over and used by American teams. They appeared in St. Louis. Their work was good and appreciated. But it did not stand out over the best that this city knows.

Today the Jackson brothers are back in Great Britain. They are playing on first division teams. And their names are in the headlines of the newspapers every time they play.

This can be interpreted as indicating that American players are quite as good as the British of today.

Yes, We Are Improving.

BRITISH gentlemen with sore lips will probably be pained at this expression. Nevertheless, the case of the Jackson brothers and of other British players who have come to this country and returned to Great Britain to score soccer successes, indicates that the standard of football in this country is far from being too low to be despised.

In fact, we still think that an All-American team could be picked that would make a real showing against an All British team.

And if this be treason, John Bull, make the most of it.

third inning and a double in the fifth.

The Badgers scored early in the first when Kapl fumbled Tangen's easy roller and Ellingson brought the runner in with a hot triple. Ellingson scored on a similar bobble by Vernon Bradburn. An overthrow by Kalp on Schrenk's bunt scored Steen in the second frame.

The Billikens began to revive in the next inning and with two out O'Reilly slapped a single through the box and stole second. He counted when Larsen dropped Bradburn's high fly and Bradburn scored on Kapl's screaming triple down the foul line.

Wisconsin leaves tonight for games with Mississippi University, Mississippi College and Mississippi A. and M. The Bills take on Iowa, another Big Ten team, Wednesday afternoon.

Harry Wills Tells How He Improved Boxing Skill in Fights With Other Jockeys

This is the third chapter in the story of the life and ring career of Harry Wills, as told by the negro heavy-weight boxer to a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. Wills is generally recognized as being Champion Jack Dempsey's most dangerous challenger, and it is virtually certain that the titleholder will meet the negro before he retires.

CHAPTER III.

Racing at the outlaw tracks in those days was not like it is at the present time. All kinds of rough stuff was permitted, for there was no patrol judge to watch what was going on. Coming to a turn a boy would slam right across in front of the field, causing the others to pull up. Leg-locking, bridle and saddle-cloth snatching, and such things were only the milder sort of tricks.

Races were more like a free-for-all fight than a trial of speed. It was a continual battle all the way around. Whips were going and they did not always fall on the sides of the horses. As often as the sides of the horses. As often as not some rider caught it right across the face if he refused to pull up. Some riders had a way of riding up alongside of a green kid and knocking him right out of the saddle with a twitch of the foot.

Bought Interest in Horse.

In later years I acquired a part interest in a horse, and this led to my deserting the track for good and all. He was a 2-year-old gelding, called Wonder, by Peep o' Day out of Straightaway and a shifty sort of nag. Wonder was owned by Nat Moore, a well-known horseman. While still a maiden, he got a bad attack of bucked shins.

A friend of mine named Chandler decided that Wonder would be a bargain at $500, which was the price Moore asked for him. Chandler got me to put up half the money and bought him. This was at the Jefferson track at New Orleans. At that time Miss Mack and Galter were about the only two good 2-year-olds running there.

Wonder Disqualified.

Wonder beat both of them in a race in which he left the maiden ranks. Three times previously he had finished back among the tail enders, his bucked shins giving him so much pain that he would not run. His sudden reversal of form caused a big stir. He was disqualified for some reason or other that I could never rightly understand. The case caused so much trouble that it almost broke up racing.

During the time I spent with the horses I learned something about how to handle my fists. We jockeys were always fighting among ourselves over what happened on the track, there being so much rough riding. As I have mentioned before, I never needed much urging to start a battle. I was stronger than the average, very proud of my strength and met all comers more than half way when they showed the least inclination to start something.

Quit Racing Game.

Every evening when the horses had been put away for the day the gloves would be brought out. Often we never bothered about gloves, but went right at each other without rules and regulations. This style of milling suited me best, because I was so strong and tough that no one could hurt me.

Growing so fast that I could no longer make weight, I went back to New Orleans. I received a warm welcome from mother, who was afraid that I had been killed, although I had often run away before for short periods.

Sails for India.

For the next year or two I tried my hand at dozens of different jobs. I shined shoes on the ferry-boat running between New Orleans and Algiers, worked in a cooper shop and along the docks. All this time I was growing fast and soon I became restless and decided to start out on my travels again.

Again it was Mr. Leonard who started me off. He was a big dealer in horses, and while the Boer War was on he shipped a consignment to the British Government at Bombay, India. He asked me to go along to look after the horses and promised me $300 for the trip.

Regular Greens Open.

UNUSUALLY good weather conditions have made it possible to open regular greens in the St. Louis district much earlier than usual. Glen Echo and Sunset opened March 28, Algonquin threw open its greens last Sunday and now virtually all the clubs are open or preparing to open. Usually it is late in April or early in May before the flags are moved from the temporary greens.

Park department officials will wait a few weeks before opening the public course greens. Play is so heavy at the Forest Park links that it is wise to wait until all the winter dampness has left the turf. However the prospects are that the park courses will be ready earlier than usual.

Better Every Year.

BOB JORDAN, secretary of the Forest Park Golf Club, says the Municipal course is in better condition than at any time in the past and that the greens this year more nearly approximate the desired condition than ever before. Greens No. 18 and 13 are being rebuilt and as soon as they are ready the club will send for bent to plant the putting surfaces. The Forest Park club does much for the good of the golfer and should be supported in its campaign for a better course. Joining is the first way to help. Jordan says 1000 members by May 1 is the goal, with 2000 as the amrk before the season ends. Last year the club bought a gang mower to help the Park Department keep the course in condition.

Greens Fee Problem.

DRASTIC plans to make greens fees so prohibitive that members would not bring guests on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, have been formulated at district clubs from time to time, but at most of the clubs the members have voted for the right to extend their hospitality to friends. At Algonquin last year the members were asked to vote on a $5 holiday greens fee, but the fee will remain the same —$2 on week days and $3 on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. At Sunset the fee is $1 week days and $3 on holidays.

In most cases it is a reciprocal proposition. A man from Glen Echo plays at Algonquin one week and takes his host to Glen Echo the next Sunday. The only result accomplished by a prohibitive fee, it seems, would be to promote clannishness and prevent members from entertaining non-members, who perhaps, might want to join after a few rounds.

Advertising Value.

KIRKWOOD realizes the value of having visitors. There will be no greens fee for guests up to May 1 and after that the fee will be $1 on week days and $2 on holidays.

North Hills About Ready.

JOHNNIE MANION, Sunset Hill professional, played a round at North Hills this week, with the regular greens open, and after his tour of the course said the layout was in good condition for the district tournament which will be held there early in June. There are a few gullies on the hilly course which must be filled, but otherwise greens and fairways are satisfactory.

DUNDEE LIKELY TO BE REINSTATED TUESDAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Johnny Dundee, former world's featherweight and junior lightweight champion, who was indefinitely suspended on Feb. 6 by the State Athletic Commission on the recommendation of the French Boxing Federation, because he failed to meet Fred Bretonnel, French lightweight, in Paris last Jan. 27, probably will be reinstated at next Tuesday's meeting of the board.

Members of the commission indicated today that they had decided to take such action because of the failure of the French organization to submit a detailed report as promised.

Dundee will have a hearing at Tuesday's meeting and if his reasons for not meeting Bretonnel are satisfactory the ban against him will be lifted.

Most Noteworthy Performance of Season Was Phantom Finn's Standard of 8:58 1-5 for the Two Miles.

By Charles Parker
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

There passed into history recently an indoor track and field season which from the standpoint of popular interest, active participation, competitive thrills and shattered world's records, so far outmatched any of its predecessors that even the most liberal employment of superlatives would fail to tell the story.

It opened on Jan. 7 with the Finnish-American A. C. games at Madison Square Garden.

One athlete—Paavo Nurmi of Finland—was responsible.

Coming here as the outstanding hero of the 1920 and the 1924 Olympic games, and as the holder of virtually all the existing world's outdoor records from 1500 to 10,000 meters, he became a magnet for the curious, the marvel of the expert and the idol of the youth of the land.

Repeated Time and Again.

What transpired on that January evening nearly three months ago has been repeated here or in other sections almost every other night or two since, with capacity crowds, hordes of aspiring youngsters and shattered records reflecting the Paavo Nurmi appeal, for although the Finn did not compete in every meet—he missed mighty few—and although he was not the creator of all the records registered, he was directly or indirectly responsible.

The season will live in history, not because of them, but because of the revelations of the new limits of speed and athletic attainment.

Nurmi in his initial appearance launched a drive on Father Time that is without precedent in all history. His first world's indoor record—that for the 1500-meter course—was one of 30 record performances delivered by him in the course of the 12 weeks, and it served as the inspiration to American and Finnish-American athletes that brought a season's total of upward of 80 world's records.

Nurmi Heads the List.

Paavo with his 30, scored in running events ranging from three-quarters of a mile to 10,000 meters, made the greatest single contribution.

Willie Ritola, a native of Finland but a resident of this city, was second with 21 in events ranging from two miles to five miles.

Willie Plant of the Morningside A. C., was third with six walking records.

Ugo Frigerio of Italy was fourth with five walking records, although his contribution was less noteable than several who follow, owing to the fact no indoor records had existed in the events in which he successfully performed.

Lloyd Hahn of the Boston A. A., with three middle distance marks; Harold Osborne of the Illinois A. C., with three high jump records, and Carl Christiernson of the Newark A. C., with three hurdle records, tied for fifth place.

Alan Helffrich of Penn State College with two new middle distance marks, and the Georgetown University two-mile team, with two relay records, are grouped in seventh place.

Ray Set One Record.

Joie Ray, with one record created and one record tied, is next in order. Then follow Jackson Scholz of the New York A. C.; Earl Myers of the Chicago A. A.; Nelson Sherrill of the University of Pennsylvania; Ivan Riley of the Illinois A. C., and the Boston College 2400-yard relay team, each with one record broken, and finally George Hill of the University of Pennsylvania; William Gaffey of Georgetown, and Charles Moore of Penn State, with one record established.

The most noteworthy of more than 80 world's marks is Nurmi's two-mile record of 8:58 1-5. Paavo's standing figures for other distances, great as they are, do not quite measure up to that phenomenal performance.

Many great athletes have specialized at that distance but none was able to cover the course in less than nine minutes.

Eastern Horses In Training for Kentucky Derby

Stimulus, Sumpter, Young Martin and Nicholas Being Trotted at Belmont Park.

G. F. T. Ryall.
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Although for the last three or four years the Kentucky Derby has been run on a fast track, in Louisville, they say it "always rains Derby day," so according to the law of average the going is due to be muddy.

Trainers here, who are pointing colts for the race and the Preakness that precedes it by a week have plenty of opportunity to get their horses used to heavy going this week. Not the least of these to take advantage of this has been George Odom, trainer of Marshall Field III's Stimulus.

Last fall and this winter when the chances of the colt were discussed it was always said, "Oh, but he doesn't like the mud." Odom said the same thing at Belmont Park less than a fortnight ago; but he qualified it. The only time Stimulus ran in the mud the race was run in a driving rainstorm. The colt strained himself badly in the slippery going and was out of training for several days.

Was Second in Futurity.

Odom was not particularly impressed with the race but in accordance to the wishes of the colt's owner he started him in the Futurity and he ran second to Mother Goose. However, all last fall Stimulus developed an aversion to heavy going, so much so that he refused to gallop in it. As it was near the end of the season and the colt's legs were not any too sound, Odom did not drive him.

There is no indication in the breeding of Stimulus why he should not run well in heavy going, so Odom put it down to the strain in the race.

There was plenty of mud at Belmont Park all week and Odom had Stimulus out on the track every day. The colt apparently had forgotten his distaste of five months ago, and finally Odom set Stimbulus down for a good gallop of a mile in the heavy going in company with Sumpter. The work, though it was nothing sensational, the pair stepping the eight furlongs in 1:50, showed Odom that he might be wrong about this mud thing. What Stimulus will do in a race remains to be seen.

Young Martin Works Well.

Quatrain, which is now resting after his winter campaign, runs as well on a slow as on a fast track; any horse that can win in New Orleans mud is a mudder.

Sumpter, it may be said in passing, worked as well as Stimulus, though neither boy tried to ride it out on the other.

Young Martin, another of the leading Derby candidates, also has been working well, though not spectacularly, and so has Nicholas, which will carry the colors of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II.

BIKE RIDERS TO OPEN ROAD-RUN SEASON TODAY

The bike riding season opens this morning with the St. Louis and the Century Clubs holding their first runs of the year. The St. Louis riders go to Madam DeFoe's on the Baxter road while the Century boys pedal to Belleville, Ill.

An invitation to all cyclists wishing to come on these runs has been issued by both clubs. The Blue and White riders leave Blair's Monument, Kingshighway and Lindell boulevard, at 9 o'clock. The Tangled "C" boys will meet at the club's headquarters, 1523 North Grand boulevard, leaving at the same time. Both runs are short, neither of the stopping places being more than 20 miles from the city.

Century Club's Inaugural Run

The 1925 season will be opened today, by members of the Century Cycling Club, with a short ride to Belleville, Ill., and return. Although most of the Tangled C outfit could have been seen on the road nearly every Sunday for the past month, this is the first official trip of the season.

Road Capt. Louis Droz has announced that racing will not be permitted on any official run throughout the year under penalty of a five-point fine. A moderate pace will be maintained, arriving in Belleville about 11 a. m. and returning about 2 p. m. Any rider wishing to accompany the Century Boys may do so by reporting at the club rooms 1523 N. Grand boulevard, not later than 8:30 a. m.

NEW GREENS FOR 13TH AND 18TH HOLES ON MUNICIPAL GOLF COURSE

Golf players using the public course in Forest Park will have two new greens about June 1, according to an announcement made by Robert Jordan, Secretary of the Forest Park Golf Club. The entire cost, which totals nearly $1000, will be taken care of entirely by the Golf Club treasury.

A specialist from London, Ohio, will be here this week to start work on the greens. They will be located on the thirteenth and eighteenth holes. Washington strain creeping bent stolons will be planted. The same Washington comes from the Government Experimental Nursery at Washington, D. C.

The Park Department under the direction of Superintendent Ernest Strehle is assisting the golf club in planting the greens. All improvements made by the Forest Park Golf Club are for the benefit of the users of the public course in Forest Park. Over 16,000 took out permits last year.

PITCHING STAFF GREATLY IMPROVED OVER LAST SEASON, SISLER SAY

Bush, Davis, Vangilder, Gaston, Danforth and Wingard to Be Regulars

Team Also Will Be Stronger Behind the Bat With Dixon to Help Severeid, While St. Louis Americans Will Be Better Equipped With Pinch Hitters.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 4.—George Sisler, manager of the Browns, today discussed the prospects of his team and told why he thought the St. Louis Americans' chances of making a fight for the pennant were brighter than last season.

"Discussion of the improvement in the Browns must start with the pitching department," said Sisler, "for therein we have shown the greatest improvement. I have six men on whom I expect to put the burden of pitching. They are Joe Bush, Dixie Davis, Elam Vangilder and Milton Gaston, right-handers, and Dave Danforth and Ernie Wingard, left-handers.

"Bush will mean much to the Browns. He can pitch, his arm is strong and he is a winning pitcher. Then he can hit and he has done much to create the fine spirit on the Brownie club this year. He is an influence for good. He works hard all the time and inspires the other men to give their best.

Gaston a Great Find.

"I consider Gaston a great find. He is ready today and I expect him to start regularly and win a great many games. He has the nerve, the curves and he knows how to pitch. He has learned much from Bush and the Browns were fortunate to land Gaston.

"Davis looks better this year than I ever saw him before. He will be a regular starter, and what is more, he will not be kept on the bench until June or July. Of course, I will start him against clubs which are particularly easy for him, but I expect to give him a start as soon as the season opens. His work this spring has been excellent. He appears to be set for a great year.

"Vangilder had an off-year in 1924. That's the only way I can explain it. There is no reason why he should not come back this season. He has fine speed, good curves and his control always has been excellent. He was unfortunate in the matter of injuries last year. He got off to a bad start and never hit his stride. He is strong and well this spring and I count on him delivering.

Wingard Should Be Better.

"Wingard was a great pitcher last season, his first in the major league. He is a smart boy and the year's experience will make him a still greater pitcher. He will be hard to beat.

"Danforth is no longer a youngster, but if worked properly will carry his share of the burden. Perhaps he was used too frequently last season. He was a great pitcher until August and the did not win a game the rest of the campaign. It is possible, in view of his age, that he was overworked. If that did have anything to do with his failure in the last part of the season it will not happen again this year."

Sisler said he would depend on Giard, Blaeholder and Grant for relief hurling, though Girard may be started in games if he shows the stuff. He has good speed and curve but his work this spring has been spotty. He has had no trouble getting the first two batters in an inning, but time and again his otherwise fine work has been spoiled by an enemy rally with two out. Sisler thinks he can overcome that weakness, which he attributes to a tendency to experiment on batters.

Four young pitchers will be retained until good places are found for them or until they show that they should stay with the Browns during the season. They are Falk and Springer, southpaws, and Stauffer and Beck, right-handers.

After analyzing his pitching staff, Sisler took up the improvement behind the bat, resulting from the trade which brought Leo Dixon to the club. Sisler was loud in his praise for the young backstop and is certain that the youngster will do much of the catching.

"We will be better fortified with pinch-hitters this year," Sisler continued. "When Dixon is catching we will have Severeid ready to bat. Hank is a dangerous hitter. Then we will have Joe Bush, one of the best pinch-batters in the game and Harry Rice, Hershel Bennett and Joe Evans. We will have right and left-handed hitters on the bench and the value of pinch-hitting reserves cannot be over-estimated."

Sisler also mentioned the improvement shown by Johnny Tobin, the increased steadiness in the play of Gene Robertson and his own improvement.

Asserts He Is Ready.

"My work at camp has convinced me," George said, "that I am all set for a good year. I saw pretty well last year, but this season I can sell the ball perfectly. I know I'm going to have a great year and you know I didn't say anything last year."

In the remaining exhibition games Sisler will start one of his regular pitchers, one of the six mentioned above and each will be permitted to pitch as long as he wants. Youngsters will be used to finish the games.

Sisler today gave out the line-up with which he will oppose the Cardinals in the spring series next Saturday and Sunday and with which he expects to open the American League campaign. The only doubtful position is in center field, where Baby Doll Jacobson will roam if he comes to terms with the club.

Here is the starting batting order:

Tobin rf, Robertson 3b, Sisler 1b, Williams lf, McManus 2b, Evans or Bennett cf, Dixon or Severeid c, Gerber ss.

In case Jacobson is still missing Evans will play center field against the left-handed pitchers and Bennett when the opposing hurler is a right-hander.

British-Born Forwards Who Play Here Today

history, are unanimous in declaring the Mulroy-Fitzgerald combination the most scientific and the most effective goal-scoring wing that has ever played on a St. Louis club.

Jim Dunn a Clever Leader.

Jim Dunn, at center, is an unselfish, cool, vigorous distributer of the attack. He goes straight forward, never losing sight of the main objective, a GOAL.

The right wing, Bollam at inside and Eddie Dunn at outside, is rather plain in its style, but it is nevertheless very effective. Bollam is a hard worker and a clever footballer. Eddie Dunn is the fastest soccer player that St. Louis has boasted in years. He is a veritable greyhound and his crosses to center, low and fast, are very dangerous.

The halfback line is more noted for its vigor and willingness to fight to the last breath than for its scientific control of the ball. Beaten once, they must be beaten again and yet again before they will concede an opening to an opposing forward.

Boston, by its very record of three victories this season over Fall River establishes itself as the finest example of a winning soccer team that Eastern football has ever produced. Fall River had won that distinction prior to the advent of Boston this year.

G. A. G. Wood, head of the Boston Steamship Co., has assembled a team of great stars from the fields of British soccer. His ambition is to win the highest honor in American soccer and the only obstacle remaining in his path is the Ben miller club.

Every man of the team was born and learned his football in England, Scotland or Ireland.

In today's lineup there will be nine Scotchmen, one Englishman and one Irishman.

Owner Wood has said that he would like to have some good American players in his lineup but it so happens that the best players in the New England district are foreign-born. St. Louis has but few foreign-born players and an abundance of native youngsters.

Only one of the Boston players has ever played against or watched a St. Louis team in action. He is Tommy Fleming, outside left, who, in spite of his 35 years, is regarded as one of the most powerful goal scorers in the country. St. Louis players and fans rely upon this supreme element of a speedy attack to give them an early advantage.

Hamill a Real Star.

Of the men whose special reputations have preceded them, Mickey Hamill, the Boston center halfback, stands out. He has proved in the most severe tests against Fall River, Coats and other Eastern teams that he is a consistent star.

The outside right, Alex McNab, and the left fullback, Jock McArthur, have also come in for special attention from Eastern critics. Capt. McIntyre, at right halfback, is highly regarded.

Advance sales indicate a crowd of between 12,000 and 15,000, according to Treasurer Phil Riley of St. Louis Soccer League. Tickets will be on sale at the park, Grand boulevard and Laclede avenue, at 9 o'clock this morning and the gates will be open at 1 p. m. The kickoff will be at 3 o'clock with Dave Evans of Detroit officiating as referee.

Eleven Stadiums Being Built for New York Fights

Metropolitan Fans Wonder Where Matchmakers Will Find Suitable Bouts.

By Fair Play.
(Copyright, 1925.)

NEW YORK, April 4.—Buds and prize fight arenas are bursting forth in rich profusion, in and about New York.

In the matter of arenas, the year 1925 will live long in the annals of the prize ring. Fabulous purses hung up for top-line fighters have convinced investors that there is big money in the boxing game and promoters seem to have no trouble in being financed.

No less than 11 stadiums, seating in all 479,000 spectators, will be doing business—or trying to—when the outdoor season rolls around. Here they are:

Henderson's Crater, 110,000.
Yankee Stadium, 90,000.
Boyle's Thirty Acres, 90,000.
Polo Grounds, 80,000.
Velodrome, 20,000.
Coney Island Stadium, 20,000.
Queensboro Stadium, 17,000.
Henderson's Bowl, 15,000.
Dexter Park, 15,000.
Jamaica Sporting Club, 12,000.
Patchogue Sporting Club, 10,000.

Where, oh where, do the matchmakers figure to unearth the cards to fill these mammoth arenas!

It takes a real fight to bring out the fans in sufficient numbers to make it profitable to operate these plants and with champions being suspended and banned right and left, local followers of fights find it difficult to see where the cards are coming from.

Then there is the angle of matchmakers. They are few and far between. There are so many alleged matchmakers, retired fighters, ex-managers and the like who are long on alluring promises and short on results that a wearied promoter often is apt to get an impression that Tex Rickard, Jimmy de Forest, Sim Flaherty and one or two others are about all the matchmakers that exist. One thing is certain: Unless matchmakers are dug up who ca the drawing cards to br at one arena or another, ther be a lot of premature down of stadiums before the mer has gone.

Three World's Champions Now Under New York Commission B

Villa and Mickey Walker Likely to Be Free Soon, but De sey Is Still in Eclipse — Tunney - Gibbons Match Ruins Season for Wills and Dempsey.

By Tom S. Andrews,
Author of "Ring Battles of Centuries"; Editor of the Boxing G

The placing of Champion Jack Dempsey on the ineligib New York State by the New York Boxing Commission, make world's champions who are under the ban in the East, the oth being Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, and Pancho Vi weight title holder.

Villa's suspension will have expired soon, so it will not worry him much. He is in Manila, but will arrive in the States about May 6.

Mickey Walker expects to make his peace with the New York Commission shortly, so only Dempsey will be out.

The commission claims that Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, did not make a satisfactory reply to the request that the champion arrange a match with Harry Wills, colored challenger, at once. But Kearns did make it plain that he would sign up for the champion to meet the winner of a Gibbons-Wills match, the same to be held in New York during the summer, or early fall.

Dempsey Barred Only in New York

While New York has barred the champion, it is not probable that other states will do so, especially California, where the fans would like to see Jack in a title match; in fact, two of the leading promoters there—Jack Doyle and Jack Root—have made the champion offers almost equal to anything New York can offer.

Could Gibbons and Wills meet first and the latter prove v would be a 3-to-1 bette against Dempsey than if h to meet him now.

The champion did not the colored challenger, a imagine; but, accepted Te ard's offer two years ago. prevented from fighting a time when Chairman Willi doon of the commission ref sanction the match. Dempsey has offered to Wills and Gibbons, but he the latter first and then th ored "panther," as he is c

Gibbons Claims Dempsey's

However, Gibbons and Wil summer match, seem out o question for Tom already ha for a bout June 12 with T That would preclude tw bouts during the season fo bons, at least of such magn those with both Wills and sey.

Gibbons' claim to the D title, made during the pa seems ridiculous. His cla based on the fact that the c sion had closed the Demps and had returned the ch forfeits.

On this basis Wills, not is entitled to claim the crow he first posted his $2500

How 'Bull' Durham Got Its Name

TOBACCO was discovered by the American Indians, It was taken away from them by the Whites, So it must be some good, Being a Cherokke Indian by blood myself, (born and raised near Claremore, Indian Territory, the best city west of the Alleghanies) I know the Whites never took anything away from the Indians that wasn't some good, Sir Walter Raleigh, who was the Sheik of his time, Come over here got a lot of Tobacco and rushed back to England for a personal appearance Tour, The Queen (I dont remember who she was, if you like detail look it up and see who she was) Started to step out of her Carriage and it was muddy, Sir Walter Raleigh took off his Coat layed it down and she stepped on it, She thanked him, gave him the address of a cleaners, and he then gave her some tobacco and said "I admire you". She said "Oh, you are such a gallant man, what is the name of this Tobacco you gave me", And Sir Walter Raleigh said "Why it is 'BULL' DURHAM".

That's how 'Bull' Durham got its name, And the Indians lost not only their Country, but their Tobacco, Unanimous Verdict of Unfitness!

Every English language newspaper in St. Louis, including the St. Louis Star, editorially condemned the official conduct of Victor J. Miller in the only public office he ever held.

Mr. Miller's acts and utterances as a member of the Board of Police Commissioners provoked such general and indignant protests from press and people that he was ousted by the same Republican Governor who appointed him.

Now Mr. Miller, on his record of failure and repudiation as a Police Commissioner, wants to be Mayor of St. Louis.

Below is the editorial verdict in the case of Victor J. Miller, candidate for Mayor:

St. Louis Star:

[Editorial March 11, 1922]

Victor Miller's charge of immorality among high school children is like more of his pronouncements. It was so stated as to be libelous in its implications, and therefore false in spirit even though proof might be offered to support it. And it illustrates his tendency to denounce a condition rather than take rational steps to correct it.

The first libel is upon the school system * * * * * *

The second libel is upon the boys and girls who live as decently as their parents did * * * * * *

Miller erred by overstatement. A measured, fair presentation of the problem in morals might have aroused parents to inquiry concerning their own children, whereas violent hyperbole only stirs resentment against the author of the charges.

* * * *

St. Louis Star:

[Editorial March 20, 1922]

It is quite apparent from the report of the Soldan Parents Committee, and from the newspaper accounts of the past week, that Police President Miller failed to substantiate his charge that a vice club of boys and possibly one of girls existed in the Soldan High School. * * * *

It is easy to see where this leaves Mr. Miller. He blundered into a statement which he could not prove, and which, as The Star said at the outset, was presumptively false and not very important even if true * * * *

Instead of frittering away time and effort on isolated cases of immorality in the schools, or on the isolated immorality of Mr. Miller's tongue, let us do something constructive in behalf of the boys and girls who face life with more enthusiasm than wisdom.

* * * *

St. Louis Star:

[Editorial March 17, 1922]

Perhaps Victor Miller mentioned that he has been offered over $100,000 in bribes during the past year in order to distract attention from the Soldan High School mixup, but it is certainly an interesting revelation. * * * *

However, we would like to hear from Mr. Miller what action he took against these bribe-offerers. The offering of a bribe is a felony and where could it be a greater felony than in the office of the president of the police board?

It strikes us that the surest way to discourage bribe-offering is to clap the bribers into prison and the president of the police board should be of all persons the first to take such a step. The statute of limitations has not expired yet.

* * * *

St. Louis Star:

[Editorial March 13, 1922]

The main trouble with Victor Miller is that he talks faster than he thinks and then doesn't catch up.

* * * *

St. Louis Times:

[Editorial March 15, 1922]

The attempt to make it appear that there is politics involved in the demand that Victor J. Miller retire as head of the Board of Police Commissioners, because of the speech he made about the St. Louis Public Schools regardless of the basis of the horrible charges, will fail as it deserves to fail.

Miller's strongest friends are foremost in demanding that he retire from a post for which he has shown such unfitness.

* * * *

St. Louis Times:

[Editorial March 18, 1922]

The chief trouble with Miller is that he is a notoriety seeker, possessed with an infirmity of mind that makes him so credulous that he does not make a thorough investigation of even the most horrible charges which he directed against the Soldan High School. Even in this he shows a demagogic streak, professing to defend poor girls when no one had charged that there was any immorality among girls in that station of life.

* * * *

Globe-Democrat:

[Editorial March 11, 1922]

If Mr. Miller had received information causing him to believe that organized vice exists in this or any other school it was his duty, as the chief official of the city responsible for the suppression of vice, to present the information to the School Board for its investigation and action. That board is charged with the authority and the obligation to promote and to preserve morality in the public schools. In a matter of this kind, its prior right to any information affecting the morality of the schools should by all means have been respected. But Mr. Miller, President of the Board of Police Commissioners, without notifying the School Board of his suspicions or his evidence, apparently without a word to the principal or teachers of this school, without even completing his own investigations, as his statement shows, publicly charges that a state of gross immorality exists in this unidentified school. It is an utterly inexcusable action.

* * * *

Globe-Democrat:

[Editorial April 15, 1923]

At any time but particularly at such a time as this it is important that the Board of Police Commissioners work together in harmony for the public service. It was for that service that Governor Hyde appointed Victor Miller a member of the board and if now the Governor finds that Miller is obstructing the work of the board by failure to co-ordinate with the other members he is entirely justified in removing him.

* * * *

St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

[Editorial March 18, 1922]

It is impossible to measure the injury done St. Louis by Victor Miller's vicious attack. It is impossible to measure the wrong done the boys and girls of our high schools. The offense, so far as we know, is without precedent. The offender can never make reparation in full. But while Miller is pondering the apology which should have been extended instantly and gladly, Governor Hyde can act.

Miller's resignation should not wait upon Miller's retraction. The resignation should be demanded at once. That much, Governor Hyde, is due our slandered schools and outraged city, in decency, justice and honor.

* * * *

St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

[Editorial March 11, 1922]

The whole tenor and substance of Mr. Miller's utterances about the schools and the boys and girls of the schools, society in the West End, the movies and the business men were intemperate, unprincipled and demagogic; it was unprecedented defamation of his own city.

Mr. Miller's resignation is in order. That would be a measure of reparation. If he is so blind to his offense that he will not resign, Governor Hyde should remove him. He owes that to the people of St. Louis.

These papers represent every shade of partisan and non-partisan opinion. The St. Louis Times is a Republican paper. The Globe-Democrat has Republican leanings. The Star is now the organ of Mr. Miller. The Post-Dispatch is non-partisan. But they were in perfect agreement as to Mr. Miller's unfitness as a public official.

Is Mr. Miller likely to be more fit and efficient as Mayor than he was as Police Comissioner?

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"A fresh and somewhat vicious wave of liquidation on Monday opened the week with stocks dropping to new low levels for the year. Industrial shares fell to a position about 12 points below their peak of early March, thus wiping out a third of their net gain in the bull market that started late last spring. Railroad shares swelled their loss to about 8 points before the Monday decline was checked, or, roughly, a third of all that had been added between the low level of 1924 and the early March peak. A substantial rally followed the Monday break and the whole market became more quiet. While the upward movement was not resumed, the position of securities generally appeared to be somewhat more comfortable as the week wore on. On Friday, for the first time since election, the volume of transactions fell below a million shares. It seemed to show that both bulls and bears, for the moment at least, are more inclined to watch the situation closely than to undertake new ventures.

Overbought Condition Factor.

"Evidences multiply that the March reaction was brought on by an overbought condition of the markets. The state of industry and trade had improved step by step since last summer, but as always happens when the public begins to buy, stocks had been bid up too fast. It is not surprising that they were. Perhaps the very promise of clear skies for the months immediately ahead was enough in itself to lead undiscriminating business rested on a firm foundation and relatively cheap money was assured for future months, they could see no troubles ahead for stocks. That the market position of stocks after a long rise never is invulnerable, however, has been demonstrated times without number. Advances invite speculation. Profits are made the basis of further purchases, and as the pyramid of holdings is enlarged, corrective reactions become inevitable.

"In periods of depression in business stocks eventually fall lower than economic conditions justify, and in periods of prosperity they may likewise sell too high. While industry still is operating at good speed, and the volume of trade is large, we now are beginning to see more clearly than before certain limitations to profits. Commodity prices, for example, have been consistently receding of late. The first general index of the price movement during the past month to be published shows a decline of 3.7 per cent between March 1 and April 1. Not in more than three years has this index revealed so sharp a loss for any one month. Grain prices are heavily weighted in this index and the break in wheat goes far to explain the sharp drop indicated for the past month in the price level. There is reason to believe that the other indices, when published, will show a more moderate recession. The reaction in grains, incidentally, has had its psychological effect in the securities markets.

Situation in Bond Market.

"Very little has been said in the general discussions about bonds, although their position is highly significant. The upswing in bond prices from the greatly depressed levels of 1920 to the peak of September, 1922, is familiar history. After reaching their peak, bond prices reacted sharply until the spring of 1923, when they became more or less stabilized. During 1924, however, and the first quarter of 1925, bond prices have crept forward little by little until now they stand again about even with their 1922 peak. New offerings so far have exceeded 1924 volume, but our large institutions still are unable to find sufficient good bonds to satisfy their demands. Close relations usually can be discovered between major movements in the bond and stock markets, but down to date gilt-edged obligations have held firm, while stocks have softened.

"An exception must be made to the general group of foreign bonds listed on our markets, for while domestic issues have been steady or strengthening generally, dollar bonds of foreign governments have been scarcely able to maintain their position. In the case of French obligations, for example, the market has shown perceptible signs of weakness, notwithstanding the general improvement in the position of the franc. Such situations are explained in part, of course, by support of the exchanges from overseas. Announcement of the resignation of Finance Minister Clementel drove the French franc down about 6 points, but in a few hours, when it was learned that the currency crisis might be averted for the time, most of this loss was recovered.

Small Short Session.

"Today's short session on the stock market was a replica of yesterday's five-hour session. The volume of business continued small and fluctuations were confined within narrow limits. For the first time since election sales dropped below 500,000 shares for a two-hour trading period. The turnover of about 386,000 shares compared with a record high on Jan. 3 of almost 1,780,000 and with an average of nearly 1,000,000 in the active upward movement that began early in November. Industrials moved irregularly, prices as a rule holding within a fraction of last night's close. Some of the motors were fairly active and in good demand. One of the prominent Stock Exchange houses suggested an upward revision of prices for leaders in this group based on the fact that bankers paid for the Dodge Company 7½ times the estimated earnings for this year. These were the suggested prices: General Motors 90, Studebaker 67, Maxwell B 75, Hudson 60, Chandler 45, Packard 30, Pierce Arrow preferred 80, Cleveland 37, Jordan 56 and Willys-Overland preferred 105.

"The ticker dragged monotonously through most of the session, spurts of activity developing only at intervals. In view of the further unsettlement in grain markets this response on the part of securities was regarded as a favorable sign. Cotton fell back on weaker foreign markets and weather advices which were considered bearish.

Foreign Exchanges Firmer.

"French francs, to the surprise of many traders, displayed strength, due largely to buying in London. The further recovery was unexpected in view of the developments yesterday in Paris which were calculated to threaten sustained flight of capital. Sterling was firmer, while Scandinavian rates dropped in quiet trading.

"Actual aggregate reserve of the Clearing House banks, shown in the weekly statement, was $591,866,000, and the excess reserve amounted to $310,970, against $23,891,020 last week. Net demand deposits increased $6,762,000, while loans, discounts, etc. increased $19,296,000.

STANDARD OILS PROMINENT IN TRADE OF WEEK ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Pronounced strength in the public utility list with several issues recording substantial advances at the opening featured a comparatively quiet holiday session on the curb exchange today. Of chief interest was the sharp upturn in Tennessee Electric Power, which rose 4⅛ points to 58⅝. Commonwealth Power advanced eight points and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore also was in demand at a gain of about a point. There was a substantial reversal in Glen Alden Coal, which recovered about 6 points, selling to 130. Petroleum shares were neglected and slight recessions were registered in the more prominent issues. Standard Oil of Indiana opened a point higher, but failed to maintain the advance. Creole continued in demand, moving up to 13¼.

The failure announced early in the week had an acutely unsettling influence on many stocks when the suspension was announced, one stock, Royal Canadian then falling from 7 to ⅛, a large number of issues being traded in under the rule to close accounts. After this episode, the market quickly developed a steadier tone.

Standard Oil issues came into prominence following the announcement of the absorption of Pan-American by Standard Oil of Indiana on Wednesday, the Indiana shares making an advance of four points and selling at a new high for recent trading. Many of the other Standard Oil issues including New York, Prairie Oil and South Pennsylvania advanced 2 to 5 points from their low levels. Miscellaneous oil stocks also were active and strong. Salt Creek which declared an extra dividend moved up over two points. Continental Oil also rose over two points.

The week's trading included bullish activities in a number of the radio issues as a result of the settlement reached with the French patentees. Freed Eisemann ranged from 7½ to 13 and Hazeltine had a quick advance from 16¾ to 24. These gains, however, were made on a comparatively small amount of business and were reduced within a short time.

The coal stocks after showing weakness developed strength at the end of the week. Lehigh Valley Coal after dropping four points to 33 moved up over 8 points. Nickel Plate common stock yielded 2½ points to 83½.

Metal Review

NEW YORK, April 4.—The heavy production and large deliveries of steel during March left the steel market at the beginning of the second quarter in a rather unsteady position. Buying has been slow during the week, except in a few cases, and there is a noticeable disposition on the part of producers to reduce their output to conform with the slackening demand while prices are showing a reactionary tendency.

Pig iron was quiet with demand mostly for small lots and prices lower owing to foreign competition.

Copper unsettled. After selling off to 13½c, prices stiffened upon rather a sharp upturn in London and some business was reported at advances of ⅛c to ¼c from the lowest. Demand failed to broaden materially, however, while London eased off again and the improvement was barely maintained with sellers reported at the 13⅝c level at the end of the week. Exports have shown a little more interest around 13¾c, buyers generally are holding off and are believed to have had their more immediate needs well covered.

Tin continued its downward trend in face of favorable monthly statistics, owing to uneasiness abroad. Consumers bought moderately around inside prices.

Lead sympathized with the other markets and eased a little, but the situation is generally regarded as healthy and present prices preclude the likelihood of importations of metals.

Zinc weakened early, but producers reduced offerings and a better tone developed. Demand was moderate.

Antimony held steady in face of a light demand. Bullish cables came from China.

BANK OF ENGLAND RESERVES REACH HIGHEST SINCE 1920

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 4.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"The outlook for the immediate future still favors financial rather than commercial activities. This view is based mainly on the prospect of continued easy money resulting from stagnant trade, though some believe that the conclusion of a political agreement and Great Britain's return to the gold standard may yet impart a stimulus over to international commerce.

"A favorable impression has been created by the reported abandonment of the policy of preferences by the Union of South Africa. This follows as a result of the growing restiveness in Australia, and it is conceivable that this action on the part of the British dominions may occasion a revulsion of feeling here not necessarily toward protectionism, but toward imperial preference.

"This is the more probable because purely British banks have been increasingly taking an interest through purchase of shares of overseas banks, especially those connected with financing the British dominions. Such interest in some instances amounts to actual control.

"The latest statement of the Bank of England is encouraging in that it points to early establishment of the gold standard. The reserve has reached the highest point since 1920, when the total was greatly increased temporarily because joint stock land banks placed about £20,000,000 in gold held privately into the central reserve.

"Moreover, it must be remembered that the banks' reserve is somewhat stronger than apparent because about £27,000,000 in bank notes is held in the currency reserve and to the Bank of England's holdings of £29,000,000 in bullion must be added £27,000,000 in the currency reserve.

"Good effects of the sound monetary policy are seen in the fact that the Government has been able since the beginning of the year to place £90,000,000 in new conversion loans to provide for maturing obligations without producing a ripple on the financial markets.

"It is significant also that the issue of £30,000,000 just offered, after allowing for accrued interest has been placed on terms as favorable as the issue of January, although in the meanwhile the bank rate has been raised from 4 to 5 per cent."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Under the lead of the motor stocks today's market was strong, making its best prices at the close. Oil shares were up a half point to a point and there was quite a bit of covering in the steels. The big jump in Delaware and Hudson was associated with gossip about a segregation of its coal properties.

The street was increasingly impressed by the price paid for the Dodge Brothers property. The spectacular rise continued in Nash Motors but without any explanation beyond the familiar talk of a capital split-up. Pierce Arrow preferred was actively bought, crossing 50, where it was 2 points higher. Maxwell Motors "A" got to 90 for the first time and the "B" stock was equally strong.

Strength of California Pete preferred was a reminder that this stock is retirable at 120. Other oil shares were fractionally higher for the most part, among them Marland, Phillips and Sinclair.

Buying was actively resumed in a number of industrial specialties. Among these were Radio Corporation, the Mallinson issues, Loft Incorporated, Industrial Alcohol, Hudson and Manhattan, Bush Terminal, Allied Chemical and Vivaudo. Delaware and Hudson was the feature of the rails with a jump of over 6 points. A further recovery occurred in Union Pacific.

The Bond Market.

The firmness which became so pronounced on Friday was again evident in bond trading today. United States Government loans added to their gains of the day before, the fourth 4¼s making a new high for the year to date. There was also today unusual activity at advancing prices in the tax exempt 3½s.

The tractions were prominent, especially Chicago Railways 5s, Brooklyn Manhattan Transit 6s and the Interborough bonds generally. The Chicago Railways issue rallied a trifle from the low of Friday. The Brooklyn Manhattan Transit bonds were very firm but there was some further selling of Interborough obligations, notably the 7 per cent notes. Third Avenue adjustments and Refunding 4s were higher. In the railroad group, Seaboard Airline bonds were again in demand with fractional advances in the refunding 4s and the Consolidated 6s. A new high was touched by South Porto Rico 7s.

Foreign bonds were steady, the nervousness which was apparent in the French list on Friday subsiding. Department of the Seine 7s rallied a half point and French Government 7s were a shade higher. French Railways had a slightly better market. French Cities 6s were still heavy.

In Financial Field

NEW YORK, April 4.

Surplus of $2,298,024 for 1924 in contrast to a deficit of $2,564,366 in 1923 is reported by the Atlantic Refining Co., which increased its gross revenues to $124,283,374 from $117,624,931. Net profit was $4,698,374, equal after preferred dividends to $6.59 a share on the common stock, against $835,634 or $4.17 a share on the preferred the year before.

The report of the Kansas City Southern for 1924 shows net income of $1,981,802 after taxes and charges, equivalent after preferred dividends to $3.81 a share on $29,959,900 common stock. Net income the year before was $2,773,433 or $6.45 a share, which included a credit of $1,015,801 received from the United States Railroad Administration in payment of the road's claim while under Federal control. With this item deducted, the balance of $1,757,632 was equal to $3.06 a share on the common.

Gross revenues of the St. Louis, San Francisco Railroad increased $326,726 in March to $7,357,094, a preliminary statement shows, making a gain of $1,189,570 since the first of the year with a total of $22,044,224.

The conference at Washington next Monday between governors of 12 Federal Reserve banks and members of the Federal Reserve Board, primarily to discuss credit conditions in various reserve districts, is expected to last several days and probably will deal with problems which may arise from enlarged gold exports and the pending return of Britain to a gold basis.

Several changes are expected in the Board of Directors of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railway Co. at the annual stockholders' meeting in St. Louis next Friday. A banking house which bought a large block of "Katy" stocks in the last few months will be given representation on the board, it is understood.

Wall Street's surprise over the Delaware & Hudson Co.'s decision to segregate its coal holdings, which was reflected in an eight-point spurt in the stock, was heightened by the manner in which the information was made public. The first intimation of the railroad's plans was gleaned from an inconspicuous reading notice to stockholders which appeared in the advertising columns of the morning newspapers. Although no mention was made of a distribution to stockholders, it was assumed that the proposed transfer of the properties to a separate corporation would be the initial step in passing them on to shareholders. With its coal holdings segregated, the road also was felt to be in a much better position to consider consolidation plans.

Operating profit of the Columbia Steel Co. for 1924 declined to $790,225, after depreciation and depletion from $961,- in 1923. After providing for interest and Federal taxes surplus amounted to $295,107 in contrast to $676,432 the year before.

Bank clearings throughout the country for the week, compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, aggregated $10,319,625,330, against $8,920,741,808 a year ago, an increase of 15.7 per cent. New York City showed a gain of 21.2 per cent.

WHEAT DEVELOPS STRENGTH AS WEEK DRAWS TO CLOSE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 4.—James A. Patten succeeded to the bull leadership in the grain markets today. It was his expression of opinion that the recent selling had been overdone and that prices had been depressed below their real value that was largely responsible for the bull turn in the market. It is believed that he did not confine his activities to talk alone, but much of the buying had the appearance of coming from him.

This activity and strength lightened up an otherwise gloomy week for the trade in general. Liquidation was in evidence throughout the week and prices for all grains made new low marks, many of them selling at lower marks than registered before this season.

Wheat started firm. There was not pressure on the market that has been in evidence for some time and many shorts were disposed to take advantage of the dips to collect profits on their activities for the week. For some time the market acted a little groggy, but the buying power on the dips finally made itself felt and before the day was over prices had recovered more than 5c of this week's losses, which have resulted from liquidation and stop-loss selling.

At the close today a feeling of confidence had been developed and many expressed the opinion that the time of falling prices has at last come to an end. They based their opinion on the fact that there still is a world shortage and on the mediocre outlook for the new crop. Export business was slack and the weakness in Liverpool was the cause. The French political situation is affecting the market abroad. Milling sales of wheat today were 13,000 bushels. At the close prices were 2¼c to 4⅝c higher than yesterday, reducing the losses for the week to 4⅝c to 14¼c: May, $1.43¼ to $1.43; July, $1.33¼ to $1.33; Sept., $1.26⅞ to $1.26¾.

Corn closed 2⅝c to ¼c higher than yesterday, but recorded losses of 12¾c to 15c as compared with last Saturday. Liquidation was most severe throughout the week and the renewal of investment buying today was a welcome factor to the bull side. Selling of the week evidently has been overdone.

Shipping sales were 97,000 bushels. Local shippers report exporters exhibiting more interest, but their offers are still too far out of line to warrant anticipations of any good-sized business being put through in the immediate future. May corn closed 95¼c to 95c; July, 99⅛c to 99⅜c; Sept., $1.00¾ to $1.01.

Oats simply reflected the action of other grains throughout the week. Prices are cheap and this is the only attraction for the bulls because excessive supplies discourage investment. Cash oats are beginning to move more freely at these prices and this is a hopeful sign for a better future. Shipping sales today were 117,000 bushels. Market closed 1⅝c to 1⅜c higher for the day and 4½c to 7⅝c lower for the week.

Provisions were affected by cross currents in the news throughout the week. The strength in hogs encouraged investment buying, but the extreme weakness in grain tended to shake the confidence of the new owners. Lard today was 22½c to 30c higher; ribs, 17½c to 27½c higher, and bellies 15c to 20c higher. For the week lard was unchanged to 7½c lower, ribs, 22½c to 25c lower and bellies 45c to 50c lower.

Hogs closed higher, sheep and lambs lower, and cattle on a mixed basis last week at the St. Louis National Stockyards. Receipts were light in all departments. Arrivals of cattle and calves for the six-day period were 16,853 head, a slight decrease from the previous week. Quality of the run graded plain. Beef steers started out lower for the week, but strengthened in later trading and closed steady to 25c higher, the advance applying to the medium and light weight offerings. The bulk of sales was $8.50 to $9.75 per cwt., and best available droves scored $10.25 and $10.35. Several cars of South Texas steers [illegible] $7 to $7.85. Light steers and heifers made up a good portion of the run and selling in this department slowed up to some extent. Closing prices were steady to 25c lower. The bulk of sales was $8.50 to $10.25 and tops scored up to $10.85. The better grades of beef cows moved up 25c, bulk selling at $5.25 to $6.75 and tops scoring $8 or better. Low-grade cows, including canners and cutters, proved weak to 25c lower. Cutters were quotable at $3 to $4 and canners at $2.25 to $3. Bulls encountered a firm trade and closed full steady. Bolognas ranged from $4 for a common kind to $5 and $5.25 for best, and weighty beef animals scored $5 to $6. Canner and cutter grades were quoted at $3 to $4. Stocker and feeder steers, in light supply, ruled steady on best and slow, barely steady, on the plainer kinds. Sales varied largely from $5 to $8.15. Veal calves advanced sharply after getting off to a slow start Monday. The closing basis for best lights was $12.50 to $12.75, against $11 a week ago. Southern canner yearlings closed at $3.50 to $4.25.

Hog Receipts Light.

Receipts in the hog department continued light in volume the past week. Prices, however, taking a sharply lower trend in spite of this fact during the early part of the six-day session. Total offerings for 11 markets during the week was 385,900 head, compared with a run of 498,640 for the previous week and 679,440 during the same week a year ago. The week's opening top was $13.65. This figure went down to $13.20 by Wednesday. The remaining session of the week witnessed rising values and the early loss was more than regained by the closing of Saturday deals. Top that day reached $13.80 for best butcher hogs with the bulk of offerings from 190 pounds average and over selling at $13.65 to $13.75, approximately 15c higher than the previous week's close. The lighter grades, too, showed advances of 15c in price, sales of the weights from 160 to 180 pounds in a spread of $13.40 to $13.65. Buyers during the past week showed less favor toward the extreme heavy hogs than has been the case for some time recently, more interest being shown in the mediu mand handy weight butcher classes. Weights meeting with the best inquiry are those from 190 to 220 pounds. Pigs ruled strong to 25c higher for the week, advances in price scored by the weightier offerings. Strong weight kinds averaging from 130 to 150 pounds show 25c gain at $12.50 to $13.25 largely, occasional sales of some of the choicest kinds at even higher figures. Medium weight kinds from 110 to 130 pounds at $11.50 to $12.50 also show 25c higher values with the lighter kinds and pee wees anywhere from steady to 25c up. Prices on these kinds are very uneven, ranging from $9.50 to $11 on best killing kinds to $7 on the plainer stocker varieties. Packer sows show 25c loss from last week with closing sales on this class around $12.25 mostly. Stags are generally steady at $10 to $11 mainly. Closing quotations on the different classes are as follows: Best butchers from 190 pounds and up $13.65 to $13.80; lighter hogs 160 to 180 pounds $13.40 to $13.65; strong weight pigs 130 to 150 pounds $12.50 to $13.25, medium weights 110 to 130 pounds $11.50 to $12.50 and lighter kinds $7 to $9.50. Sows $12 to $12.25 and stags $10 to $11.

Lower Trend to Sheep.

Although sheep and lamb receipts continued light, prices showed a lower trend the past week. Receipts at 11 markets for the six-day period totaled 194,125 head, against 231,075 the previous week and 171,075 for the corresponding week last year. The week's top on wool lambs stopped at $15.50 to packer buyers, butchers, however, paying up to $15.75 for a short load of fancy offerings. Some good quality Nebraska lambs sold at $15.50, with some heavy offerings from this territory at $14.75. A double deck of Mexican lambs brought $15. Clipped lambs made up a good proportion of the week's offerings, prices on this class for the week ranging from $10.25 to $11.75, two loads of handy-weight lambs making the latter-named figure. Heavier kinds sold downward to $10.25, this price taking in some lambs averaging up to 115 pounds. Sheep receipts were light with small bunches making up the week's supply of this class. Best offerings of mutton ewes sold up to $9.50, with the plainer grades down around $8 to $8.50. Shorn ewes sold mostly around $8. A consignment of clipped yearlings and 2-year-olds sold mixed at $9.25. These prices look mostly 25c lower than last week's close, gains made during the mid-week sessions overcoming in part the loss of 50c suffered during opening deals.

Quotations for the different classes of sheep and lambs are as follows: Good to choice lambs, $14.50 to $15.75; medium to good, $13.50 to $14, and plain to medium and culls, $10.50 to $13.50; good to choice mutton ewes (wool), $9 to $9.50; medium to good, $8 to $9, and plain to medium $7 to $8. Choppers and bucks, $4.50 to $5.50, and canners $3 to $4.50; good to choice Angora goats, $3 to $4; fat Angora kids, $6 to $7.50; fat hair goats, $3 to $3.50, and fat hair kids, $5 to $6.50. Thin and common goats, $1 to $2.

Horses and Mules.

Approximately 550 horses and mules comprised the week's run in this department at the St. Louis National Stockyards, the smallest in many weeks. The horse market again ruled steady to strong, with a good demand prevailing for chunks and work stock. The Southern trade was not particularly active and little cheap stock continued on a low basis.

The mule market was rather slow, notwithstanding the reduced supply. Kentucky, Tennessee and Southeast Missouri were in the market for some farm mules and some of the offerings right out of work and some good chunks moved to good advantage. Big mules were quiet, however, and there was not much trade in cotton mules.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, April 4.—The raw wool market closed the week quietly and with prices mostly unchanged, except for South American wools, which have declined. Montevideo 3s are offered as low as 46c grease basis in bond, a decline for the week of 5c. Four's are around 45c and five's 42c to 43c.

MEANS INDICTED ON CHARGE OF FORGERY

Said to Have Signed Name of Senator Brookhart to Letter for Records.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Gaston B. Means was indicted here today for forgery in connection with the Senate Daugherty investigation, in which he was a spectacular witness. He immediately pleaded not guilty and was released on $1000 bail.

Means, the "master salesman" who recently was convicted in New York in a liquor conspiracy case and sentenced to two years in Federal prison, is accused in the indictment with having forged the name of Senator Brookhart to a letter purporting to direct Means to deliver his records, files, diaries and letters to the Daugherty committee.

During the inquiry Means caused a sensation by announcing that the great mass of records from which he had been testifying had been stolen. Committee members were dubious when he explained that two men had come to his home and presented a letter purporting to bear Senator Brookhart's signature and directing that the records be delivered to them.

To support his story Means presented to Brookhart what he claimed was the letter in question. Brookhart pronounced the signature a forgery.

Typhoid Menace in Tornado Area.

By the Associated Press.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., April 4.—Dr. William R. Redden, director of Red Cross medical service in the tornado-stricken area, last night advised all relief workers and residents in the devastated area to submit to inoculation with typhoid serum at once, to prevent an outbreak of typhoid fever. Dr. Redden declared that a menace existed because of possible contamination of milk and water supplies, despite the fact that precautions had been taken by the Red Cross relief organizations.

CHICAGO SANITARY DISTRICT CHARGED WITH VIOLATING LAW

Izaak Walton League Complains of Pollution of Communities Along Illinois River.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Charging the Chicago Sanitary District with visiting flood and pestilence upon farms and communities along the Illinois River, the Izaak Walton League of America today called upon the Federal Government to make the district obey the laws of Illinois.

In a resolution alleging violations of State laws, the league declared the Illinois River had been made an open sewer. Congress was asked to provide in bills dealing with the withdrawal of waters from Lake Michigan, that the Chicago district might receive no permits to withdraw water until it had "given adequate assurance that its canals would not be used to discharge waters now prohibited by the laws of Illinois."

It was recommended that such waterways bills require the "immediate and effective erection of sufficient sewage disposal plants to purify waste before it is discharged" and that they direct the Secretary of War to enforce such bills, and to station an officer of the regular army at Chicago in charge of machinery and gates.

The water level of the Illinois River had been so swollen by sewage, the resolution alleged, that it had overflown its banks, reaching a higher flood stage than previously known. The resolution added that while Chicago was the chief offender, other cities contributed to the alleged pollution. It recommended also steps to prevent pollution of Lake Michigan.

In another resolution a nationwide campaign against pollution of streams and lakes was urged, with particular reference to infection of bathers and swimmers.

Woman Admits Robbery.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 4.—Ellen Julia Coyne, 21 years old, and Schuyler Young, 26, filling station bandits, were held for the Wyandotte County District Court today when they pleaded guilty to three first degree robbery charges. Bonds on each count were fixed at $10,000 by Judge Carson. The three filling station robberies netted the two approximately $100.

STATE RESTS IN CASE OF INDIAN DANCE GIRL

British Officer Who Helped Rescue Her From Attackers Is Last Witness.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, India, April 4.—The prosecution concluded its case today in the preliminary hearing of the nine men charged with attempting last January to abduct Mumtaz Begum, the Nautch girl and erstwhile favorite of the Maharaja of Indore.

It is expected the accused will be committed Monday for trial in the higher court at Madras, the change of venue being on the plea of the defense that a Bombay jury would be biased in favor of the prosecution.

Lieut. Saegert, a British officer, who was conspicuous in the rescue of Mumtaz when she was attacked while in company of Abdul Kadir Baula, wealthy Mohammedan merchant who was killed in the encounter, was the last witness for the prosecution. He said the assailants of Mumtaz kept up a continuous attack on himself and the other British officers who rushed to the rescue of the Nautch girl and her companion, the attacking party at the same time attempting to get possession of Mumtaz.

The efforts of the assailants failed through the exertions of the officers who used their fists and golf clubs and finally disarmed the attacking party. Lieut. Saegert identified Shafi Ahmed, who is commander of the Indore Mounted Police, and Sham Rao Dighe, Captain of the Indore Air Force, as being among the assailants.

SCHELDT CONTROVERSY ENDS

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, APRIL 4.—The Dutch and Belgian Foreign Ministers yesterday signed a new convention settling a controversy that has lasted many years over the treaty of 1839, regulating the navigation of the Scheldt.

The new convention provides that the Scheldt shall be closed to warships in war time, but shall be open to all other vessels both in war and peace times. A new and more efficient joint board, to replace the commission provided for in the old treaty will exercise supervision both over the Scheldt and the Terneuzen Calanl. The question of the contested Dutch claim to sovereignty over the Wielingen channel was declared to lie outside the scope of the new convention, both Holland and Belgium maintaining their claims.

Argument on Tip Delays Robbers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Five youthful robbers today entered the offices of Weitzner, Trupkin & Co., spent an hour collecting and neatly wrapping loot consisting of $10,000 worth of furs, then leaving 14 persons tied in chairs, descended by elevator and drove away. An argument with the elevator operator over a tip for handling the bundles delayed the robbers' escape several minutes.

EX-DRY AGENTS SENTENCED

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Two former prohibition officers, John Holm and Thomas E. Jones, were sentenced to one year in prison and fined $300 each by Federal Judge Cliffe today on charges of extortion. Their case marks the eighth conviction among prohibition officers in the Federal courts here, according to P. T. Roche, special agent.

Holm and Jones pleaded guilty a few days ago and were sentenced to serve a year in the Dupage and Dekalb county jails, respectively. They were charged with having extorted $4000 from three officers of the Fort Dearborn Grocery Co., although the defendants insisted that the money was virtually forced on them by weeping men who cried that they would be ruined if the agents arrested them.

Negro, 17, Gets Life Term.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SHELBYVILLE, Ill., April 4.—Found guilty of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of William Funkhouser, 70 years old, a Mattoon, Ill., newspaper solicitor, John Howard, 17 years old, Alabama negro, was sentenced to life imprisonment today and immediately taken to Chester penitentiary. A verdict of guilty, with recommendation of life imprisonment, was returned by the jury at 8 a. m. after being in session since 4:18 p. m. Friday. The defense had based its plea for imprisonment on the slayer's youth and on the testimony of relatives that he had been feeble minded since birth.

Victor J. Miller AND HIS OFFICIAL RECORD

Reckless Utterances of Candidate Which Led to His Losing Police Board Place Continued in Campaign.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Post-Dispatch.)

For the information of readers, the Post-Dispatch publishes below a summary of facts and records printed from day to day bearing on the question of the unfitness of the Republican candidate, Victor J. Miller, for the office of Mayor.

The Kentucky Bond Trick.

Evidence taken from the records of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Kentucky bears directly upon the question of Miller's integrity and character. It exposes his duplicity and dishonesty.

In order to avoid putting up $1500 every month to secure subscribers to the American Indemnity Exchange,' of which Miller was the head and attorney-in-fact, he induced the Workmen's Compensation Board to accept a bond to protect the subscribers in their liabilities above $25,000, to injured workmen. He then wrote a letter to a representative of the American Indemnity Exchange, boasting that the bond was worthless; that he had secured it with that understanding from the Southern Surety Co., of which he was the principal stockholder, and that he had put it over on the chairman of the board. Following are excerpts from the letter bearing on this subject, taken from the files of the board:

"For your private and confidential information I will state that this bond is in reality not worth the paper it is written on. It in no way obligates the Southern Surety Co., and I secured it with that understanding and so worded the contract.

"We secured this bond in order that we might induce the Workmen's Compensation Board to quit making us put up $1500 per month in the First National Bank of Louisville. It had the desired effect and the very brilliant chairman of the board was not able to see that there is no liability under the contract."

In a subsequent hearing, when the bond was referred to as "fraudulent," Miller dodged and tried to evade responsibility for it by denials and quibbling answers, but finally confessed that as attorney-in-fact for the company he was responsible.

On the stand, under oath, when Miller was asked if he had dictated the letter, a copy of which was shown him, he answered evasively: "I think that is the substance of it."

Later in the examination a member of the board asked: "You wrote this, however?" Miller said: "I did."

Another question was: "In your letter you assume all responsibility. You say 'I secured it' (the bond)."

Miller answer, "Yes, I secured it."

When finally asked: "Why did you do it at all?" Miller replied "I made a mistake."

When Miller induced the board to accept a bond in lieu of money indemnity, he made and signed the following affidavit before A. C. C. Schoknecht, a St. Louis notary public:

Victor J. Miller, attorney in fact for subscribers at American Indemnity Exchange, on his oath states that there is now in force a bond issued by the Southern Surety Co. in favor of subscribers at American Indemnity Exchange, by the terms of which said Southern Surety Co. has agreed to pay all losses of American Indemnity Exchange in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), which said American Indemnity Exchange may suffer on account of an accident at any of the subscribers' operations.

On the stand under oath Miller admitted that he had made the affidavit and when asked the question, "Did you make that affidavit?" he replied "Yes, I did."

After many evasions, he was forced to admit it was not a good contract. In reply to the question: "You say it was secured with the understanding it was not good, and you worded it?" he answered, "In my opinion it was not a desirable contract, and I say that as an insurance man."

Subsequently, a valid bond from [illegible] was filed. The American Indemnity Exchange is now in the hands of a receiver, but the condition of the company has not yet been reported.

The Guardian Home Savings Trust.

Victor J. Miller was one of the organizers, promoters and trustees of the Guardian Home Savings Trust. This concern was organized and got its license from the State October, 1921. It was thrown into a receivership May 4, 1922, through a suit brought by Millspaugh with 31 other similar trusts known as Housing Trusts. A decision by the Missouri Supreme Court condemned concerns of this kind as lotteries.

When Miller was asked "What became of some of the money paid into the Guardian Trust?" he said, "Blood sucking attorneys got it," although he himself was a member of a firm of attorneys which received a fee of $15,000 from the assets of the Night and Day Bank.

Official lawlessness characterized the reign of Victor J. Miller as President of the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners. There were wholesale arrests, invasions of private rooms in hotels, hotel restaurants, and homes, without warrant, at all hours of the night and early morning, denial of the right of prisoners to confer privately with counsel, and reckless criminal charges which the courts did not uphold.

"Treat 'em rough!" "Beat 'em up." were the orders issued to policemen. Under these orders men under suspicion were picked up and held for 20 hours; in many cases were slugged by policemen with the consent and approval of Miller, who said in the public press of criminals: "What they need is a good hot beating." And he also said, "They (the police) know that if they beat up a crook who needs beating, they are not going to lose their jobs."

Under this order the police were free to arrest anyone on suspicion, beat them up, and hold them practically incommunicado for 20 hours.

Miller organized a "night riders" squad, who traveled about the city in fast cars making raids, arresting suspects, in some cases shooting at cars.

Miller himself, heavily armed, frequently accompanied the night riders and raiding parties.

Restaurants were raided in searches for flasks of whisky and the guests were indiscriminately arrested without regard to their constitutional rights. On one morning, March 22, 39 women and eight men who had been taken into the calaboose were taken to the court of Police Judge Ittner, now Circuit Judge. He dismissed the prisoners and rebuked the police for bringing people into court without sufficient evidence to convict them.

On Jan. 22, 1922, the rooms of guests in the Claridge Hotel were invaded and searched without warrant. Women as well as men were subjected to this indignity.

On January the Bevo Mill, a high-class restaurant on the Gravois road, was invaded and guests at tables searched without warrant.

Doors were broken in in these raids.

Homes were invaded. Among a number of raids, one was made on the home of William Sandweg, manager of the American National Insurance Co., at 5324 North Market street.

This was in May, 1921. Detectives searched the home at 2 o'clock in the morning, without warrant and without reason, and found nothing. Sandweg, his wife and children were awakened, and police went through the house with flashlights.

Miller was appointed president of the board by Gov. Hyde in April, 1921. He was removed from the presidency for his scandalous charges against the boys and girls of Soldan High School by Gov. Hyde, his close friend and political associate, in April, 1922.

When He Was Police Commissioner, the Police Invaded Homes and Hotel Rooms Without Warrant.

On April 13, 1923, Gov. Hyde removed him from the Police Board because he created discord and factionalism, which threatened to ruin the board's work.

Reckless Utterances.

During his incumbency as president of the Police Board Miller made many speeches filled with reckless charges and statements, which raised storms of protests from citizens. December, 1921, in a speech before the St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce, he was quoted as assailing the ex-service men, stating that 70 per cent of the criminals came from the ranks of ex-service men.

Under heavy protests from officers of the American Legion who threatened to appeal to the Governor for his removal, he claimed that he had been misquoted and misunderstood.

In a public speech, he assailed the firemen as loafers and "expert penuchle players."

The climax of his reckless speech was reached in his vile charges against the moral character of the pupils, boys and girls, of Soldan High School. In a public speech on March 9, 1922, he charged that vice clubs existed among the girls and boys of the school, the qualification for membership in which was admitted immorality. He said he had high authority for the charge that such an organization existed among the girls; and he knew that such a society, with similar admission requirement, existed among the boy students.

This charge raised a tornado of anger and protest from citizens of all walks of life. All the newspapers of the city scathingly denounced him for reflecting upon the moral character of school pupils and scandalizing St. Louis with reckless utterances.

Indignation among the parents of Soldan pupils resulted in the organizing of an investigating committee composed of Judge William Dee Becker, of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, chairman; M. G. Seelig, Mrs. J. H. Krebs, Mrs. M. G. Gorin and Charles Cunliff, father of the Director of Public Welfare. The committee conferred with Miller, heard all the witnesses he named and all the evidence he submitted. Finding no evidence to substantiate the Miller charges, the committee made a report declaring that they were false.

The committee gave Miller an opportunity to retract the false charges. The report stated:

> Such a conference was thereupon held with Mr. Miller, and after going over the matter fully from every possible angle, Mr. Miller stated that in the light of the evidence he regretted exceedingly having made these specific charges, and that he would prepare, sign and hand to the committee the following day a retraction of his statement that vice clubs existed at Soldan High School.

Miller evaded his promise and failed to retract. Thereupon the committee made the following report:

> Your committee, therefore, unanimously reports that Mr. Victor J. Miller, president of the Police Commissioners of the City of St. Louis, has utterly failed to substantiate his charge that vice clubs existed or are now in existence in Soldan High School.
> In addition, your committee having made an investigation of its own, is thoroughly convinced that no such vice clubs existed or now exist among the students of the school.

Twenty-five days later, on the demand of the press and the people, Gov. Hyde ousted Miller from the presidency of the Police Board.

That Victor J. Miller has not changed his habits of speech and his methods or his unscrupulous recklessness, is amply proved by his speeches in the campaign. He has made all sorts of delusive promises to the people and has viciously assailed his opponents as "thugs, thieves, gangsters, blackmailers and liars." He has tried to blacken the character of his opponent, William L. Igoe, by painting him as the friend and tool of gangsters and declaring that he would put men like Dinty Colbeck and Jelly Roll Hogan in the city hall. He answered the facts and records printed by the Post-Dispatch by calling this newspaper a thieving, blackmailing newspaper, controlled by thugs and gangsters. He even accused some of the clergymen with being the dupes of gangsters and shouting to put gangsters in the city hall.

COOLIDGE FACES A HARD TASK TO HOLD ASCENDANCY

If He Is to Win Party Prestige for Another Victory, He Must Do It in Two Years.

CONGRESS LIKELY TO THWART PLANS

Insurgents Stand in Way—Gloomy Outlook for G. O. P. in Next Congressional Election.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 4.

IF MR. COOLIDGE expects to achieve anything of a legislative nature out of which to carve a platform for party success in 1928, a feat which thus far has proved beyond his powers—he will have to get it done during the next two years, at the hands of the first Congress of his present term. With the Senate independents and insurgents of his party likely to balk him at any time, the outlook for acceptance of any of his major policies during these two years is bleak enough; but it is rosy compared with the prospect that will face him after the congressional elections of 1926.

Whatever may happen to the House, these "off-year" elections, to determine the make-up of the Congress that will legislate during the second half of the Coolidge administration, will certainly produce a Senate as recalcitrant as the present, and in all human probability a good deal more so. It requires no skill at political diagnosis to make this prophecy. All that is needed is the list of the 33 members of the Senate whose seats will be at stake in the coming elections.

Democrats Sure of Seats.

Only seven of the 33—an unusually small proportion—are Democrats, and all these seven are from rock-ribbed Democratic states of the Solid South: Broussard of Louisiana; Caraway, Arkansas; Fletcher, Florida; George, Georgia; Overman, North Carolina; Smith, South Carolina, and Underwood Alabama. There is no remotest chance for the Republicans to gain a seat at the expense of any outgoing Democrat.

The other side of the picture is equally productive of Democratic jubilation. Of the 26 outgoing Republicans, several are men who were carried into office from close or normally Democratic states, on the coattails of President Harding in 1920. Lacking in 1926 the assistance of any presidential aspirant, such Senators as Cameron of Arizona, Ernst of Kentucky, Harreld of Oklahoma, Oddie of Nevada, Spencer of Missouri and Weller of Maryland, or any other Republicans who may be chosen in the primaries of those doubtful states, will be put to the necessity of hard, catch-as-catch-can fighting. Given a fair share of the "breaks," the Democrats ought to win in half of the states named, and it is well within the realm of possibility that they will win in all six of them.

But Democratic hopes of cutting into the present Republican strength in the Senate are by no means confined to these six states. Colorado, where a Republican, Means, was elected last year to fill out an unexpired term, will again be a battleground. Willis faces a fight in Ohio, Watson in Indiana, Gooding in Idaho, McKinley in Illinois. Any one of these states is liable to a political upset, such as Indiana, in the last previous "off year," 1922, provided by the election of the Democrat, Ralston, over Beveridge.

New York will be the scene of a nation-shaking battle of political giants if Gov. Al Smith accepts the advice of some of his backers

LEGAL NEMESIS OF BOOTLEGGERS

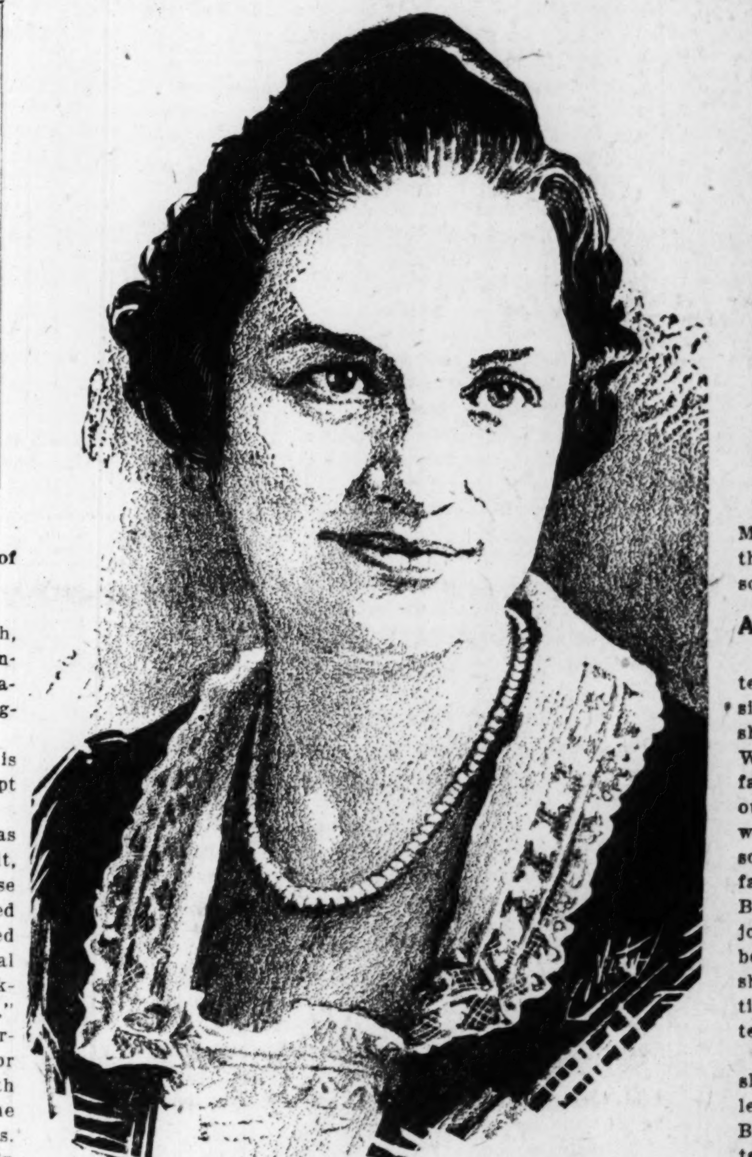
Interesting Personality and Achievements of Woman Assistant Attorney-General Who Has Charge of All Federal Prosecutions of Violations of Dry Law.

Born in sod house, down in Texas Panhandle region.

Learned to set type on her father's country newspaper.

Attended a Missouri college, taught school in Michigan, went to Arizona, then to California University to study law and became public defender of people too poor to hire legal help.

Some of her triumphs in Washington are the conviction of Remus, Cincinnati's king of bootleggers; the breaking up of the Savannah rum ring; the writing of nearly all the opinions of the Department of Justice relative to prohibition enforcement, including the famous "Daugherty ruling" as to foreign vessels.



MRS. MABEL WALKER WILLEBRANDT.

By R. P. BRANDT.
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 4.

TESTIFYING in the Savannah, Ga., "Big Four" liquor scandal, the prohibition sensation of 1923, an alleged bootlegger declared:

"Everybody in Washington is crooked and can be fixed except that damned woman."

"That damned woman" was Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General, whose two years' investigation had led to the indictment of 84 alleged conspirators against the National prohibition law and to the breaking up of the gigantic "rum ring," which had been supplying enormous quantities of illegal liquor to the Atlantic Coast States with insignificant interference from the prohibition enforcement officers.

Mrs. Willebrandt has again come into the limelight through her own testimony before the Couzens Committee for investigation of the Internal Revenue Bureau. The same fearlessness she displayed in tracking down the millionaire operators who thought they had everything "fixed" in Washington is noticeable in her charges against the Treasury Department, which, she declared, insisted on the libel and seizure procedure against breweries and distillers making illegal liquors when the injunction and padlock methods were more efficacious.

A Realistic Cast of Mind.

This fearlessness is the result of a realistic cast of mind that refuses to dissimulate—either to herself or to others. Mrs. Willebrandt has no roseate vision of ideal enforcement of the Volstead act by incorruptible and ubiquitous Federal agents who would see that individuals obeyed the law. She is no reformer; she is a lawyer. She believes the Federal Government should go after the big fellows and leave the smaller fry—the half-pint bootleggers and the truck drivers—to local authorities.

"The man who sells drinks in a back room, or the one who peddles flasks, even those who bootleg one or two cases, or, say, a hundred cases to individual customers, should be taken care of by local and State authorities," she declared. "The Federal enforcement officers and the courts should take care of wholesale bootleggers, who often work on a gigantic scale. Get the ringleaders and the pocket flask trade will all but disappear.

"The Federal Government can deal more effectively, as has been shown, with the big ringleaders. They are not easy to get. They are protected by assistants and co-operators. How weary I become of the mass of cases involving truck drivers! Why not get the men they are driving for and for whom other men will be driving the next day? I am frank in saying that even in instances where the local authorities won't act, it sometimes might be better to let the petty offender go until we get the man who makes it possible for him and others to violate the law.

Opposes Nibbling Process.

"We are not going to enforce prohibition merely by nibbling at the problem, no matter how many nibbles we take. We must reach and solve the deep-seated intricacies that call for expertness, thoroughness and generalship as well as for cohesion of all parts engaged in the task."

These frank statements are in pleasing contrast to the blah and blurb which emanate from the prohibition enforcement offices detailing the thousands of arrests made and the number of offenders jailed. Mrs. Willebrandt believes in catching fewer but bigger violators.

Mrs. Willebrandt's realistic attitude toward prohibition enforcement does not permit her to take the "pollyanna" view of Maj. Roy A. Haynes of the enforcement unit. Her intellectual honesty makes it impossible for her to suppress facts, however detrimental they might appear, or to ignore conditions known to exist.

Her outlook is the direct result of her struggle with the actualities of her own life; a struggle that has placed her in the highest and most powerful position held by a woman in the Federal Government. The Savannah witness certainly had no knowledge of her career, which placed her, just 36 years old, in charge of all the Federal prosecution of prohibition suits.

Has Indomitable Energy.

Even a bootlegger would have to admit his admiration for the indomitable energy that enabled her to overcome the apparently overwhelming odds. Had the same witness seen her, he undoubtedly would have exclaimed, "She's a swell looking jane," although he might have been disappointed in the quietness of her dress.

If Mrs. Willebrandt were a man, she would be called a Horatio Alger hero.

The title of the book would be "From Chore Boy to Attorney-General," for Mrs. Willebrandt did pinch hit for Harry M. Daugherty when the latter was ill in 1923, and this when the Attorney-General had six male assistants from whom to choose. Unfortunately novelists have devoted too much attention to "Elsie Dinsmores" and "Little Colonels" to have time for feminine characters who make their mark in the world. The nearest approach to Mrs. Willebrandt in fiction is "Mrs. McChesney," Edna Ferber's heroine.

Mrs. Willebrandt was born in 1889 in a sod house—what politician would not immediately declare that for political purposes a sod house is better than a log cabin?—in Woodsdale, Kan., now a part of the Texas Panhandle. Her mother had been a school teacher and her father, David W. Walker, was a pioneering country editor with a roving disposition.

When she was 4 years old her father had enough of Kansas and moved to Lucerne, Mo., where he ran a four-sheet weekly newspaper and was naturally the postmaster. Then came the land rush to Oklahoma and David Walker took his family in a covered wagon from the Putnam County home in Northern Missouri to Blackwell, Ok. The new country didn't live up to the prospectus so the family returned to Putnam County, but this time settled at Powersville, where Walker acquired a 160-acre farm in addition to a weekly newspaper office. Here it was that the daughter, Mabel, learned to set type, although she had had no regular school education.

Attended Park College.

Her mother had been a school teacher and was therefore insistent that her two daughters should have a regular education. When Mabel was 13 years old, the family moved to Parksville, just outside Kansas City, where Mabel went to manual training high school. While she was here her family moved again, this time to Buckley, Mich., but instead of joining her family after she had been graduated from high school, she lived with friends and relatives in Parksville, where she attended Park College.

Her real struggle began when she was graduated from Park College. She joined her family at Buckley and became a school teacher, at a proverbial red school house five miles away, which she walked to and from every day. Her salary was $30 a month.

In Buckley she became engaged to the principal of the high school, F. W. Willebrandt, whom she married when she was 19 years old. But disease stepped into the happy picture and necessity took the place of romance. Willebrandt caught pneumonia which developed into tuberculosis. A dry climate was prescribed, so the newlyweds went to the deserts of Arizona, but close enough to civilization for both to attend and get degrees from the Tempe Normal School.

In 1911 Mrs. Willebrandt, then 22 years old, returned north to Big Rapids, Mich., where during the seven winter months she taught school. During the five summer months she went to school day and night and obtained a year's credit at Ferris Institute.

Moved to California.

The pioneering spirit that had urged her father to move from place to place took possession of her—but she had foresight and stick-to-it-iveness which he had not shown. She moved West and became principal of a school at Buena Park, Cal., the State which she now calls home.

Her indomitable energy began to assert itself. Although a school principal, she wanted a higher education so she enrolled in the night law school of the University of Southern California.

While in law school she joined the movement for a public defender in Los Angeles because in her capacity as teacher she had learned from her pupils how foreigners had been mulcted of their savings by shyster lawyers. The movement gained headway and Mrs. Willebrandt was asked to organize the Women's Bureau of the defender's office. This called for special dispensations from the school board, the university and the city government, but Mrs. Willebrandt finally persuaded all concerned that she could take care of three occupations. In 1916 she got her LL. B. from the university and a year later her degree as Master of Laws. She had divided her time so she could teach in the morning, interview an indigent client in the afternoon and attend school in the evenings. It meant an 18-hour day, but she kept it up for several years without the strain showing on her looks—for today, at 36, she retains a girlish figure and a dark but clear complexion which many younger women might envy.

Faced Financial Problems.

When she had passed the bar examinations and was entitled to hang out her shingle she met the difficult problem of finances, for she knew that a young lawyer, certainly a young woman lawyer, is bound to have many lean years before a practice is developed. She set-

"Hey, Buddy!"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LET'S not forget what William L. Igoe did for those of us who were disabled and also for our bonus legislation. Were it not for his efforts, perhaps we wouldn't have even gotten an insurance policy. Remember those stormy days in February, 1920, when we assembled, 6000 strong, at the Coliseum and told the world how we felt, and why? In those days most of us sorely needed help—again Bill Igoe came to the front for us. This is what he wrote to us on March 1, 1920:

"I have your letter, signed by yourself and other members of the committee appointed at the mass meeting of ex-service men held in St. Louis, and also the resolution unanimously adopted.

"Feeling that this action, taken by over 6000 ex-service men, was of sufficient importance to place before the House, I asked unanimous consent today to place the resolution in the record. On the objection of Mr. Walsh, Republican, of Massachusetts, I was denied this privilege.

"All legislation affecting ex-service men was referred last week to the Committee on Ways and Means and Mr. Dickinson of Missouri, a member of this committee, will, at my suggestion, read your letter and the resolution at their next meeting.

"Let me say that I am not only in favor of additional bonus legislation, but I also favor immediate action on the soldier land bill and hope when this measure is called up that we will be able to amend it so that it will also provide for loans to ex-service men to purchase homes in towns and cities."

Fellow ex-service men, we (our friends, families and everyone near and dear to us) owe Igoe our votes on April 7, 1925, out of sheer gratitude! Only in this way can we ever hope to repay him!

Are there any among us, irrespective of politics, who will turn a deaf ear to the plea of him who was our best friend in need?

FRANK LEE.

A School Board Candidate.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

DR. I. LIPPINCOTT of the faculty of Washington University is a candidate for election to the St. Louis School Board at the next election, April 7.

As a professor of economics, he is one of the most widely known educators in our city. His students have a wholesome respect for him. He has written in the last year or so one very splendid book on economics and a student from Oxford University told me not long ago that Dr. Lippincott was quoted at Oxford University as one of the very able American economists.

As one who has a pride in the City of St. Louis, I am writing to ask that you consider his qualifications as an educator. Is it not consistent to believe that he would have a real knowledge of the very important work to be performed on the School Board?

HARRY BOIES EPSTEIN.

Give Bryan His Due.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE writer is not a Bryan advocate. He does not approve of national prohibition, for which Bryan is mainly responsible, nor is he in sympathy with Bryan's extreme religious views in opposition to science. Bryan is a sincere man of remarkable ability and character, and is certainly not the contemptible hypocrite pictures in "C. K. B.'s" evidently malicious letter.

Bryan removed from Lincoln, Neb., to Miami, Fla., years ago on account of his wife's failing health. He invested the money, honestly earned by his pen and by lectures, in Florida real estate when no one anticipated the boom which has recently taken place.

That Bryan has become a millionaire is probably a newspaper exaggeration, but, if it is so, it will be a sad blow to his traducers, who said that he denounced dishonest moneyed men because he lacked ability to make money himself.

JEFF McKAY.

Swatting John Barleycorn Mildly.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE picture of the prohibition agents throwing real beer into the river in one of your pictorial sections is an inspiring sight and no doubt thousands of Americans will swell with pride. But it looks like the bottles of this awful liquid are being thrown into the water without first being broken.

This is taking an awful risk. Some of these might be washed ashore, and some evil-minded persons might find them and instead of destroying them turn them to an unlawful purpose—in fact, drink the beer. The W. C. T. U., the Anti-Saloon League and others of our best people should see that these agents are instructed differently.

Also it seems in the picture as if the officers are smoking cigarettes. This would not look good to the Anti-Tobacco League, who are working so hard and sacrificing their time to better our condition.

THE CAMPAIGN'S ZERO NOTE.

Congressman Newton has broken into the mayoralty campaign as a [illegible]-per-cent partisan. He says Republicans ought to vote for Mr. Miller because Mr. Miller is the Republican candidate. He says that St. Louis is overwhelmingly a Republican city and therefore ought to have a Republican Mayor. He thinks it would be unfortunate for St. Louis to have a Democrat as Mayor.

This appeal reflects no credit on Mr. Newton. It lacks sincerity. It is an affront to the intelligence of the people of St. Louis.

The Post-Dispatch says this with regret. We have a high regard for Mr. Newton. We have frequently commended his work in Congress, where he has rendered able, persevering service for river transportation.

Mr. Newton is head of the river bloc in Congress. Thanks to that river bloc appropriations for river development have been passed over the recommendation of the budget and against the judgment of the President. Thanks to the river bloc the battle for river transportation is being won. In our opinion this victory is one of profound, far-reaching economic significance. Are the members of this bloc Republicans? Is the victory they have won, together with the victory in sight, a partisan triumph? By no means. The victory of the river bloc is the victory of statesmanship. It is a victory, in part, of revolt from party regularity. It is the victory of intelligent, conscientious public servants who have subordinated partisanship to the public good.

The Post-Dispatch insists that blind partisanship can have no intelligent place in a municipal election. The one question before the people of St. Louis in the mayoralty campaign is: Which is the better man for the office? That is both a moral question and a practical question. It is a moral obligation upon every citizen to vote for the candidate he believes to be the best qualified for the place. It is a practical pocketbook obligation for every citizen to vote for the best man.

It will be observed, too, that Mr. Newton expresses no opinion with regard to the comparative merits of the candidates. Apart from a few banal, colorless compliments Mr. Newton offers no reason for supporting Mr. Miller except that Mr. Miller is a Republican.

Congressman Newton, by his own admission, has no candidate and no cause other than a party label. In a dead language he has struck the campaign's zero note.

A GENTLEMEN'S AGREEMENT.

That was an engaging bit of news the past week about an agreement entered into by Samuel Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works and three other executives of the company. These gentlemen contracted not to take a drink of alcoholic nature in the United States for a year. They posted sums of money, Vauclain $10,000, the others $1000 each, to be forfeited by the delinquent who failed to keep the pledge.

The story has been sprightly commented on, due in part to the piquant fact that the report was published on the eve of Vauclain's departure for the Bermudas, which, according to Kipling's moral topography, is "east of Suez" so far as the Volstead law is concerned. Yet this gentlemen's agreement, it seems to us, may seriously be considered.

Its real meaning is that the gentlemen have agreed to observe a law of the United States—a law which is not only statutory but which has been written into the Constitution as a fundamental requirement. It is an extraordinary compact. It is extraordinary because there is no other constitutional requirement and no other statutory law which these men would think of pledging themselves to obey. Again, when outside of the United States, say in Bermuda, Mr. Vauclain or any of the other signatories to the pact may do what they have in this agreement contracted not to do, without breaking the law or occasioning any comment whatever.

Now, our professional prohibitionists, especially the men who are paid big salaries for their work, insist that the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act must be enforced and obeyed because it is the law. That is their last stand. They make no distinction between this law and any other law. To them all laws are equally binding.

The weakness of the prohibition law, the basic source of the difficulties attending its enforcement, is its attempt to make a lie a law. Our so-called prohibition law is not a law. It is a policy. It is an experiment in the drastic regulation of personal conduct that flouts our social traditions and usages of mankind. Though written in the Constitution and statutes it can never be vested with the moral force and sanctity of law until public sentiment accepts as true what it now rejects as untrue.

ANTIQUITY NOT ALWAYS WISDOM.

With a revision of the ancient apothegm about sparing the rod and spoiling the child, Dr. Rudolph M. Binder, professor of sociology in the University of New York, advises mothers to "spank your children if you want them to grow up in the way they should go."

That is in line with the theory that children should be seen and not heard. It dates back to the time when discipline was regarded as the most important factor in rearing children; to the time when youngsters dreaded the hour when father should return from the office. It is the relic of a Puritanical creed which seemed predicated on the idea that a loving father should devote most of his attention to punishing his erring children. It applied to religion as well as the domestic establishment, and its antiquity doesn't prove its wisdom.

Wars also are an ancient custom. Duels survived through the centuries. Most people now regard them as foolish. At least the duels have been outlawed in most lands, and wars have lost most of their pomp and glamour and much of their popularity. It is no more a sign of decadence that these should pass than that corporal punishment should find less favor in this later one.

It is a fact that armies and navies long ago abandoned the whipping post as a means of discipline. Most prisons, where the meanest of men are dealt with, have abolished that system as needlessly brutal and of doubtful worth. Most modern school systems have learned the rod is not a part of progress, nor essential to the orderly conduct of schools.

Reason has supplanted force. It would be a pity if parents were less resourceful in control of their own children. They need not be. There are plenty of good children, who have never been whipped. A man's companionship with his son will do more toward building that son's character and regulating his conduct than the woodshed methods our infancy knew. The world needs less violence and more reason.

A NEW BROOM SWEEPS CLEAN.

Is it for the best interests of St. Louis to continue 16 years of One-Party Rule with four years more of it, without opposition of any kind, without check and without control?

Do we not need a house-cleaning? Have we not a useful broom in the person of Igoe, for 12 years in the public service as Alderman and as Congressman? Is not his record one of clean, useful, conscientious public service?

Do not Miller's remarks about gang control of Igoe and of all his supporters suggest that Miller is a man of questionable judgment?

Do not his acts in obtaining a bond, which was supposed to protect the investments of insurance policy holders, but which he admitted under oath was "not worth the paper it is written on," suggest that he is a man of questionable honor?

Do not his acts in organizing the Guardian Trust Co., subsequently held by the Courts to be an unlawful concern and by order of the Court dissolved, suggest that he is a man of questionable ability?

Do not his sweeping charges, never confirmed, of immorality among the girls and boys of Soldan High School suggest that he is a man of questionable veracity?

Would not a new deal be a good thing for St. Louis?

Can you not get it by electing Igoe?

A new broom sweeps clean.

PRITCHETT'S COMPLAINT.

In his annual report Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, leads another attack on the false perspective characteristic of our colleges—"the paid coaches, the professional organization of college athletics and the demoralization of students by participation in the use of extravagant sums of money." The college, he says, "is no longer distinctively an intellectual agency."

In this criticism it is likely that scholars and thinkers everywhere will agree. They may also agree that the conditions complained of "constitute a reproach to American colleges and to those who govern them."

But is the remedy to be found only in repressive measures applied to athletics and other activities presumed to interfere with scholarship, or in making scholarship more attractive, more worth while and more potent in claiming the attention and inspiring the ambition of students?

Some critics would make American universities replicas of Oxford or Cambridge or of the great German temples of science and the classics. Accepting any of these as models, were they made so by suppressing the natural tendencies of students or by setting high standards of scholarship and by rewarding intellectual leadership with honor, power and place?

"No power in the underlife of our colleges," says Pritchett, "would expect to receive the recognition or appreciation given to a successful football player." What true scholar would crave such recognition? But that seems to be the only recognition for which students are taught to strive.

The average American university bends to the breaking point under the materialism of our age. We are lacking in the time, the patience, the atmosphere of scholarship. The sources of power are not always friendly to the freedom of academic opinion and expression. We spend millions for stadiums and magnificent brick and stone buildings and then seem to forget what higher education is for.

Pritchett is right. Conditions are a reproach to those who govern our colleges. Money, it appears, is appropriated largely to foster these conditions rather than to correct them.

LOOT FROM THE CITY EMPLOYES.

Mr. Miller, the friend of virtue and law enforcement, could have stopped, if he wished, and can stop now to some degree, the collection of campaign funds from city employes. The law forbids assessment of city employes in the classified service directly or indirectly for campaign purposes. If the law has not been broken in the letter in this campaign it has been broken in the spirit. There is no denial that contributions have been received from classified employes or that "voluntary" gifts have been solicited. Is there any probability that contributions from scrub women and street laborers would be given voluntarily? If not, then the law has been flouted in substance, and poor people have been robbed quite as mercilessly as if one of the gangsters Mr. Miller is so fond of talking about had done the job.

Will the law enforcement candidate repudiate these contributions and order them returned, or will he ask the voters to indorse this robbery of the poor?

BEAR RIBS.

The Great White Father at Washington is now Bear Ribs, an honorary chieftain in the tribe of Kenel Indians. No others than those high dignitaries—Antoine Claymore, Jovith Badger and Pius Shoots First—have conferred this honor upon Mr. Coolidge. Bear Ribs, it seems, was a heap big chieftain of the old days, "a far-seeing progressive man." Bear Ribs was right in trying to teach the Indians the white man's way, even if he was killed for his pains. Now these aboriginal sons think it fit to confer his mantle and his name upon Mr. Coolidge.

When Mr. Coolidge visits North Dakota he will have to pay his party call at the wigwams of the Hunkapappas, to exchange grunts and pipe smoke with his brothers. Hereafter, when news from the White House is duller than usual, we shall think of Mr. Coolidge, not as the thin-lipped farmer's boy from Vermont, but as a full-fledged and colorful Indian chieftain.

PANETELA.

No, Luella,
Victor Miller
Isn't doing
As he might;
Looks as if
A few explosions
Served to terminate
The fight.
Anyway,
He shouted bandits,
Thieves and gangsters
At his foes,
And the consequence
Is largely
What a body
Would suppose.

It is not,
My little girlie,
That the angels
Are arrayed
On the side
Of Mr. Igoe
That the people
Are afraid.
What they rather Have concluded
Is that if
They see him through
Mr. Miller
Will discover
Them as being Evil, too.

Taking heimgemacht,
For instance,
As the test
Of one's deserts:
How could any
Freeborn people
Very well
Keep on their shirts?
While we may
Have imperfections
And our wings
If aught are small,
Making heimgemacht
The touchstone
Here would never Do at all.

What we rather
Would consent to
Is that law
Protect the banks
And the usually Prized things
Sans the fantasies
Of cranks.
Cranks,
If recollection
Serves us,
Being somewhat
Hot on top,
Have the somewhat
Plaguey habit
Of not knowing
Where to stop.

So it goes,
My sweet Luella:
Quite aside
From pie and pelf,
Is it likely
That the city
Will design
To raid itself?
Not if anybody
Knows it.
Wherefore,
Though the vote
Is vast
And the battle
Is tremendous,
Vic, it seems,
Will finish last.

Sir: Why so much interest on the part of so many people in the criminal—trying to reform him? Impossible. I know a St. Louis family—a houseful of boys and girls who grew to be fine men and women with the exception of the last boy. He has been in the penitentiary two-thirds of his time the last 30 years. All the reformers in the world couldn't reform him. He's a natural-born thief.

A special correspondent for the Post-Dispatch had an interview with one of the political prisoners at Leavenworth and the prisoner told him this one: Bill Sykes, a professional safe cracker, is about to leave the prison, and the political prisoner says to him: "Now, Bill, you are a good fellow, an intelligent man, why not reform when you get out and become a good citizen?" To which Bill replies: "Oh, no. Look at you. For saying that you believed the war was wrong you got 20 years. I cracked a safe, got $10,000, blew it in, had a good time and got only 10 years, with time off for good behavior. No, I've got too good a trade to give it up."

How can you reform a man whose money comes in thousand dollar lots by putting him in some employment where he would work eight or 10 hours for $3 or $4 a day; some place where they have time clocks, time tickets, straw-bosses, efficiency experts and where everybody from the manager to the elevator boy takes a "crack" at him every time they feel like it?

If you know a reformed criminal, the next time you meet him, congratulate him on his reformation and if he knows you well enough he will look you in the eye and give you the wink. That's all.

ABDERA.

In ancient Greece there was a town named Abdera. When it was mentioned, every Greek laughed. The Abderites were welcome everywhere as targets for witty and humorous remarks. Abdera was known as the center of stupidity because its inhabitants adhered to ancient beliefs and rites and were unable to follow the course of modern thought.

To all appearances we have an Abdera developing in the United States, not only one town, but a whole State. In Tennessee the Legislature has adopted a law forbidding the teaching of evolution, and on the twenty-fourth day of this month the Governor signed the bill.

This happened in the year 1925, in the century when science has made more progress in 10 years than formerly in a 100, in the century of the greatest scientific advance in all history.

Truly, we have our Abdera. The Legislature and Governor of Tennessee have taken care of that.

tled this problem in a matter of fact way. She retained her principalship until her law business had developed sufficiently to pay expenses. She continued her work with the public defender and handled the cases of 2035 indigent clients.

The future Assistant Attorney-General did not take the easier way to develop a practice. With foresight she ignored the police court cases and divorce suits which come easily to a good woman lawyer, and specialized in civil suits. She also became interested in legislation and put through the California Legislature a bill defining property rights of women. During the war, when she was still in her twenties, she was chairman of a legal advisory division of the Los Angeles Draft Board, where she directed 30 lawyers.

She has never run for a political office but when she was named Assistant Attorney-General she was a member of the Republican State Committee, the California Bar Association and was chairman of the legislative committee of the largest women's club in Los Angeles. Now she is grand president of Phi Delta Delta, the legal sorority. She is a member of Chi Omega, a social sorority.

Had Many Indorsements.

When her name was mentioned as a successor to Mrs. Annatta Abbott Adams of San Francisco, the first woman Assistant Attorney-General, Mrs. Willebrandt had the indorsement of 60,000 women in California, of both Senators, of every member of the bench in Southern California, of almost all of the Appellate Court Judges and most of the members of the Supreme Court.

When she was called to Washington by Attorney-General Daugherty to talk over her appointment she made one stipulation. She demanded that if she should be given the position, she must have all the responsibility and work that would be given a man assistant. Now her advice to all women studying law is, "Forget you are a woman; remember you are a lawyer."

As Assistant-Attorney General Mrs. Willebrandt is in charge of all prosecutions under the national prohibition act. She also had charge of many excess profit tax suits and had indirect supervision of the Federal prisons. One of her interests now is to get a separate Federal prison for women, as the Government must now send feminine offenders to State penitentiaries.

Here are a few things she has accomplished while she has been in office: She has written nearly all of the opinions of the Department of Justice relative to prohibition enforcement, including the famous "Daugherty ruling" holding that foreign vessels cannot legally bring liquor into the territorial waters of the United States even though such liquor is a part of the ship's stores; she has appeared before the Supreme Court innumerable times, once in a case involving $45,000,000, and has received commendation from the Solicitor General for the conduct of her arguments; she engineered the investigation which put George Remus of Cincinnati, "The King of Bootleggers," in Atlanta: she conducted the two-year investigation of the "Big Four" rum ring in Savannah, Ga., which broke up the Southeastern bootlegging combination, and now she is speaking out fearlessly against the Treasury Department for its attitude towards prohibition law enforcement.

Affect Quiet Costumes.

When one talks to this dynamic woman, there is in immediate reaction to her personality. Her voice is low and a trifle metallic, her eyes are ordinarily blue, but when she becomes intensely interested they seen to turn to a hazel color. This fact has been verified by her secretaries. She affects quiet clothes, usually a tailored suit, topped off with a white collar. In no respect does she look like "that damned woman," or does she in any regard impress one as a fanatical prohibitionist or a typical club woman. As a general description, "handsome" would probably fit her best if the word is used in the strict sense of meaning "agreeable to the eye or to correct taste."

Before coming to the Department of Justice, Mrs. Willebrandt did not work for the national prohibition law. In an authorized interview with a representative of the Christian Herald in 1922, she said: "I came to this position in a strange way. My mother was an ardent Woman's Christian Temperance Union pioneer and believed with all her heart in strict prohibition. I always believed in temperance, but drew the line at Federal prohibition. And yet, when I came into this office and began to work for law enforcement I began to swing out full and strong for absolute prohibition. I was soon convinced that any other stand was wholly unsound under under the Constitution."

"Would Keep Politics Out."

Now she is working to keep politics out of Federal enforcement. Six months ago she did the unorthodox thing by writing a letter to the Law Enforcement League of Philadelphia which revealed that politicians were interfering with the District Attorneys. She would allow no one to pass the buck to her. She said:

"May I remind you of the fact that I have no administrative authority over the hiring and firing and disciplining of United States Attorneys. This is a matter assigned to Assistant Attorney-General Holland. Furthermore, no one except the President of the United States can remove a United States District Attorney after his appointment has been made and approved by the Senate.

"In most states United States Attorneys are hard working and faithful officials, but as a matter of fact there are nine or ten of them whom if I had the power, I would summarily remove because of the political inactivity and political evasiveness in enforcing the prohibition statutes.

"I have in no uncertain terms called these instances to the attention of the person delegated to act. In most cases I have met with the information that a Senator or a political situation prevented any change."

This caused an uproar, yet it was not such a stinging indictment of politics in prohibition enforcement as her recent statement regarding the agents of the prohibition unit.

"Two Sorts of People."

"Two sorts of people have crept into the prohibition enforcement ranks," she said. "Some are well meaning, sentimental, and dry. Others are wolves in sheep's clothing whose sole object is to clean up all the graft in sight. These two classes have obtained their positions because prohibition enforcement officials are largely appointed at the instance of Senators, Congressmen and political leaders in various states. The average Senator or Congressman recommends a man because he has been politically useful, or because he is an Anti-Saloon Leaguer, a confirmed dry or a widely known Sunday school teacher—and none of these people makes a good detective. When we throw politics to the winds and build up a force of officials who are trained detectives, and again throw politics to the winds and order them to go in and apprehend the biggest law violators they can find in their territory, and get the big ones first, then the prohibition laws will settle into their natural relation with the other laws of the country."

Those are strong words from the head of a great governmental bureau. Commissioner Roy Haynes will not even admit that politics plays any part in the selection of enforcement agents, even when he is confronted with irrefutable evidence to the contrary.

Anatole France had said that "any woman may be accounted truthful who tells only the necessary lies." Mrs. Willebrandt puts to shame that definition or else there are varying interpretations of "necessary" not understood in other branches of the prohibition units, where there as only praise for the agents and every effort is made to suppress everything that might be considered detrimental to the service. But in facing the facts, admitting them and trying to correct patent evils, Mrs. Willebrandt is making herself extremely dangerous to bootleggers, small and large. And she glories in the epitaph "that damned woman" when it is uttered by a convicted offender.

for the presidency and gets into the race for the Senate against Senator Wadsworth. The outcome of such a fight would be very much in doubt. Such is the strength of Wadsworth in upper New York that Smith would need to bring into play every particle of his resources of popularity and political acumen.

If Smith should win, his chance to get the Democratic nomination for the presidency two years later would undoubtedly be greatly increased; if he should lose, he would probably be out of the presidential running for all time. Wadsworth is a potential presidential candidate on the other side, and a victory over the redoubtable Smith would give him immense prestige. If Smith keeps out of the race, he will probably come back to the Senate without difficulty.

In addition to the 32 Senators—one-third of the whole membership—who go out of office in the regular course of events, there is one whose seat will be the prize of an unusually interesting and important contest. This Senator is William M. Butler, the Republican National Committee chairman and spokesman of his friend, the President, on the Senate floor. Butler, who is now serving by appointment of the Governor of Massachusetts as the successor t the late Senator Lodge, must go before the electorate for confirmation in 1926 if he desires to remain in the Senate.

It is virtually settled that the Democratic nominee will be David I. Walsh, who was defeated for re-election in the 1924 landslide by Senator Gillett. Walsh's popularity was attested by the fact that he ran far ahead of the national ticket; under normal conditions he would have won easily.

If, as now appears certain, Walsh goes to bat against Butler, there will be as hot an encounter as the most exacting taste in political bouts could desire. Butler will have behind him the influence of the presidential office; Walsh will balance this, and maybe overbalance it, with the force of his personality, of his record as Governor and Senator and of his great campaigning ability. At this distance from the event, Walsh appears to have better than an even chance to come back to the Senate.

The present division in the Senate is 55 Republicans, actual and nominal; 40 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Labor member. Already, as shown in the votes on the Warren nomination, there is an actual majority against the President whenever the Republican left wing chooses to vote with the Democrats. There is no chance that the Democratic contribution to this majority will be reduced, and every chance that it will be materially increased.

AMHERST ALUMNI CUP FOR THE JOHN BURROUGHS SCHOOL

Graduates Here of Eastern College Provide Annual Award in Public Speaking Contest.

The St. Louis Alumni of Amherst College have presented to the John Burroughs School a cup which is to be awarded annually to the winner of a public speaking contest. Luther Ely Smith, on behalf of the alumni, presented the cup Thursday and it was accepted by the director of the school, Wilford M. Aikin. Others of the Amherst alumni who were present were: Harold M. Bixby, R. Jewett Jones, Allan Wyman, Merrell D. Walbridge, Erwin Tucker, H. Lyman Smith, Gilbert H. Semple, Woodson Barnhart and Eugene Williams. Songs and cheers by the Amherst men and the students of the John Burroughs School concluded the program.

The inscription on the cup reads: "The Amherst Cup. Presented by the Alumni of Amherst College to the boy in the John Burroughs School who excels in public speaking."

The John Burroughs School emphasizes public speaking in its courses. Last year in the U. S. Constitution Oratorical Contest, William Atkins, a student of the school, won the district competition.

EMERGENCY WORK IN TORNADO AREA NEARING THE END

Full Strength of Red Cross Soon to Be Thrown Into Permanent Rehabilitation Program.

FARMERS AIDED IN CLEARING FIELDS

Awards to Families Probably Will Start in Few Days—Each Case to Be Carefully Analyzed.

With approximately 250 trained disaster workers and Red Cross nurses operating in the stricken areas of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, emergency work for the sufferers in the tornado of March 18 is fast drawing to a close and the full force of the Red Cross relief organization will soon be thrown into the permanent rehabilitation program.

Rural caravans have started from Murphysboro, Ill., and Princeton, Ind., and are sweeping through the entire tornado-stricken area. With 50 men each, they will move from one district to another, pitch camp, divide into small squads and give farmers every possible assistance in clearing their land of debris deposited by the winds.

The fields are so littered with trees, tin and lumber that it has been impossible to enter them with farming machinery.

Although making of awards to affected families is expected to begin in a few days, Henry M. Baker, director of Red Cross relief operations, yesterday, said the task of rebuilding the many stricken communities was a gigantic one which would require many months. While assuring sufferers that the Red Cross will use every means to rush to completion the rehabilitation program, Baker added that awards will be made only after careful analysis of the families' resources, liabilities and actual needs, and that the relief organization "will not sacrifice efficiency and justice to speed."

Contributions to the tornado relief fund, received by the Red Cross here up to yesterday, total $271,181.

BAN ON SHORT SKIRTS FOR BRITISH COURT PRESENTATION

Eligible Bobber-Haired Women to Wear Bows Giving Appearance of Long Hair to Show Tresses.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 4.—Stylish short skirts are not Queen Mary's idea of modesty and propriety for presentation at court. When the details of the four courts which King George and Queen Mary will hold this year were published recently, it was whispered that the present vogue of short dresses might be acceptable at Buckingham Palace and a number of debutantes even went so far as to order gowns permitting the exposure of considerably more than ankles to the royal gaze. But more material must be added to them, for they do not meet with the Queen's approval.

Bobbed-haired ladies who are eligible for court presentation also have been much agitated this year over the question of a proper headdress, but it is believed they have solved the problem with the aid of hairdressers and other molders of fashion who have perfected a bow effect giving the appearance of long hair to shingled locks. Fashionable modistes, aided by equally fashionable hairdressers, are prepared to turn out these contraptions to match the gowns of the wearers. The arrangement sets well back on the head and its wearers say that its chief claim to favor is that once in position, it will stay put.

A. BURT CHAMPION OBTAINS UNCONTESTED DIVORCE

He Charged Wife Married Him for Money and Repented of Her Bargain.

Charging that his wife married him for his money and repented of her bargain, A. Burt Champion, vice president of the Matthew Addy Co. and Peruvian Consul in St. Louis, obtained an uncontested divorce in Circuit Judge Wurdeman's court at Clayton yesterday.

He declared that she treated him with "contumely and coldness" and wrote friends to the effect: "I made the best bargain to be had at the time."

They were married Feb. 28, 1921, in San Francisco. Until their separation they resided at 456 Belleview avenue, Webster Groves.

Painters in Capital Strike.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Prospects of a general tie-up in building trades in the National Capital increased today when union painters and paperhangers walked out to enforce a demand for higher wages. The painters want $10 a day in place of $9, and the paperhangers are asking for increases on a varying scale. A lockout already is in force against the union stone cutters, and the plumbers and steamfitters also have demanded an increase.

"Theft" of House Thwarted.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, April 4.—The "theft" of a three-story brick building was thwarted here yesterday and three men were arrested as involved in the larceny. Carl Singer, owned the building which has not been occupied for some time. Passing the property yesterday, he observed three men industriously engaged in razing the building. The men told him they were employed by a nearby wrecking company. The wrecking company denied all knowledge of the work. The roof had been removed and one wall torn down when Singer stopped the wrecking.

What's Wrong?

Run-over heels and leaning ankles give you the first warning that your feet need help. Not only are they unsightly but they give visible proof that the intricate 26-bone structures of your feet have broken down under the weight of your body. To restore and gently hold the lowered bones in natural alignment is the only method of permanent correction. This is the exclusive principle of featherlight

Wizard
Arch Builders

Provided with adjustable features at the heel, arch and ball, Wizard Arch Builders can be adjusted to give support to your feet right where it is needed. The bone structures will be perfectly aligned. Thus, the cause of run-over heels and bulging counters eliminated. Foot pains at the heel, the ball and the arch will cease. Your feet will function with freedom and grace.

CITIES TO COMPARE COST OF CHARITY

Survey Begun in St. Louis as Part of National Plan Involving 14 Cities.

A study of social service agencies in St. Louis, to determine the amount and cost of such work here, in connection with a similar survey in 14 of the larger cities in the country, has been begun under the direction of the Community Council.

The survey, the first of its kind made in America, will determine the number of social agencies kept up by public taxation, the number kept up by the Community Fund, and the number by other private enterprise. In so far as possible it will find out the actual total cost of social work in St. Louis.

The study is the outgrowth of a meeting of the American Association for Community Organization, which met recently in Cleveland. Miss Blanche Renard, assistant director of the Community Council, attended the meeting and is directing the work of compiling the information here. Elwood Street, director of the Council, is a member of the Executive Committee which made preliminary plans for the survey.

The agencies in St. Louis to which the queries are being sent are those endorsed by the Chamber of Commerce. The questionnaires are being sent out this week, and Miss Renard expects that the first tabulation and report to the Central Committee will be completed by May 1.

The reports as to how the various St. Louis agencies are supported will be compared with contributions and results in other cities of more than 10,00 population. A general discussion of the results obtained in the reports of the agencies over the country will be made in the National Conference of Social Work to be held June 10 in Denver.

DOUBLE TIME IN PRISON FOR DOUBLE TIME RETREAT

Judge Davis Increases Sentence of Narcotics Peddler Who Fled After Conviction.

Frank Bommarito, convicted narcotics peddler, was punished for running away from the Federal Building after being sentenced Friday. Federal Judge Davis yesterday sentenced him to a double term and double fine. His first sentence had been one year and $500 fine; his second sentence was two years and $1000 fine.

He escaped by a ruse. As a Deputy Marshal led him from the courtroom Friday he asked to speak to his lawyer, whom he saw in the corridor. He dashed past the attorney and down the stairs. He was caught at Seventh and Biddle streets at 9 p. m.

GAS to Help Save Park

THE LACLEDE GAS LIGHT COMPANY
SAINT LOUIS

Mr. D. A. Livingston,
Federer Realty Company,
Holly Hills Office,
St. Louis, Mo.

April 3, 1925.

Dear Sir:

Work is going forward at once upon the construction of a complete gas distribution system in Holly Hills, your subdivision. This is a special installation designed to provide plenty of gas for house-heating and all other purposes. We also have detailed several of our heating experts to continue to keep in touch with you and to provide you, from time to time, with full facts about gas house-heating installations and will station one of them at your subdivision office whenever you request.

We appreciate your co-operation with us and, like yourself, feel that by your development you are making a long step in the direction of "Smokeless St. Louis". As you say, Holly Hills is far too beautiful a subdivision to be marred by smoke. You are quite right too in wanting to spare the trees and flowers in Carondelet Park, across the way, from a slow death by smoke.

It is with particular enthusiasm that we join in this movement; knowing as we do, the tremendous advantages of gas as a fuel. Mr. Osborn Monett, former Smoke Commissioner of Chicago, recently stated at a meeting at the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, that "I consider gas the ideal fuel and I expect the next 25 years to be the 'gas age'". Absolutely smokeless, eliminating all dust, dirt, worry about supply, delivery, storage, and enabling the automatic operation of heating appliances as it does, gas as fuel assures home comfort in all sorts of weather. Cleaning and laundry bills decrease and there is no furnace firing or ashes to bother with, when gas is the fuel.

Special appliances, designed to give the most heat with the least fuel and to assure the maximum of comfort and convenience, have been invented to harness gas to steam, hot water and vapor boilers, warm air furnaces and gas steam radiators. We know that these heating installations are practical, economical. For they are in satisfactory use in hundreds of St. Louis homes.

Thanking you again for your co-operation, we are Very truly,

THE LACLEDE GAS LIGHT COMPANY.

your garden lies in the hollow of your hand

PLANTING time! How much depends upon those tiny seeds you pour out from the packet into your hand.

If you plant Ferry's purebred Seeds, you can have faith that sunshine and rain, good soil and your own good work will not be wasted. The harvest will be true to variety—ideal in size, shape and color.

It is the purebred quality of Ferry's Seeds which makes them so dependable. Science and skill have been employed for generations to maintain it. We know the history of our seeds. For sixty-nine years we have been growing, weeding out, perfecting, harvesting and testing. After every harvest more extensive trials are made at our experimental gardens than anywhere else in the United States to determine that these seeds are true to type.

Play safe at this critical time of planting. Give your garden the right start by planting Ferry's purebred Seeds. You can get them now—clean and tested, "at the store around the corner" from the familiar Ferry Box.

NEGRO WHO FOUGHT FOR SOUTH GETS PENSION

At 83 "Uncle" Phillip Roseboro Is Voted Reward by North Carolina.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SHELBY, N. C., April 4.—Application has been filed at Raleigh for a pension for "Uncle" Phillip Roseboro, who served in the army of the Confederacy throughout the war between the States, was wounded at Seven Pines, captured by the Yankees at Vicksburg, buried one "young marster" and followed another in his campaigns, was present in the battles around Richmond, surrendered with Lee at Appomattox, afterward trudging back home to take up the burdens of a desolated plantation and to take care of his "Ole Mistis" until she died.

"Uncle" Phillip is the only negro ever placed on the pension rolls in the State of North Carolina and perhaps in the South. A slave before the war and a faithful servant afterwards, without money and without price, his record of devotion to duty was not excelled by any of the many faithful negroes of the old school. Now, in his old age, his white comrades and friends are recognizing his equality of service by placing him on the pension roll of veterans. A native of South Carolina, he has lived in recent years at Shelby, and it is the Tar Heel Government that is going to reward him at the last.

Scorned New Freedom.

This old negro scorned the new-found freedom of his race and turned his energies, after four years of gigantic conflict to making a living for his widowed mistress and her daughter. He eked a scanty subsistence for his beloved "white folks" out of the stubborn soil of a run-down farm, with no "hands" to till the crops, and no money with which to pay them, making the ends meet somehow, remaining "on guard" until death claims the last of the Roseberes. This brave old man, in spite of his 83 years, continues to earn his daily bread by the sweat of his brow. His proportion of the appropriation that North Carolina allots to her veterans will spell wealth to him.

Every evening now, his day's work done, "Uncle" Phillip trudges to the post office at Shelby to inquire of the clerk at the window if his pension has "done come." On his shoulder he carries an ax, the implement of his livelihood, and one foot is dragged along and the other leg brought up with a jerk, this being the mark of a Yankee minnie ball that shattered one of his legs during the fighting before Richmond. Under the tattered coonskin cap is a black face wrinkled with age and a kinky head now covered by the "snow that never melts."

Weeps at News.

Told that his name had been brought up, approved and sent off for a pension, a tear crept down the old wrinkled face."

"Well, sur, Ah'll swan," he said. "Yes, sur; Ah was shot in de laig at Seben Pines arter Captin' John wuz kilt. An' den Ah fit wid Captin' Jim. Ah wiz captured by dem Yankees at Vicksburg—whar dey had de canals. Arter de en' at Appomattex—an' Ah wuz right dere—Ah cum back home and stayed wid de ol' Mistis till she died. Ah specs to wuk right on, but Ah'll be proud ter git dat pension money."

When the "ole Mistis" died, Phillip, his service over, was cast out into the world, lame and bending with age and toil. His own wife had died and his 11 children were scattered about the world. After some wandering the old man came to this county. The farmers and lumbermen of the community know him as the best chopper in the country, despite his age. Second to his "wah record" Phillip boasts of the two cords of wood he is still able to cut a day."

REFUND OF $15,000 TAX IS DENIED MISSOURI PACIFIC

Railroad Held That Telegrams It Sent by Western Union Were Pay for Train Service.

A tax of $15,000 against the Missouri Pacific railroad for telegraph messages sent over Western Union lines between August, 1920, and January, 1923, must stand under a ruling by Federal Judge Faris yesterday.

The railroad company had paid the tax under protest and sought to force a refund from Collector of Internal Revenue Hellmich. Its attorneys argued that the Missouri Pacific had a reciprocal agreement with the Western Union under which it traded train service for wire service, and therefore was taking its pay in telegrams.

Judge Faris held that this made no difference and that the company was liable for a tax of 5 cents on messages up to 50 words each and 10 cents on all longer messages.

Missing 23 Years, Found by Ad.

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., April 4.—Hardy Thompson, farmer, who left his home near here 23 years ago for a visit to a neighboring town, has been found in a hospital at Helena, Mont. A sister, Mrs. Barbara Mason, of Fort Worth, Tex., located him through an advertisement in a newspaper and advised relatives here. Thompson left home for Summit, a nearby town, a quarter of a century ago, telling his young bride, "If I don't get back before dark, go over to father's." After several years his wife obtained a divorce, re-married and has several children by her second husband.

Enginemen Get Pay Increase.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 4.—Representatives of Southern Pacific enginemen here today confirmed a New Orleans report that an agreement has been reached whereby engineers, firemen and hostlers on the Southern Pacific lines between El Paso and New Orleans and between Houston and Dallas had been granted approximately a 5 per cent increase in wages. The increase is retroactive to Sept. 1, 1924, and involves about 1500 men.

AUTO SALES PEAK IS EXPECTED IN NEXT 2 MONTHS

Activity in Factories at New High Level for the Year —Selling Pace Is Speeding Up.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, April 4.—Observers of the motor industry are looking to the next two months to tell the story of sales this year. They believe this period will establish definitely the public's attitude toward the 1925 models, thereby deciding which makes of cars are to be best sellers this year.

They also incline to believe that the last half of the year is to see more than the usual decline in sales in that period. They argue that the motor industry, basically, depends on general industry; that the latter is now near what will prove the peak for the year, and that there are no other factors peculiar to the motor industry or motor merchandising that promise activity for the industry at or near its present levels in the second half of the year.

Current activity in the industry is at the highest rate thus far this year. The first of April marked the moving up of schedules in almost every plant, though the increase was not uniform. Those plants which have been busiest to date almost invariably announced the largest ratios of production expansion. Nash and Packard alone, in this class, reported smaller in-

FAMOUS ECONOMY RUN IN CALIFORNIA TO BE STOCK EVENT THIS YEAR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, April 4.

THE rules for the annual Los Angeles-Camp Curry (Yosemite Valley), economy run for automobiles, May 22-23 have been changed so that it will be a regular A. A. A. sanctioned stock car event. Previous runs have been supervised by the A. A. A., but as "non-stock" events, because cars competing were not torn down and checked. So this famous contest will be of greater value than ever as a test. Shutting off motors or coasting will be prohibited, as in the past. Entrants will be divided into four classes—for all four-cylinder cars, for six-cylinder cars costing under $1300, for six-cylinder cars costing over $1300, and for all eight-cylinder cars.

GOOD ROADS ESSAY CONTEST FOR HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

Four years in college, with all expenses paid, is the chief prize offered by the Highway Education Board in its sixth good roads essay contest for all high-school pupils. The essay topic will be "Economics Resulting from Highway Improvement." The college prize, valued at $1000 a year, is offered by H. S. Firestone of Akron, O., a member of the board. In a number of States other prizes are offered. The Automobile Club of Missouri is making a special effort to insure that Missouri high schools are well represented. In past years, as many as a quarter of a million essays have been submitted.

EASY CLUTCH IS HELPFUL.

The easier a clutch works the less chance there is of having a wheel spin around on the ice or snow when trying to start without chains. The clutch should work more smoothly in winter than in summer.

MINORITY BLOCKS EFFORT TO FINISH ILLINOIS HIGHWAY

Attempts to Harmonize the Differences Delaying Completion of Route No. 2 Fail.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 4.—Efforts to bring the warring elements together in De Witt County in a compromise to enable the State to pave the six-mile gap in highway No. 2, between Rockford and Cairo via Bloomington, have proven futile.

The differences over the right of way through Clinton, the county seat, and thence north to Wapella, the next town of consequence, appear to be as acute as ever.

Route 2, which has been known for years as the Meridian highway, and was among the first of the important cross-state highways to be marked by motorists' associations, is virtually completed between the Wisconsin State line and the Ohio River, except for a short stretch south of Rockford and the gap in De Witt County.

Completion of No. 2 is of interest to all St. Louis, Southeast Missouri and Southern Illinois, for it is their natural paved highway to North Central Illinois and into Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The State highway engineers selected what is known as the Walnut street route through the city of Clinton, and, if all residents of that community had accepted the preference of the State Highway

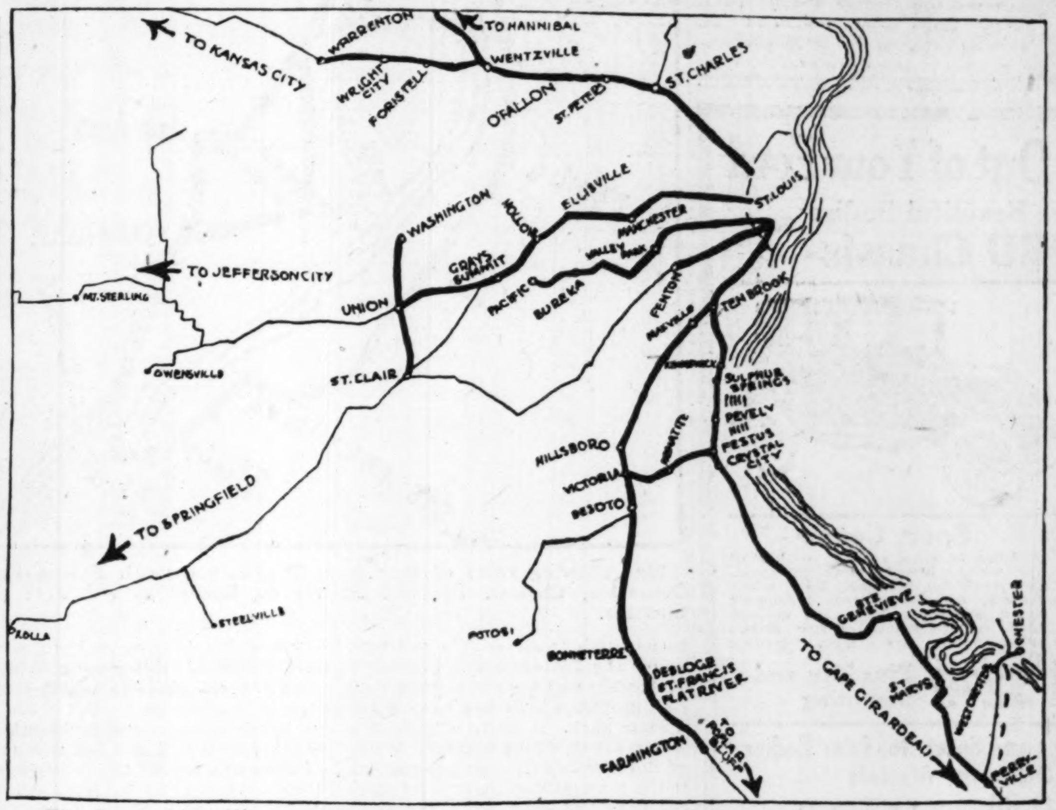
How Bus Lines From St. Louis to Missouri Cities Are to Be Extended

Service to Warrenton via St. Charles, a Distance of 63 Miles, Already a Fact — Extensions of St. Charles Line to Hannibal and of Festus-Ste. Genevieve-Perryville Line to Cape Girardeau Promised



The heavy black lines on the above map show the extent of the bus routes developed thus far out of St. Louis to Missouri cities.

DEVELOPMENT of bus lines radiating from St. Louis to other Missouri cities, which has lagged far behind that in the trade territories of other large cities, suddenly has become a factor to be reckoned with. Bus lines now extend over all the State highways out of St. Louis, reaching as far as Warrenton on the primary St. Louis - Kansas City highway through St. Charles, to Union, Washington and St. Clair via the Manchester road, to Fenton on the Gravois road, to Eureka and Pacific, to De Soto, Flat River and Farmington on the Lemay Ferry road, and to Festus, Crystal City, Ste. Genevieve and Perryville. Extensions to Hannibal in Northeast Missouri, Cape Girardeau and Poplar Bluff in Southeast Missouri are planned, and extensions to the Ironton and Arcadia resort region this summer are likely. In addition, there are the lines which the People's Motor Bus Co., the United Railways and private operators have established out into St. Louis County.

300-Mile Bus Trip by Summer.

The lines to nearby cities, such as Festus, Pacific, Union, De Soto and Washington, all appear to be prosperous. The busses carry capacity loads, as a rule, and frequently are unable to handle all who would patronize them. Operators are steadily adding busses and extending their routes. They are bringing into the city enough people to count in the plans of the St. Louis stores, for they greatly simplify the problem of the woman who lives in the country or the small town and wishes to do her shopping in this city. Also they are assuming more and more importance in the plans of salesmen and those who wish to tour Eastern Missouri or are planning vacations in this part of the State.

By the time vacation days have arrived, it probably will be possible to take a bus trip at least 130 miles north of St. Louis and nearly 300 miles south through Southeast Missouri and the Ozarks of South Central Missouri to Springfield.

Bus to Warrenton.

Bus service from Wellston to St. Charles is on a firm basis of operation, and is used by thousands of persons daily. These busses run on half-hour schedule and on 15-minute headway in the rush. The operator is the Intercity Transit Co.,

ROAD BUILDING IN WEST MISSOURI OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

Bridge Being Erected in Henry County to Carry Two Highways Serving Large Areas.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CLINTON, Mo., April 4.—An example of the solid and enduring work being done on the State highways is the 160-foot concrete bridge under construction on the road between Clinton and Deepwater, in Henry County. This stretch of road is traversed by State highways Nos. 13 and 24, completion of which will be of much importance to the people of Western and West Central Missouri. No. 13, which begins at Gallatin, in Northern Missouri, and runs south via Hamilton, Richmond, Higginsville, Warrensburg, Clinton, Osceola, Fairplay and Bolivar to Springfield, will be the natural Kansas City-Springfield highway. It intersects both No. 2 and No. 12, the main routes north and south of the Missouri River between St. Louis and Kansas City. No. 24 is the short cut between Sedalia and Joplin.

Road Work in Henry County.

The State highway paving program includes extensive work on No. 13. Three miles have been paved between Deepwater and Clinton and this stretch has been shortened and straightened. Work is under way north of Clinton, where three miles of paving are being laid. The Highway Commis-

The Freedom of the Seas-

On Land

ROVERS of the land—these Paige-Jewett travelers. They answer the irresistible call of distance by going wherever they choose—and always getting back. To them the common obstacles of motor car travel are unknown.

For the land is an open main for cars like these. They while away long miles with the freedom and certainty of an ocean liner.

Years of such freedom of travel follow the purchase of a Paige or Jewett. And as each new trip takes you farther than you've ever driven before—satisfaction in the ownership of such a car becomes something you want to talk about—so others can enjoy it.

There's power beneath their sparkling beauty that you've never even dreamed of. Power that carries you over a mountain pass or through the rough, winding road to camp—always in high—always with the same certainty.

And this marvelous Paige-Jewett power does not wear out in a season or two. It holds its vitality unimpaired through long years of constant use. Because it comes from big, powerful motors that pull these sturdy cars smoothly, steadily in the hardest kind of going.

You seldom think of shifting gears—and on those rare occasions when you do slide into second—it's a simple, effortless movement—thanks to the new Paige-Jewett clutch and transmission. Velvet smoothness at this vital point!

And you experience the very ultimate in comfort. Balloon tire ease is improved by new type spring construction. You ride roughest roads, conscious only of a slow, cradle-like motion.

Think of an all-day drive that leaves you fresh to enjoy an evening's pleasure—a drive so full of the joy of living that you almost hate to stop.

Something new, you say? Decidedly! Unknown until Paige-Jewett engineers produced this superior type of motoring in the New Paige and the New Jewett.

And there's little need for service. Paige or Jewett need but the ordinary attention you would give any fine car—to keep it fine.

So this year—you can go where you've often dreamed of going. Paige or Jewett will get you there in spite of hills or miles. For all of the qualities necessary to long, care-free travel are built into these two cars—and built in to stay. Call or telephone for a demonstration.

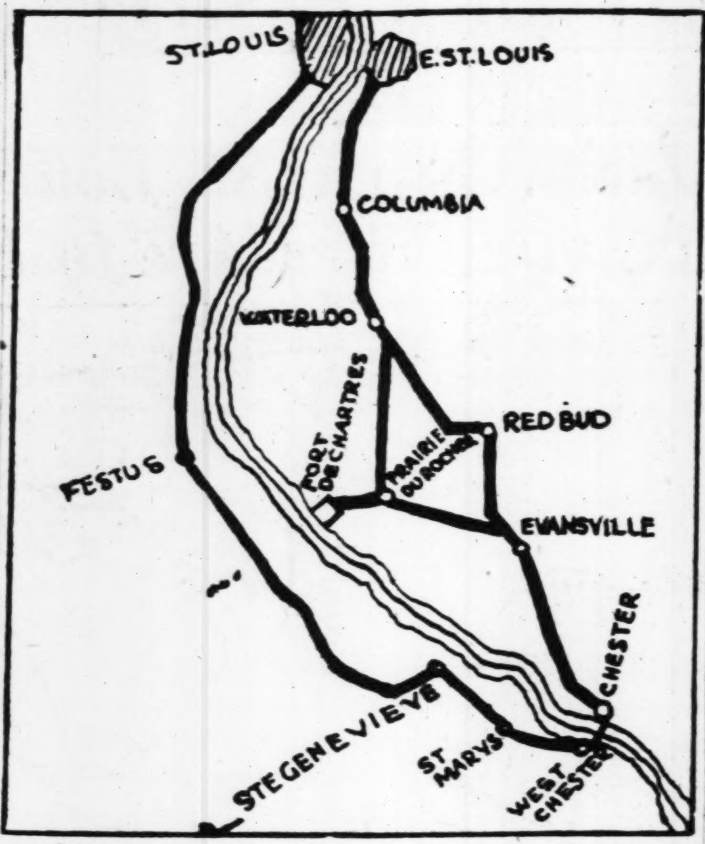
Old French Fort at End of This Trip

Tour Taken by Party, Who Used Jewett Six, Goes to Ste. Genevieve, Crosses Mississippi River to Old Fort de Chartres.

A 165-mile tour that can be made easily between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., and has not one dull mile, starts from St. Louis and goes via the Lemay Ferry road, Festus, Cape Genevieve and St. Mary's to the ferry over the Mississippi River to Chester, Ill., then turns north to Evansville and west under the Illinois bluffs to Prairie du Rocher and the old French Fort de Chartres which has been made a State park. A party of motorists who made this tour Saturday in one of the new Jewett sixes pronounced it the most attractive and interesting they had ever taken in the St. Louis district.



Map showing route of tour from St. Louis through Festus, Ste. Genevieve, Chester, Ill., and Prairie du Rocher to old Fort de Chartres.

Tour Starts Interestingly.

The many motorists who have rambled over the Lemay Ferry road, over the Meramec River and down the concrete, which has been completel to Pevely, know how attractive is the countryside. Every time one makes this run he finds new beauties of hillside and dale, low lying swale or rugged ravine. The Jewett party set their speedometer at 00.0 at the end of the bridge, and it registered 11.8 at the end of the concrete. Then came 6-10 of a mile of rough cinders, rock and dirt, then smoother gravel road which at 12.8 swung right along the old highway which soon became a good rock road with a few rough spots. At 14.0, there is a wonderful view to the left through a ravine and across the Mississippi River to the Illinois bluffs, while ahead is a wide vista down the river and over Festus and Crystal City and to the Missouri hills. At 15.1, another beautiful sweep over the river, then Herculaneum, whence the trip followed State Route No. 9 to Festus.

At 15.9 a bridge and to the right the piers of a fine, new concrete bridge under construction. The road is good rock construction along the tops of the ridges, with many fine views. At 18.2 a bad left turn, then a splendid view to the right over the valley, and ahead over Festus and Crystal City. At 18.7 another fine river vista, then down a grade into Festus and over State route No. 25, going left at 19.4, with a temporary detour.

Beautiful Country.

At 21.7 back on No. 25 on good gravel. At 23.2 a one-way bridge over a pretty stream and a winding up-grade onto the ridges. At 24.7 a lovely sweep to both sides and ahead. The road is wide and fast. At 26.3 a gorgeous vista away to the Illinois bluffs, many miles distant. The road rises and dips up hill and down for some three miles through a pretty scrub oak country, with many attractive picnic places, while continually there are alluring glimpses through the fringe of trees, of vales and ravines and distant hills, softly blue and violet in the haze.

At 31.4 the road swoops downward in long, graceful curves, while back to the right are beautiful views over a long, winding valley, with bright green floor. The road dips into the valley, traverses a lovely farming country a mile or so wide, crosses two crystal-clear brooks, then climbs a winding grade and continues up hill and down dale on the same wide, fine gravel. Up onto a higher ridge, with several miles of beautiful views over a valley on the right, then, at 35.3, down a long grade and at 37.1 up a very beautiful, softly curving grade to a rare valley vista and at 37.7 a veritable panorama of hill and stream and vale. At 38.4 the road becomes very rough over new grading, but at 39.2 becomes gravel, not so wide as that recently traversed, but good going. Presently the road narrows for a short distance and there is a shallow ford through a pretty stream, then up a grade and back on the fine, wide gravel of No. 25.

At 43.0 plenty of good picnic places in a stretch of pine and scrub oak country, with picturesque rocks, ledges and ravines. At 44.7 a sharp right turn over a brook and a very steep up-grade on fine gravel road, and a mile or so of charming country.

At 46.6 the road runs perpendicularly into the road from Farmington to Ste. Genevieve, and swings sharply left. At 48.4, a very sharp curve and railroad underpass that call for cautious driving.

At Ste. Genevieve.

At 51.9 (68 miles from the Post-Dispatch Building in St. Louis) the Ste. Genevieve public square, with its fine old church. The road continues along Route No. 25. At the outskirts of the city, a ford through a shallow creek, then a pretty street above and along the stream. The road becomes good gravel along the bottom of bluffs and low hills, with the river bottoms at the left and some pretty vistas to enliven the journey. At 57.0, a sharp right curve and grade, then sharp left and a bridge over a river, sharp left and up a stiff grade, and on a winding road through pretty upland country, with a dip now and then into a richly colored creek bottom. At 61.4, St. Mary's. Straight ahead through the town and at 32.2 across a brook and left on a dirt road that ranges from so-so to very fair and winds through the river bottoms for 6.9 miles to West Chester, 69.3, on the bank of the Mississippi, with Chester sprawling

A NEW automobile, with its en- engine over the rear axle, is being shown in Syracuse, N. Y. The motor has 6 cylinders, is air cooled, and is rated at 50-horsepower. NOT TO BE IN CHEAP GLASS.

The Ajax, which is to be built by a subsidiary of the Nash Motors Co., is not to be built to compete in the cheapest car class, according to C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Co. On the contrary, says Nash, it will be "a product of genuine quality in every part, although, naturally, lower in price than any of the Nash models." Plans are to produce the Ajax on a volume basis.

SMALL ENGINE FOR THIS CAR.

An engine that really answers the description of a motor with small bore and long stroke is specified in the three-passenger Otomo car that is being planned by Japanese iron works. Specifications call for a four-cylinder engine with 2⅝-inch bore and 5-inch stroke and air-cooled, an 80-inch wheelbase and narrow tread. A price of $800 and production of 1000 cars a year are said to be planned.

You Remember the Man in Jail

His attorney said, "They can't put you in jail." But he was in.

Some say that Auburn cannot build as good a car for the money as the large quantity-producer.

But it's here—the Auburn 8-Eighty-Eight. The sensation of the St. Louis Show.

Any dealer who interprets this as a challenge is welcome to a comparison of any and all points; engineering, materials, workmanship, performance, comfort or body design.

How can Auburn do it?

Because Auburn's only purpose is to see how well they can build, not how many.

Because Auburn is financially sound—free from high finance and stock speculation; no bonded indebtedness; no inflation; no stock for sale.

Because there are many fallacies in the claims of economy due to volume production.

Because Auburn, or any of its officials have no affiliations of financial interest in companies manufacturing parts. Therefore, our engineering department is free to select the best quality units which the market affords without interference from men higher up.

There are other "becauses" but they are not as interesting as the car itself.

All owners of these finer, exclusive types of cars, know the difference between the unusual and the commonplace—they know what this difference means in pride of ownership, in better service and in economy of investment over a longer period of time.

We have only one "selling argument"—see, study, and drive the new Auburn 8-Eighty-Eight yourself. If it does not sell itself, we will not try to.

This car is now in production, ready for delivery. Come in today.

OLD FRENCH FORT AT END OF TOUR IN MISSOURI AND ILLINOIS

high on the bluffs on the opposite side of the river.

Over Into Illinois.

Presently the ferry comes puffing along and in a few minutes the party has driven up the long grade onto the bluffs and is lunching in a Chester hotel. Leaving Chester, the Jewett party followed Illinois State route No. 3 on concrete northward, noting at 78.7 a splendid sweeping view in every direction. At 85.7, Evansville, and roughish going through the town and to 86.4, where the concrete is picked up again.

About 87.5, the Jewett party swung to the left on a very fair dirt road signed "Ste. Genevive Ferry." The road ranged from very good to rough dirt, winding through a pretty countryside to 93.7, where it dropped down a valley into the Mississippi River bottoms, then swung along the base of the bluffs for about four miles.

On this stretch, the bluffs range from 50 to 100 feet high, and often serve as shelters for farm machinery and wood piles, and as back walls for barns, henhouses and pig styes. Every now and then the line of bluffs juts out in bold headlands, while always to the left is a wonderful, black dirt farming country. At 97.4 Prairie du Rocher.

At the Old Fort.

The road, well signposted, winds through the bottoms toward the river and at 101.9 is old Fort de Chartres, which was built by de Boisbriant in 1719 as headquarters of French Government in the West. The fort was rebuilt in 1755-65, and on Oct. 10, 1765, was surrendered to the British. It was abandoned and destroyed in 1772.

The old powder magazine, with thick walls of stone, solidly buttressed, and massive rounded roof, has been restored. The stone foundations of the walls that once inclosed the fort and its redoubts, and the foundations and cellars of the six stone barracks, also have been rebuilt. The fort walls inclosed a space about 350 yards long by 250 yards wide. The center was a parade ground, around which the barracks and administration buildings were grouped, two on each side and one at each end. The fort lies alongside a shallow ravine, and is a very attractive spot in which to pass an hour.

Under the Towering Bluffs.

Returning to Prairie du Rocher, the party drove north on an excellent dirt road under the bluffs, which in places tower above the road 150 to 300 feet. There were numerous red bud trees, and violets by the millions, on the slopes at the foot of the bluffs. At 103.0, the road left the bottoms and climbed up a long winding grade that was very steep, but well graded dirt. Then came 13 miles of well dragged, wide and fast dirt road to 122.0, where the concrete was picked up again. At 128.8, Waterloo. The trip ended at the Post-Dispatch Building, at 149.0 miles from the Meramec River bridge on the Lemay Ferry road (total mileage 165.5).

Short Route to the Fort.

One desirous of visiting Fort de Chartres by the shortest route should go via East St. Louis and Waterloo, following Illinois route No. 3 to a point about 6.8 miles beyond Waterloo where a sign directs one over a dirt road to the right to the Ste. Genevieve ferry. This dirt road leads to Prairie du Rocher and the fort, which by this route is 47 miles from the Post-Dispatch Building.

A Performing Car.

Better performance in traffic, at all ranges of driving speeds, on good and bad roads, and on the hills, than the Jewett showed Saturday has never been experienced by the writer. Former Jewett models have been star performers, but changes in the engine—including a 102-pound crankshaft, with counterbalancing in place of the 70-pound one, and other refinements—have greatly increased its power, have lessened vibration until it virtually has disappeared, and give a smoothness and swift flow of power that are startling. In fact, this car takes the gas so quietly—even when the throttle is "tramped on"—that it makes the old advice about choking a car and coaxing it up the grades completely out of date. Not the least factor in this performing ability is the fact that the engine has 3¼-inch bore and full 5-inch stroke, pressure lubrication that gives 40 pounds pressure at 45 m. p. h., and automatic spark advance. It is due to the size of the engine that it has been possible to build the chassis so ruggedly, yet not sacrifice speed and torque.

Saturday, in the stiffest pulling on some of the dirt grades, the car slowed to eight and 10 miles an hour on several very stiff pitches without the least knocking, and then accelerated the instant there was the least let-up in the steepness of the hill. Its ability to take grades at high speed and to accelerate on long, steep hills was, possibly, the most impressive aspect of the car's work. Its acceleration from five to 30 miles an hour, and from 35 to 40 to 50 and 55, was as swift and effortless as the writer has seen. And it may be stated here that the car runs 40 and 45 miles an hour as steadily as a clock, without heating, and dashes past other cars like a streak when one wants to go by from behind—and that means a lot in touring. It can deliver as much speed as one can use in the pinches.

The car used Saturday was a Jewett de luxe brougham, with balloon tires, one-piece windshield and all the other things that go with de luxe models as standard equipment. It is finished in Duco, has long, easy riding spring suspension and improved steering gear. Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes are furnished at moderate extra cost.

The car was driven Saturday by H. Claude Merry, sales manager of the Wilson Motor Car Co., local Jewett distributer, and the passengers included John W. Davis of the Wilson Co. sales force and two newspaper men.

creases, due to the fact they were already at or close to capacity.

Hudson advanced output 250 cars daily to 1000 a day, a speeding up permitted by plant expansions recently completed or under way.

Chevrolet showed a sharp upturn.

Ford's increase also was large. Studebaker quietly has moved up schedules to a decidedly high point.

Sales are taking a faster pace. This is true in all sections, dealers' reports show.

Inability to suply dealers' orders immediately is due to the fact that manufacturers have held rigidly to the policy of keeping production down to actual demand. But all prefer the present situation rather than the one that existed last year—speeded up production, large stocks of cars and the sudden collapse of which left them and back-breaking numbers of hand that were sold long delays and profit-pense.

FOR TEN YEARS
"The World's Greatest Buy"
Everyone Says It—Sales Prove It

It is only as you find the real comparisons for Hudson qualities among the costliest cars that the enormous difference in price is so astonishing.

Today it offers the greatest price advantage and finest quality in Hudson history. Never was this supremacy of value so outstanding. And the greatest Hudson sales on record show how complete is public knowledge of the facts.

Is There Any Reason to Pay More?

Hudson's position as the "World's Greatest Buy" is not merely a new attainment. It is acknowledgment of ten years' refinement of a great car around the famous patented Super-Six principle. No motor design, however costly, has been found to displace this long-time leadership of the exclusive Super-Six.

It is responsible for the way Hudsons endure the hardest service, free of mechanical annoyance, and retain their new car vigor and flexibility when they have become old in point of years and service.

Its simplicity has always meant a lower selling price than is permitted in complicated types. And today, economies possible only to the largest production of 6-cylinder closed cars give it value advantages never held by any rival.

All now know that higher price can buy no smoother performance than Hudson's. It cannot buy more brilliant results in acceleration, power or speed. It cannot buy greater reliability or endurance.

No car at or near the price rivals the Hudson Coach in actual proof of value—which is SALES.

PUTTING IN ORDER FOR CAR EARLY IS ADVISED

Delay in Getting Delivery Predicted for Buyers Who Wait Much Longer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Analysis of reports from automobile factories and dealers all over the country indicates good reason to expect that those who delay putting in their orders for automobiles this spring and early summer will suffer long delays in getting delivery.

Putting off ordering until the week one wants a car, or even the week before, is regarded as almost certain to result in disappointment. Conditions this year are unusual and are such that the industry cannot adjust itself to a sudden flood of buying orders.

The factories are working on a basis different from that of past years. Factory and dealer warehouses are not full of cars. Factories are holding down production in accordance with actual taking of orders by dealers and forwarding to the plants. Reserve stocks of cars are the smallest in years. The specter of overproduction is being shunned by factory, dealer and banker.

which has 18 busses and plans to add more.

Within the last few days this company has started running an expresse bus service from Wellston via St. Charles and the new concrete highway through St. Peters, O'Fallon, Wentzville, Forristel and Wright City to Warrenton, stopping only in the towns. The buses on this line make the trip to Warrenton, 63 miles, in three and a half hours.

Line to Hannibal Planned.

Of interest to everyone who would like to travel through the pretty and historic country up the Mississippi through Troy, Louisiana, New London and Hannibal is the news that plans are being made to start within a short time a line of buses from Wellston to Hannibal, a trip of about 130 miles.

The buses are to run via St. Charles on concrete to Wentzville, then north over State Route No. 9 on gravel through Troy to Eolia, then swing northeast over the gravel toll road to Louisiana, on the bank of the Mississippi, then north and northwest on a gravel toll road to Frankfort, then to New London, where stands a historic tavern which often housed Senator Benton and other personages of the old days, and over a splendid gravel pike to Hannibal. This will be one of the most interesting bus trips in the Middle West.

To Union and Washington.

St. Louis-Union-Washington-St. Clair bus service is a settled daily fact. One line runs 57 miles via Locust, Lindell, Euclid, Clayton road, McCausland avenue and the Manchester road to Union and then to Washington. These buses leave St. Louis twice daily. Another bus line runs between Washington and St. Clair via Union.

Another bus line starts at the City Limits loop in Maplewood and runs over the Manchester road to Manchester, Ballwin, Ellisville, Pond and Hollow, a trip of 25 miles.

Line to Eureka and Pacific.

A line of interest now, which will become doubly interesting as the Meramec River resort season advances, runs from St. Louis via the Big Bend road through Webster Groves to Meramec Highlands, then goes over the Quinette and Dougherty Ferry roads to Valley Park, and thence over the Antire road to Eureka, Allenton and Pacific—a distance of 44 miles. The busses of this line make the run in 2 hours and 15 minutes.

Road construction has put difficulties in the way of operating the busses on the Gravois road beyond Fenton.

To Flat River and Farmington.

Another line that is of even more interest from the viewpoint of future service to the summer resort regions than now, when it serves a more limited field, runs over the Lemay Ferry road to over the Lemay Ferry road to Mehlville, Maxville, Antonia, Goldmann, Hillsboro, De Soto, Bonne Terre, Flat River and Farmington, a run of 80 miles. Busses leave St. Louis twice each afternoon and make the run to Farmington in 4 hours. They leave Farmington twice a day and make the run to St. Louis in 3½ hours. This route goes over the steep hills beyond Maxville, including Seckman Hill, which serves as a test grade for the high gear climbing powers of motor cars.

Bus service beyond Farmington to Ironton and Arcadia via Bismarck in one direction, to Poplar Bluff via Fredericktown and Greenville, and to Cape Girardeau via Fredericktown and Jackson, will be only a matter of time, and may come this summer.

Service to Festus.

For some weeks a line of busses has been running daily on regular schedule between Twelfth and Olive streets in St. Louis out the Lemay Ferry road, across the Meramec River and then down the new concrete road through Barnhart and Pevely to Festus and Crystal City, a run of 35 miles. These busses make three trips daily from St. Louis. At Festus the busses connect with a bus line through Hematite, Victoria and De Soto to Farmington.

To Ste. Genevieve and Perryville.

A bus line which at present uses touring cars, is operating from St. Louis via Festus and Ste. Genevieve to Perryville, a distance of 91 miles. It gives once a day service, and the run is made in four hours.

The operator of this line has contracted for regular busses with which to put the service on the same basis as that given by other lines, and says he expects to have these busses running to Perryville by April 10.

Contracts have been entered into that are said to assure bus service from St. Louis clear through Festus, Ste. Genevieve and Perryville to Cape Girardeau, about May 1, and soon thereafter from Cape Girardeau through Jackson to Farmington.

Southeast Missouri Bus Lines.

Extension of the bus lines from St. Louis to Poplar Bluff and Cape Girardeau means immediate connection with the busses already in operation throughout Southeast Missouri.

From Cape Girardeau a bus line runs to Sikeston, is on State Highway No. 16 over which a series of bus lines run from Bird's Point, on the Mississippi River, opposite Cairo, through Charleston, Sikeston and Dexter to Poplar Bluff, whence other lines run through Doniphan and West Plains to Springfield, traversing a region of great scenic beauty. This series of bus lines, of course, would be intersected by a line from Farmington to Poplar Bluff. In Southeast Missouri there are also bus lines from Sikeston to Madrid, and from Dexter in several directions.

Northeast Missouri Possibilities.

Extension of the Wellston-St. Charles line to Troy, Louisiana and Hannibal means a connection from St. Louis with bus lines that will be developed from Hannibal over the Mississippi River toward Quincy and other Illinois cities, northward through Palmyra and La Grange to Keokuk, Ia., and with the lines that will be developed over State primary route No. 8 from Hannibal through Macon, Brookfield and Chillicothe toward St. Joseph.

Helps to Develop Bus Lines.

The Kardell Motor Car Co., which distributes Reo cars, speed wagons and busses in this territory, has played a large part in the development of bus lines radiating from the city. The busses on the

ATTENTION, CHEVROLET OWNERS

Don't get pinched with your license plate behind the bumper.

Here is an accessory that you really need. It is a combination front fender brace and license plate holder, fitting all 1923-24-25 model Chevrolets. By making fenders rigid, it prevents fender irons breaking down from constant vibration, steadies headlights and eliminates rattles. Installation requires only 15 minutes with a single wrench. No drilling.

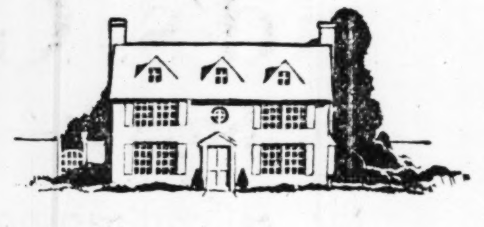
Every Woman Knows these things — Some Men Do

[Every woman has a strangely powerful faculty, called intuition. She just knows things—most men have to learn them.]



Here is a great, big, old fashioned house.

The vintage of 1896.

Style—Rokoko Kokomo.

It was built when Billy Bryan began to run for president.

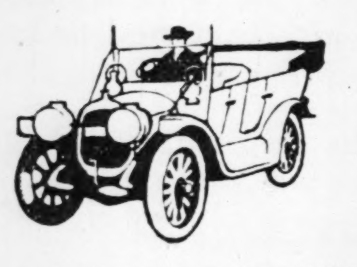
The ceilings were high, but not as high as the cost.

It took the family somewhere socially.

The corners were many and the dust was plentiful.

It stands today—but vacant.

Here is a big, old fashioned automobile.



It was built in the spring of 1915.

Its top was high, but not as high as the cost.

The wheel base was great, but not as great as the depreciation.

It cost a lot of money to buy and to keep—but it took the family somewhere socially.

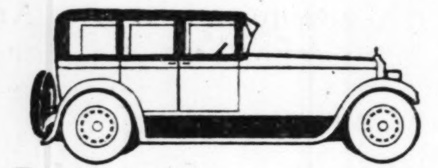
Here is a modern house—built in the suburbs.

Plenty of room but not rambly.

No iron deers in the front yard.

Distinctive—easy to take care of—comfortable—easy to sell and never vacant.

Here is a modern automobile.



It is The Great Jordan Line Eight.

Graceful in line—a joy in comfort—light and economical—quick on its feet.

It has replaced that long line of one, two, four and six cylinder automobiles which preceded it.

No women can be satisfied with a cramped house or a cramped automobile, but she does not want a bulky one.

No woman can be satisfied with anything ordinary if she can afford something better.

That is why The Great Jordan Line Eight selling at $1000 to $2000 below the bulky cars has acquired leadership in the new style field—the field of the Line Eights.

STARTING ON COMPRESSION.

A six-cylinder engine that will start on compression (starting by switching on the ignition without using starter when warm) is usually out of balance. Sometimes incorrect timing of the valves will enable a six to do this. Usually, however, the engine will not perform satisfactorily in other ways.

One of the first of the new Franklin sedans, whose body lines have been completely redesigned, is on a 25,000 mile endurance test run that has taken it through the South into Texas. The car is to stop at the principal Franklin distributers and is expected to be at the Franklin Motor Car Co. of St. Louis soon. The test run has covered some of the worst roads in this country. SERVICE MANAGERS ORGANIZE

A SERVICE Managers' Bureau, under the auspices of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, has just been organized with John O. Lowell, service manager for the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., as chairman and William G. Miller, service manager for the Stewart-Warner Co., as vice-chairman. Robert E. Lee, secretary-manager of the Dealers' Association, will act as secretary for the bureau. Lee outlined the aims of the bureau as encouraging discussion of service and shop problems, comparison of methods of handling the public and employes, elimination of lost time and motion in service work, and general betterment of maintenance and repair work. Dan F. Hyland, manager of the Stewart-Warner Products Corporation, gave an illustrated talk on speedometer regulation and abuse. F. C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co. and of the Dealers' Association, spoke on the value to service managers and automobile firms of such a bureau, and said it was not intended that there be any dues or fees. Others who spoke included John O. Lowell, W. J. Van DaGrift, W. M. Venner, W. G. Miller, A. N. Hoffner, Paul W. Pelsue, E. W. Conway, T. L. Crosby, F. H. Butteiger, E. S. Todd, Adam Eginger, C. T. Hoffmeister and K. M. Funstein. A program committee is to arrange for meetings, and the topic for the next session will be "Lost Time in Shops."

MOVES INTO NEW BUILDING.

The Motor Sales Co., owned and operated by William J. Geisler, Willys-Knight and Overland dealer for years at 908 Chestnut street, is now occupying its new building at 1911 Locust street. The new quarters consist of a modern brick, fireproof building, 60x155 feet, with large showroom and service station. A ventilated skylight runs the entire length of the building. A traveling crane in the all-steel beam ceiling makes moving cars and heavy objects quick and easy. There are no posts. The accessory department is on the balcony above the showroom. A rear entrance on St. Charles street makes easy and convenient access for garage purposes. F. C. Rogers is in charge of sales.

FACTORY OFFICERS ON VISIT.

DODGE BROTHERS
SPECIAL
TOURING CAR

The first cars bearing Dodge Brothers name were Touring Cars.

They were good and sturdy cars, so good and so sturdy that no radical change in basic design has been found necessary during these ten intervening years.

This fact has had far-reaching results. It has enabled Dodge Brothers to dedicate those ten years to the constant betterment of the original product.

More recently this endless process of improvement has manifested itself in various and impressive ways—in a new degree of riding comfort, a new smoothness of operation, a new and appealing beauty of line, and in those special details of appointment which distinguish the Special Touring Car.

Every Chandler has the Traffic Transmission and only Chandler offers it.

Never a care as she drives

Naturally the American woman prefers a Chandler.

She admires the fundamental beauty and distinction of the Chandler-Fisher bodies.

She glories in the smooth and splendid power of the Pikes Peak Motor.

She delights in the sharp but velvety action of Chandler 4-wheel brakes—and takes comfort in the dependability that time has linked with the Chandler name.

But most of all she prefers her Chandler because she knows that the Traffic Transmission enables her to drive anywhere with serene self confidence.

She knows she can never clash gears—never fail to engage the proper gear with expert smoothness whether on hills or in heavy traffic.

She knows that her car is always under perfect control and that she can readily change from high to second or low at any speed!

And so she drives her Chandler when and where she will, with never a care.

"The Ignition System."

AFTER the trouble he had had with his generator Smith resolved to make a study of the whole ignition system. But his plan would have gone the way of all resolutions had he not been caught on the road with a "dead" engine. He was literally forced to learn or be stranded.

It happened that I was in the car with him, but when he looked at me as much as to say, "Here's a job for you," I decided to let him work over matters a while and learn by the "deduction" method.

"I'm sure the trouble is in the wiring," he began, "because the engine stopped suddenly without any hesitation, which is usually the case when the gas line is to blame. I wonder if it could be this thing," he continued, pointing to the coil box.

"I'm sure I don't know," I said, "but wouldn't it be more logical to start with the ignition wires?"

"Yes," Smith agreed, "but they seem to be connected to the spark plugs and apparently the wires are not broken."

"Very good. Then the next thing to do is to examine the distributor. There can't be anything wrong with the spark plugs, because they wouldn't all go bad at once; you could get a little action out of the engine anyway."

Smith began looking around for the distributer, and ended by examining the connections on the generator.

"You might as well be examining the brakes," I said. "They are about as much to blame for this breakdown as the generator."

"I thought this was the distributer," Smith pleaded.

"You should know better," I retorted. "What does the word distributer mean? Simply a means of distributing the ignition current to the respective plugs. Thus by following the ignition wires back from the plugs you arrive at the head of the distributer on the in-ends in a contact point on the inside of the cover. The electric current coming up through the shaft is distributed to the contact points by means of a rotor, which works in unison with the timer, so that the spark arrives at each cylinder at the right time."

At this point Smith looked worried. "Here's a thing that puzzles me," he said. "For electric current you have got to have two wires; one for the positive charge, the other for the negative. How does the spark get to the plugs through these single wires?"

"Did you ever see two overhead wires to operate a street car?" I asked by way of arriving at an explanation. "The positive current goes through the overhead wire and the car completes the electric cycle through its contact with the tracks and the ground. It's some-

"Did you ever see two overhead wires to operate a street car?" I asked by way of arriving at an explanation. "The positive current goes through the overhead wire and the car completes the electric cycle through its contact with the tracks and the ground. It's somewhat the same with the ignition system of the automobile. The negative wire is grounded to the metal frame. Therefore, you only need a one-wire system, though some cars are equipped with a two-wire system for lighting."

"Good enough," Smith replied, "but here's another point. How do they manage to jump a spark across the gap between the spark-plug points when there is only a six-volt battery in the car? The four dry cells which run our doorbell give hardly any spark and then only when you touch the wires together."

"Now you're asking a real question," I replied. "When you get this idea in your mind you will see the whole ignition system clearly. We start with six volts running through the positive wire from the battery. This wire winds around an iron core and then terminates in what is known as the 'make and break,' which is directly under the rotor in the distributer. Around this primary winding of wire is a secondary coil of a very large number of turns of fine wire carefully insulated from the other. One end of this wire is grounded and the other goes to the rotor in the distributer."

"Wait a minute," Smith interrupted. "How the mischief does the current get from one coil to the other?"

"By induction," I replied. "That's why the arrangement is called an 'induction coil.' This is the thing practical jokers use when they give you an electric shock. When the current is interrupted in the primary coil electromotive force of high voltage is induced in the secondary. If the ends of the wires of the secondary winding are slightly separated a spark will jump across the gap. That is what happens at the spark plugs. The current in the primary is interrupted by the 'make and break" which is timed to work in harmony with the rotor. There are many details to the subject, of course, but this is the principle of the ignition system."

And to make it clear we decided to follow the current from the battery to the plugs. The lesson proved to be of twofold value, because we discovered that the wire to the positive post of the battery had not been properly connected. The current was not even reaching the ignition system, so it was not difficult to understand why the engine stalled. Had an experienced motorist been looking for the trouble he would have discovered that the battery was in some way to blame when he tried the lights and found they would not burn. But Smith lost nothing by taking the detour.

Next Week—"A Blowout."

AUTO SALES SCHOOL HELD

A school for dealers and salesmen in the St. Louis territory was conducted from 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. daily the past week under the direction of C. L. Voss, district manager for the Oakland Motor Car Co., and G. A. Johnston, field instructor from the Oakland factory's sales development department. There was a full course of lectures, covering various aspects of salesmanship and conducting of automobile dealers' business. Of special interest was the session Thursday on best ways to conduct a maintenance department so as to make it attract new customers, satisfy old customers and generally build up a dealer's business. Another session of the school will be held here in about 60 days, when the course will include a different set of topics. The country has been divided into three zones, and in each similar schools are being conducted daily.

F. A. MacCarthy, formerly with the St. Louis Motor Car Co. and the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., has joined the MacCarthy-Archer Co., Jordan distributer, as territory man in Illinois and Southeast Missouri. Palmer D. Weeks, who has been selling fine cars in Chicago, also has joined the MacCarthy-Archer sales force.

MANAGER FOR TIRE DEALERS

The directors of the Associated Tire Dealers of St. Louis have decided to put the association on a solid business basis, especially in preparation for the national tire dealers' convention here in November. They have appointed Arthur G. Jennings, who now is a practicing attorney, as manager. Jennings is devoting part of his time to the work, but after June 1 is to give it his entire attention. He will be the principal speaker at the next meeting of the association at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, April 14.

ANNIVERSARY DINNER.

The first anniversary meeting and dinner of the South Side Chevrolet, Inc., of which C. W. Pfrimmer is president and Chet Cook sales manager, was held Monday at Hotel Statler, with a theater party at the Orpheum. Cook acted as toastmaster at the dinner. H. J. Klingler, zone sales manager for the Chevrolet factory, told how production was being increased as fast as possible to meet the demand for the new Chevrolet car. O. E. Nonn, assistant zone sales manager, congratulated the South Side Chevrolet, Inc., on its rapid growth since its opening a year ago. Pfrimmer spoke optimistically of the sales outlook for the year.

BUS LINES RADIATING FROM ST. LOUIS ARE TO BE EXTENDED SOON

St. Louis-Pacific route, are Reos. So are the busses on the St. Louis-Union-Washington, the Maplewood-Ellisville-Hollo and the St. Louis-De Soto-Farmington lines. Eight of the busses on the Wellston-St. Charles line are Reos, and Reos are running to Warrenton and will be operated on the St Louis-Hannibal line. Much of this bus line development has been pioneer work by the Kardell Co., for not only has the firm sold busses to would-be bus line operators, but it also has worked out profitable routes, obtained promises of support and in numerous ways assisted in putting the lines on a solid basis.

There are five Mason Road King busses among those running on the Wellston-St. Charles line, but Mason busses are playing their chief development role on the routes to Festus and Crystal City and are likely to be the chief factor in bus line development south of Festus into the Ste. Genevieve-Perryville-Cape Girardeau region.

The largest bus deal put through in this region was the sale by the Kardell Co. of 14 Reo busses to the County Bus Co., which started as a subsidiary of a real estate company which is developing a subdivision and so needs bus service from railroad and trolley car terminals to its property. The County Bus Co., however, has enlarged its scope of operations until now it is operating an extensive Kirkwood-Maplewood-Clayton service.

ROAD BUILDING IN WEST MISSOURI OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

sion has given assurance that the entire length of this highway in Henry County will be paved, because it is the most traveled road in the county.

The City Council of Clinton has awarded a contract for paving of a mile of Second street in Clinton, the street used by Nos. 13 and 24.

Bridge Built Over Another.

The new bridge is built over a concrete culvert which drained a large area, the old span being insufficient for drainage. It is in the middle of a mile of high fill south of the steel and concrete bridge over Deepwater Creek, six miles from Clinton and one mile from Deepwater. The land on both sides of the road is marshy and subject to overflow from Deepwater Creek.

Department, the section now in dispute would have been completed.

It is said that fully 9 out of 10 persons in Clinton have been acquiescent, but a small minority, which insisted upon another location, obtained a writ which has tied the hands of the Highway Department and also rendered helpless the remainder of the residents of the county, as well as outside interests seeking to get the paving finished.

It is asserted that an old grudge between two families in De Witt County, some conflict of real estate interests, and perhaps a little politics, have combined to cause the ill-feeling which has prevented construction of this short stretch in the great highway.

FORD DEALERS TO GUARANTEE USED CARS SOLD BR THEM

It is announced by Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., that, operating under a company plan, Ford dealers hereafter will place a guarantee upon used Ford cars disposed of by them.

The Ford Motor Co. is the first large automobile concern to take direct steps in the matter of used cars. As there are about as many Fords in operation in the country as all other makes combined, it is apparent that the action of the Ford Motor Co. will exert a wide influence on the marketing of used cars.

"Every used Ford car represents so much unusuad transportation and is of value to some one." Ford said in his statement. "The Ford dealer, through his position and intimate knowledge of the car, certainly is the best judge as to the value of this transportation—the best fitted to determine a price on the mileage the car may yet be expected to deliver—that's his business.

"With this advantage, the Ford dealer is prepared to give his used car customers benefits not likely to be obtained elsewhere."

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS TO BROADCAST MUSIC

Mrs. Coolidge Expresses Her Preference As to the Type of Concerts to Be Sent Out.

The President and Congress have accepted the gift to the Congressional Library by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge of Pittsfield, Mass., which involves $60,000 for the building of an auditorium in connection with the music division of the Library of Congress. An endowment is included, the income of which will ultimately reach $25,000 a year. Elaborate plans for broadcasting the concerts are being made and only artists consenting to have their music broadcast will be engaged. All artists will be paid.

The feature of the programs will be chamber music, "a name applied to that class of music which is especially fitted for performance in a room as distinguished from concert music or such other kinds of music as require many performers."

In practice it is usually a string quartet with frequently the addition of other instruments, such as the piano, or for older music, the harpsichord, flute, oboe, clarinet, horn and other wind instruments.

An indication of what Mrs. Coolidge had in mind as the essential things to be done is expressed in her wish that preference be given to "the composition and performance of music in ways which might be considered too unusual or too expensive to be ordinarily undertaken, giving precedence to consideration of quality over those of quantity, of artistic over economic values, and of opportunity over expediency."

Ground will be broken about the middle of next month for the auditorium and the work will be pushed through the summer. It will be a fitting part of the Library of Congress building and the plans have been drawn by Charles Platt, the architect of the Freer Gallery of Art, in Washington. The construction of the new hall will be supervised by David Lynn, architect of the Capitol.

It is expected that an organ will form part of the hall's equipment. The first concerts will be broadcast the latter part of October. The seating capacity of the hall will be about 500.

NEW RADIO STATIONS MAY NOT TAKE AIR

Crowding of the Class A and Class B Bands Leaves No Room for New Broadcasters.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Warnings are being sent out by the Department of Commerce to the owners of broadcasting stations now under construction or contemplated that it will be impossible for them to operate upon completion because every wave length is crowded to capacity.

The traffic situation in the national Capital has caused considerable worry both to Congress and local authorities. But perplexing as it is, it cannot begin to compare with the wave length problem confronting the Department of Commerce.

Every Class A and Class B wave length has been assigned. There are in operation around 550 stations of all classes. Many individuals and companies who are aware of the publicity resulting from the operation of a station have either begun the construction or made plans for Class B stations.

Some doubt existed as to whether the Department of Commerce has the authority under the law to refuse a wave length to stations. Officials of the department have thoroughly considered this point, but are convinced that their action is absolutely necessary to safeguard the public interest.

At the present time, Class B stations are crowded so close together on the ether that a very selective set is required to separate them. Thousands of complaints reaching the department have pointed to the desirability of even eliminating some of the present stations.

There are now 20,000,000 in the United States who listen in regularly on radio, 3,750,000 having receiving sets with an average of 5.4 listeners to each set.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. In our neighborhood there is an amateur constantly sending code messages and our radio evenings are continually being spoiled by this annoyance. Kindly advise if anything can be done to stop this. —M. R.

A. If you are sure that the disturbance is being caused by an amateur station rather than by one of dozens of other kinds of interference and you are certain that the trouble is in his transmitter rather than in your receiving set write to the supervisor of radio in the Federal Building at Chicago. It will be necessary too that you give the offender's name and address and the hours that he sends.

Q. Recently my set has been picking up a buzzing sound on all wave lengths from 100 to 600 meters. This is continuous from 6 p. m. until 10 p. m. and makes it impossible to receive the broadcasting stations. I think that it is caused by an amateur transmitting station that is in the vicinity. Can anything be done to correct this? B. C. W., Wellston, Mo.

A. We have had a number of complaints of a disturbance that seems to be centered in Wellston. From the reports that have come to us we judge that it is not an amateur, but a power leak or some electrical device that is defective. The only organization that we know of that is making an effort to eliminate such interference is the Radio Society of St. Louis, of which A. R. Allison, 3835 De Giverville, is secretary.

Q. There is a man in our town who runs a motor generator to charge and recharge automobile batteries. When this charger is working it sends out so much disturbance that no one in the neighborhood can receive anything with their radio sets. To whom can we report this man in order that he may be made to stop interfering with radio reception? J. R. E.

A. It is doubtful that any person of authority could compel the man to eliminate the inteference caused by his machine, unless you take the matter to court and charge him with running a device that is a public nuisance. However, it is most probable that if you and your radio friends were to go to him and tell him of the disturbance he would attempt to remedy the trouble. Approach him in a gentlemanlike way and if he infers that he does not know what to do to correct the trouble, have him write to us and we will gladly tell him what could be done.

Q. While my radio was in operation during a thunderstorm there were two flashes about five minutes apart in the tuning condenser. What caused this and what would the result be if the aerial wire were struck by lightning? C. W.

A. The sparks that discharged across the condenser were caused by static charges that collected on the antenna and found their way to the ground through the condenser. It is best to ground the antenna during a thunderstorm by the use of a lightning switch. If lightning were to strike your antenna with it connected to the set it would very probably ruin the receiver and set fire to the house. However, the chances of this happening are very slight.

Q. 1. A neutrodyne five-tube set which gave excellent service until the rearrangement of wave lengths some months past now receives nothing but interference except on long wave length stations such as KSD, WHO and WOAW. Below about 500 meters I get nothing but whistles or several stations at once. Can anything be done to produce more selectivity? 2. In charging a radio battery from a 32-volt plant as described in a recent edition of your paper is it necessary to keep the amperage down to 5 amps when charging all batteries in series? C. F.

A. 1. Your trouble is that the radio frequency amplifier tube capacities are not properly neutralized. This could be caused by poor adjustments of the neutralizing condensers or by their not being connected right. If you hear the stations on the longer wave lengths the chances are that the remainder of the set is connected all right. 2. The average charging rate for radio batteries is five amperes, due partly to the fact that the home chargers used deliver that amount of current, and also because radio batteries are not made for heavy duty and therefore will not stand as high a charging rate as batteries made for other purposes. If you are using a battery for lighting your tubes that is of the same type as those in your regular lighting plant, and charge it in series with the latter, it is advisable to hold the current at the maximum charging rate specified by the manufacturer of the batteries and plant. If you have an ordinary radio battery placed in series with the lighting batteries, it would be best to hold the charging current to five or seven amperes. The maximum charging rate is determined by the ability of the battery to take the charge without heating so if care is taken not to permit the battery to get too hot, it can be charged at a higher rate. When this is done, there is always danger of the battery becoming too hot when the attendant is away, and it is for this reason that we would not recommend a heavy charging current.

Q. What can I do to my Ultradyne to get the higher wave length stations? Five hundred meters is as high as I can tune to. When listening to WMC the oscillator condenser is all the way in and the antenna tuning condenser is at 84. A. S.

A. If you hear WMC with the antenna tuning condenser at 84, that circuit will tune up to 546, the highest wave length used by broadcasting stations. A larger capacity condenser across the oscillator coil or a larger oscillator coil would permit the oscillator to tune to the higher wave lengths. If you are using a .0005-mf. condenser across the oscillator coil, the simplest method of correcting the trouble would be to connect a .00025-mf. fixed condenser across the variable condenser. A switch would have to be used to disconnect this fixed condenser when listening to the short-wave length stations.

Value of a Wave Trap.

A wave trap is a coil shunted by a condenser, inserted in series with the antenna lead-in or ground wire of the receiving set to eliminate interference. By tuning the wave trap to the wave length of an interfering station, the undesired signals can generally be eliminated. The wave trap offers high impedance to the wave of the undesired station and at the same time offers normal impedance to the station the operator wishes to hear. A good wave trap for use on the wave lengths used for broadcasting can be made by using a honeycomb coil No. 75 and a 23 plate variable condenser with vernier control. If interference is caused by a station using higher wave length than employed by broadcasting stations, a larger honeycomb coil should be substituted.

DISCARDING THE PRIMARY.

Better distances can be covered at a slight sacrifice in selectivity with present-day low loss tuners by removing the antenna and ground connections to the untuned primary and connecting them to the secondary coil through two .0005 mfd. fixed condensers; that is, one condenser should be connected in each lead. This method will give a capacity coupling between the primary and secondary and will eliminate the coupling control between the primary and secondary.

Greater signal strength will also be had, due to the direct feeding of energy into the tuned circuit without the loss which usually is had when a transfer of energy is made from one circuit to another.

SMALL TRANSMITTER IS HEARD IN GUAM

Navy Sending Set Weighs Only 50 Pounds and Runs on Two 50-Watt Tubes.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A radio set weighing 50 pounds with a sending range of 15,000 miles, is now in use at the Marine Flying Field, Quantico, Va. This set sends with a high frequency wave on a length varying frob 60 to 90 meters. Messages from this equipment were recently received on the Island of Guam, in the Western Pacific. Guam is 10,000 miles west of Quantico and 15,000 thousand miles east. The message was sent at 2 a. m. Eastern Standard Time, at which time a greater part of the world is in darkness to the east than to the west. Because of the fact that radio waves travel better in the dark than in sunlight, and as equipment of this nature has never been known to send 10,000 miles in daytime, it is considered certain that the message traveled easterly, by the longer but darker route.

This set is operated with two 50-watt vocuum tubes and is of very compact design, measuring not over two feet in any dimension. This long range, light weight radio equipment, with a very small power input necessary, has been developed for use on aircraft of the Navy and Marine Corps, a field of radio use where light weight is a prime factor. Another advantage that this equipment possesses is that its wave length range of 60 to 90 meters does not in any way conflict with the commercial radiophone broadcasting wave lengths, which fall between 350 and 600 meters. This commercially used range has become very crowded, and the Navy has made efforts to design equipment that would operate out of it, such as the set at Quantico.

Size of Radio Shields.

When shielding is resorted to to eliminate interference from body capacity it is much better to use a small shield for each instrument than a large one covering the whole panel, as a loss of efficiency, due to intercapacity between the instruments, is likely to result in the latter case.

Causes of Inaction.

When no signal can be heard on the detector and no other noises, the trouble may be caused by a short-circuit of the phone condenser, run-down batteries, battery polarity reversed, broken connection in phone cord or set, poor socket contact, or poor contact in phone plug or jack.

Before anyone carries a radio set off on a vacation in France, the set must be registered, the amateur must tell where it is to be taken, how long it will be used, and af few other details of the proposed trip must be given.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

Two new low-loss coils that are quite different from any that have appeared on the market have been announced by the Reichmann company of Chicago. These coils, one of which is for the antenna tuning circuit and the other to be used as a tuned radio-frequency transformer, are known as doughnut coils. This particular name was given to the coils because of their resemblance to a doughnut. The advantage that is claimed for the doughnut coils is that the electrical field around the wires has been reduced to a minimum. A straight coil wound on a cardboard tube has a field that is very pronounced, and when used with a primary winding for a radio-frequency amplifying transformer the coil has to be tilted so that the field does not induce current into any other portion of the circuit. The field of such a coil is greatest at the ends of the coil and parallel to the coil. The area of the field spreads out over quite a space. In the doughnut coils the ends of the coils are brought together in such a manner that the electrical field falls within the coils and therefore does not affect other nearby circuits. The Thorola doughnut coils can be used in any number of different circuits, but are particularly advantageous in tuned radio-frequency amplifiers.

The Colin B. Kennedy company of St. Louis is announcing a new flexible, cushioned, nonmicrophonic vacuum-tube socket which will be used in the company's own sets and will also be marketed as a part for amateur-set builders. One of the most important features of the socket is the mounting bracket used to take up vibration. It is held in place by two aluminum rivets with extended heads so that the socekt cannot be forced down enough to damage it. A piece of insulation is placed between the flexible mounting and the tube contacts to eliminate the possibility of the contacts touching the mounting.

INVENTS A SUBSTITUTE FOR CRYSTAL RECTIFIER

PARIS, April 4.—A discovery of the highest importance to radio enthusiasts as well as to the application of wireless telephony and telegraphy to commercial purposes has just been patented by M. Felix Thuaud, the well known French steel manufacturer. If consists of a new substance to replace the galena crystal used as a detector. According to a statement made by the inventor, his substitute can be placed upon the market at about one-fourth the price of the substance now used. M. Thuaud discovered his substance while studying the byproducts of steel manufacture. Noticing a material that somewhat resembled the crystal used in a friend's radio set, he chipped off a few pieces and asked him to try the new material. To their surprise it was found that concerts were heard over longer distances and with far greater clearness than with the galena points. Further study enabled M. Thuaud, to perfect the method of manufacture, which is expected to arouse attention wherever radio has found a footing.

The basis of the new material is a combination of silicon and iron, with the former in dominant proportions. It can be made in either an electrical furnace or ordinary crucible, commencing with the production of ferro-silicon through reduction of quartz in the presence of charcoal and limestone. After two delicate refining processes the material is poured out in ingots and subjected to a rapid solidifying process that prevents separation of the basic particles.

USES SAME AERIAL FOR TWO MESSAGES

Waves of Different Frequencies Sent Out at Same Time by French Amateur.

Another striking advance was recently made by the well-known French radio amateur, M. Leon Deloy, in his transatlantic experiments with short waves, when he succeeded in transmitting two messages simultaneously on the same aerial. The inability to send more than one message at a time has been one of the main reasons that wireless has not been more successful in supplanting the bulky and troublesome cables for transoceanic communication; and Deloy was convinced that the solution could be most readily found in the use of short wave lengths of different values. And although the transmission of two messages simultaneously has been accomplished before, the process is still young enough for homage to be rendered to the few amateurs who are experimenting with its possibilities.

About the middle of February, Deloy accomplished successfully simultaneous transmission upon two different wave lengths. Two sending stations were used in the experiment, one set to transmit on a 55-meter wave length and the other set at 90 meters, each set working on a separate antenna, distinctly untuned. Both sets were fed by the same transformer, which raised the sector tension to 2000 volts. The key was in the transformer primary and commanded directly the transmissions of the two stations. The 55-meter transmitter was fed directly in 25 periods and took about 400 watts. The 90-meter one was fed by the intermediary of two kenotrons and took about 200 watts.

Both of thes etransmissions were received with great strength in America, so Deloy took one step farther about the end of the month and repeated his experiment, using one aerial only, this time for the two wave lengths, and meeting with as great success as before. The hook-up used was virtually the same as that used in the preceding experiment, except that the antenna was coupled to the two sets by two inductance coils mounted in series.

Deloy's experiments go far toward proving that simultaneous transmission of many messages upon a single antenna is extremely simple, using various short wave lengths of set values, and that such a method could be practically used with success by the commercial radio companies.

Value of Larger Holes.

When drilling a hole for a variocoupler, variometer, or variable condenser, it is good practice to make the hole for the shaft larger than it should be. For instance, say the shaft is ¼ inch, then make the hole for ⅜ inch. This large hole will not only prevent the dial from wobbling in many instances, but it will also make the condenser run smoother, for the shaft often touches the panel at various points.

USE OF LOW WAVES ON THE INCREASE

Navy and Commercial Transmitters Show Efficiency of Sending and Reception Below 100 Meters.

The reliable range attained by high-frequency or short-wave transmitters, with relatively low power, at night is reported great, and the number of such naval and commercial stations is increasing, according to Capt. Ridley McLean, Director of Naval Communications. Daylight trans-oceanic communication by these stations has also been reported at considerable ranges, but such operation is not used as frequently as at night, he explained. These facts, together with the proposal to transmit motion pictures by radio in the near future, impresses Capt. McLean with the rapidity and possibilities of modern radio developments.

The Navy is working toward short wave lengths in order to get their service away from the crowded broadcasting band. Considerable success has attended the efforts of the Naval radio engineers to design and operate low-power short-wave sets, especially at the Bellevue, D. C. From the Los Banos, Radio tSation at Manila, Chief Radioman Harry Kidder reports that with a high-frequency receiver he built himself, he picked up 44 amateur stations in the United States. This is believed to be the first report of short-wave reception in the Philippines. His antenna consisted of a single strand of number 20 D. C. C. wire, 25 feet long and stretched horizontally only six feet high. Radiomen at the San Diego Radio School in California have built a transmitter of 100 watts power which transmits on 70 and 80 meters, and has been heard in the East oCast states and in Austria.

Radio Central at Washington operates a high frequency set in its routine work every night. The work of the Airship Shenandoah is well known on short wave lengths. Not to be outdone by their fellows of the air, the radiomen at Lakehurst, the home port of the Shenandoah, have built a similar transmitter under the direction of Gunner G. W. Almour. This set operates with three 50-watt tubes, and is of the master oscillator type. In transmitting a duralumin mast 28 feet high on the roof of the gigantic hangar is used. To date the station has been heard over 700 miles in daylight and 3100 miles at night. New Zealand, England and France have reported this station. With an increase of power, a crystal to control the frequency and a new 40-foot mast, improvement is expected.

An aeronautical radio set weighing but 50 pounds, with a range of 15,000 miles, is now in use at the Marine Flying Field, Quantico, Va. This set sends on a short wave length, varying from 60 to 90 meters. Messages from this set were recently received on the island of Guam, in the Western Pacific, 10,000 miles west of Quantico and 15,000 miles east. The message was sent at 2 a. m., Eastern standard time, when a greater part of the world is in darkness toward the east than toward the west. Because of the fact that radio waves travel better in the dark than in sunlight, and as equipment of this nature has never been known to send 10,000 miles in daytime, it is considered certain that the message traveled easterly by the longer but darker route.

The set is operated with two 50-watt vacuum tubes, and is of very compact design, measuring not over 2 feet square. This long-range, light-weight radio equipment, with a very small power input, has been developed for use on aircraft of the nav and marine corps, a field in which light weight is a prime factor.

Several commercial stations are also using short-wave transmission successfully and three experimental stations are carrying on tests. The commercial stations are WGH, Tuckerton, N. J., operating on 103 meters to Germany; WIZ, New Brunswick, N. J., on 43 meters, transmitting to Buenos Aires; WQN, Rocky Point, N. Y., operating on 60 meters to Europe; WIR, New Brunswick, N. UNIFORMITY VITAL IN TRANSFORMERS

Experienced set-builders agree that the trouble with most makes of transformers is lack of uniformity. Thordarsons are the exception—they run absolutely alike, absolutely uniform, always "match up" perfectly, always amplify evenly over the entire musical scale. That is one of the big reasons why leading makers use more Thordarsons than all competitive transformers combined. Partial list below

Some Reflections on High Popularity of "Abie's Irish Rose"

Comedy Is Amusing and Well Constructed, and It Handles Theme of Religious Intolerance With Unoffending Tact.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

IT CHANCES that two plays now showing in St. Louis—"Rain" and "Abie's Irish Rose," each of which is remaining for a second week—are based on the same intellectual concept, the unreason of religious bigotry. Tehir approaches are poles asunder. In "Rain," the method is scorn and tragedy; in "Abie," it is inoffensive raillery and humor of the comic strip. Both works have been extremely successful, but the opus of Miss Anne Nichols, which is worth about $3,000,000, is the theatrical gold mine of the day.

It is well known that the original company, still playing at the Republic Theater in New York, has passed its 1200th performance, that another troupe played for more than a year in Chicago; that there are five companies on tour, and that everywhere records have been hung up, such as 38 weeks in Cleveland, 29 in Pittsburg, 15 in Washington, 19 in Toronto, 12 in Baltimore and 29 in Lehigh, Pa. A theatrical manager estimates that Miss Nichols' income from this single work, which she wrote in three days, is $50,000 a week. Packed houses have been the rule here, and there is curiosity as to how closely St. Louis may approach the runs in other cities.

Amusing as Comedy.

THEREFORE "Abie" is not only a play—it is a phenomenon, a portent, and worth examination as to the secret of its success. In the first place, the New York critic who, after the first performance, branded it as "the worse of the two worst plays of the season," was thoroughly wrong. Simply considered as a comedy, it appeared to me to be quite as amusing as any of the Potash and Perlmutter series. Secondly, it possesses the two essential qualities of all popular drama—it has a strong love interest, and, after a somewhat languid start, boasts conflict and action to a plenteous degree. It is ably constructed, too; the second act, in particular, is dramatically effective.

Religion is notably a delicate subject in the theater, and it was on this ground that "Abie," treating of a conflict between Jew and Catholic, was refused by several New York producers. What they did not apprehend was that Miss Nichols had treated the subject not with a bludgeon, as in "Rain," but with such unfailing tact that offense is never given. It is true that her Israelites wear skull caps, talk a dialect, and object to ham and Christmas trees; it is also true that the principal Irishman, Patrick Murphy, is a caricature of a stage Hibernian. But these cartoons are affectionately drawn; there is not a villain in the piece, and everyone turns out to be lovable.

"Krausmeyer's Alley."

IT has been related by Miss Nichols that the idea for her play was born during a dinner-table conversation while she was entertaining guests at her Long Island home. Fiske O'Hara, in whose company she formerly acted, told of the troubles of a friend, a young Jew, who had fallen in love with an Irish Catholic girl. Whether unconsciously or not, however, Miss Nichols hit on a tried and sure-fire formula—one that was used for years in a skit entitled, if memory serves, "Krausmeyer's Alley." It was one of the most successful bits of comedy in the history of the burlesque stage. Here the opposing families were German and Irish, and reconciliation was similarly arrived at through an intermarriage.

We should not care to be misunderstood as affirming that "Abie" is for a moment to be compared to "Rain" in intellectual and emotional power; in fact, cerebrally it is comprehensible and soothing to the least of mental indices, and its emotion is mostly sentimentality. The considerations given above are merely attempts to account for "Abie's" prodigious popularity, and no doubt the final secret of its alchemy still remains elusive.

Cast Not Perfect.

AT any rate, it showed vitality enough here to survive a touring cast which was not in all cases ideal. It was not, of course, advertised as the original New York cast, but the performances in some of the roles make it timely to recall John Golden's recent remarks as to why the speaking theater is dying outside New York and a few of the larger cities. The cause, he wrote in an article for a weekly periodical, is not the movies or radio, but the theater itself.

"I determined," he said, "to visit a number of cities that had once been good theater towns. I made a number of discoveries. The principal one was that the theater on the road was not being killed by anything. It was committing hara-kiri.

"I found second-rate New York productions advertising all-star New York casts that had never been nearer New York than Xenia, O. I found plays billed as New York successes of which I, a fairly well informed New York manager, had never even heard. I saw displayed, in more than one of the theaters, photographs of players who were supposed to be in the cast, but who, I knew, were actually playing in New York. I found one musical comedy advertised as the original New York production; the whole road show traveled in two old trucks and the cast had in it exactly 16 persons.

Some Honestly Advertised.

"OF course, some shows were honestly advertised and honestly presented, but there were enough of the fakes to make

Advance Reservations At Municipal Theater Now Exceed $80,000

IT is announced that season reservations for the Municipal Theater Association's cycle of grand and light opera, which will begin May 25, have passed $80,000—which is said to be a record thus far in advance of the opening performance. On this basis, it is reckoned that the total receipts for the season will equal or exceed those of the champion summer, that of 1923, when the income from ticket sales amounted to $295,718.

The decision has been reached to charge the same admission prices that have prevailed for the last four years, though the average weekly production cost has risen from $18,483 in 1921, when the present scale of prices became effective, to $30,125 in 1924. It is pointed out that the association has been able to endure a 65 per cent increase in production costs without enhancing admission prices.

"According to present plans," said Chairman Koenigsberg of the Executive Productions Committee, "the 1925 season can be carried through without loss if the income equals that of 1923. Our budget is based on last year's expenditures, which is the maximum we can bear without increasing admission prices. In keeping the cost of tickets at this low level, we are practically eliminating the possibility of showing a profit at the end of the season.

"The 1923 record was established with favorable weather throughout, and with near-capacity attendance at the last five performances each week. Our only hope of increasing receipts is to attract larger audiences at the first two performances of each opera."

Chorus to Be Chosen Soon.

TEN different works, all new to the Municipal Theater, are to be produced this summer. Since last November, 200 candidates have been under training at the free chorus school, and towards the end of this month 90 will be chosen for the season's chorus. The school is in charge of Frank A. Rainger and Charles Previn, stage and musical directors of the organization.

The Apollo Club announces that the soloist for its concert of April 14, at the Odeon, will be Miss Jeanette Vreeland, soprano. She will sing Massenet's aria, "Pleurez, pleruez, mes yeux," from "Le Cid," and songs in French, German and English. Charles Galloway will direct, and Paul Friess will serve as accompanist. Miss Vreeland is the wife of Percy Rector Stephens, a vocal teacher in New York.

Alice Gentle Returns.

MISS ALICE GENTLE has been engaged as soloist for the Morning Choral Club's closing concert of the season, on April 21 at the Odeon. Miss Gentle, an operatic star, noted for her performance of "Carmen," made a brilliant success last year at the members' day recital of the Morning Choral Club.

Under the auspices of the Musicians' Fund of America, Clarence Custlin, pianist and lecturer, will discuss and play excerpts from two American operas, on the afternoon and evening of April 17 at Hotel Chase. The first will be "Aglala," which had its premiere performance at Akron, O., last year, and the second will be Patterson's "The Echo," which is to have its first performance during June, in Portland, Ore., during the fourteenth biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

FREE organ recitals will be given this afternoon at the New Cathedral by William Theodore

CongrevePlay Is Rowdy, but Full of Wit

"Love for Love," Revived at Greenwich Village Theater, Provides Highly Spiced Amusement.

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, April 4.

ONE of the most delightful evenings which the New York stage has to offer at the moment is Willfam Congreve's "Love for Love," which was revived Tuesday night at the Greenwich Village Theater, under the direction of Robert Edmond Jones and Kenneth McGowan.

It also sets a ticklish problem in censorship. There is no denying the fact that this is a rowdy play. Nor is its impish impropriety incidental to some other and more conventionally lofty purpose. Those of us who wanted "Desire Under the Elms" to go on unchanged could partially clothe ourselves in piety and say: "To be sure, some of it is violent and frank, but after all this is a cross-section of New England life which O'Neill has set before us. Would you hamper or confine the truth?"

Funniest Lines Are Daring.

BUT no such attitude will do in the case of "Love for Love." It can hardly pass muster as a literally accurate portrait of Restoration manners and morals, though it may be faithful to the spirit of its times. To be sure, there is a moral lesson. True love is rewarded in the end and the two most flagrant sinners are trapped and discomfited. Still, I am afraid it would have been wholly logical for some journal of the day to have followed "Love for Love," with an editorial entitled "A Cheap Skate in Lincoln's Inn Fields," for Congreve's moral lesson is almost as spurious as that of Mr. Gropper in "Ladies of the Evening." Congreve has made his play rowdy because the rowdiness amused him and his audiences.

There is a generous amount of obscenity for obscenity's sake in "Love for Love." Strip out the impropriety and there is not much left. All the funniest lines are daring ones. I would not contend, of course, that this play in Greenwich Village had no more claim to your attention than Mr. Belasco's production. It is more shocking and it is also much funnier. Indeed, the first act is easily the most amusing piece of foolery now available to the playgoer.

Jolly Obscenity.

BUT if nobody else complains loudly and calls for a play jury I shall do so myself. I had a fine time and all the first night audience rocked with laughter. It was hearty and unashamed laughter. "Love for Love" goes far beyond the smirking stage. And so there ought to be a ruling. I want to see the community make up its mind that obscenity is not necessarily a hideous thing. It can be among the jolliest and most heart warming of commodities. I don't know that "Love for Love" is calculated to send every hearer out into the night a better man or woman. Maybe not. It will send them out more merry than when they came in. That's enough.

Robert Edmond Jones has designed the sets for the play and directed the performance. It is a surpassingly fine job. Of a number of excellent performances it seems to me that Edgar Stehli gives the best of all. Stehli plays Tattle, whose custom it is to kiss and hint.

Collier and Congreve.

OF the others there should be special mention of E. J. Ballantine, Stanley Howlett, Cecil Clovelly, Percy Ivins, Adrienne Morrison and Helen Freeman. The performance is well finished and balanced down through the smallest roles.

"Love for Love" marks the second performance of Congreve which has been seen in New York this season for earlier in the year we had "The Way of the World." It is an excellent thing that the works of this playwright be revived for he is the master wit of all the English playwrights. While he still lived the immorality of his plays was called into question for Congreve was one of the particular targets of Jeremy Collier in his onslaughts upon the profanity of the theater.

I find Britannica solemnly asserting, "Collier had right on his side and triumphed." I am not so sure of that. By now Jeremy's a good deal deader than Congreve. But I am by no means certain that other Colliers will not rise up to carry on the fight.

But whatever the issue I feel that I may well die happy. I have lived to see the production on a New York stage of a play which uses the name of "a social disease" as an expletive for small talk.

After seeing "Love for Love" I am more than ever convinced that

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY DRAMA TEACHER TO SPEAK

Clayton Hamilton to Come Here in Connection With the Sheridan Festival.

In connection with the Sheridan Festival, which is commemorating the 150th anniversary of the first production of "The Rivals," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Clayton Hamilton, a member of the department of dramatic literature at Columbia University, will deliver a series of lectures in this city next week.

On April 13 he will speak at St. Louis University and before the Council of Jewish Women. On April 14 he will address the St. Louis College Club and the Town Club, and on April 15 he will speak at Washington University. Hamilton, regarded during the last 20 years as an authority in his field, will treat of types of old English comedy, the stage in Sheridan's day, and general theatrical practice in the eighteenth century.

To Observe N. V. A. Week.

The vaudeville theaters of the city, including movie houses which present variety acts, will observe National Vaudeville Artists' week from April 12 to 18 with special attractions and augmented programs. The celebration will extend throughout the United States and Canada.

TWO PROPOSALS ON THE MUNICIPAL BALLOT TUESDAY

One Deals With Increase in Pay for Firemen, Other Is an Amendment to the Charter.

Two proposals will be passed upon by St. Louis voters in the city election Tuesday. They are the firemen's proposed increase in pay, and the proposed charter amendment for expediting public work under the bond issue.

The two proposals will appear at the right-hand side of the blanket ballot, next to the Non-Partisan ticket of Board of Education candidates. On each of them, to vote "Yes" the voter must scratch the word "No," and to vote "No" must scratch the word "Yes."

The firemen's pay increase proposal was placed on the ballot by means of initiative petitions. The proposed increase is $25 a month for firemen of all ranks below district chief, or from private to captain. Privates now get $155 a month, and the increase would bring their pay to $180. The firemen argue that this is not high pay, in comparison with the pay of other lines of work, or with the pay of firemen in other large cities.

Estimate of Cost to City.

An estimate by the Comptroller's office, the granting of the proposed increase will cost the city $280,000 a year in addition to the present payroll. The police pay increase bill, recently passed by the Legislature, has added $604.275 to the annual police payroll, and, if signed by the Governor, probably will result in an increase of the tax rate for municipal purposes from $1.51 to $1.57, the legal limit being $1.59.

The police bill increases patrolmen's pay from $145 to $180 a month. The Comptroller's office has stated that, should the firemen's increase also be voted, appropriations for other municipal purposes will have to be cut to stay within the maximum of $1.59.

The Charter amendment proposal was submitted through an ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen. The amendment follows the outlines of a suggestion made last December by Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of Aldermen, in an interview printed in the Post-Dispatch.

The charter, as it now stands, provides that the full amount of money to be expended on each improvement must be in the City Treasury at the time the contract is let, although payments are to be made only as the work progresses. In the case of the large projects included in the bond issue program, this requirement is a serious obstacle to practical execution of the work, as it requires sums reaching into the millions to be held in the Treasury for long periods, drawing 2¼ per cent, while the city is paying 4½ per cent to the bondholders from whom the money was borrowed.

The proposed amendment would change the wording of the charter (Article 22, Section 2) to provide that contracts may be let for public work in advance of any sale of bonds therefor, and that the Comptroller may issue and sell bonds at such times as the money shall be needed to pay for the work.

Congreve Play Is Rowdy, But Full of Wit

we ought to have some dirty plays if only they are funny enough.

"Ostriches" Is Illogical.

A PLAY producer Monday night at the Comedy is entitled "Ostriches" by the author, Edward Wilbraham, and he joins in the customary criticism of those birds because of their irrational habit of sticking their heads in the sand in order to fool pursuers. The device of the dramatist is of another sort. Instead of burying his own head he throws the sand in the eyes of the audience. And that doesn't work either.

The new play argues one side of a situation with a good deal of force and logic and then, precisely 10 seconds before the final curtain, gives judgment in favor of the debater who has all too plainly lost the argument.

It rather seems that Mr. Wilbraham avoided a logical ending for his play because that particular solution would be unpleasant. And so, instead of an unpleasant ending, he has given us a silly one.

There is no lack of conflict, for "Ostriches" is a play about a daughter who wants to marry her mother's lover. A great many weighty and sensible arguments could be brought against the girl's doing any such thing, but they are not brought forward in this play. Instead, the dramatist has devoted almost the entire evening to showing how much logic there is in the determination of the girl to marry the man she loves (who also loves her), irrespective of his earlier relationship with her mother.

Seeks Own Happiness.

THE girl is presented as an exceedingly modern young woman, who argues the whole problem in terms of hard rationality. Lest I commit myself to a seeming championship of immorality, I want to explain that I am aware of other factors which bear upon human relationships. It is the author who leaves them out.

The play is a short one, but the problem is pretty completely argued out. Kit presents many reasons why she should seek her own happiness. She points out that by sacrificing herself and giving up George she will bring no true joy to any one. Her best friend agrees with her reasoning. So does her worldly aunt. Indeed, her mother comes around at length to agree that Kit's marriage to George seems the only solution short of tragedy.

Treachery to Chief Character.

AT this point the author throws the whole elaborate structure of argument out of the window by making the girl suddendy declare that the man's advances are repellent to her and that she will have nothing to do with him. He makes a rapid exit and the curtain comes slowly down as Kit exclaims, "After all, you're my mother." As logical argument, this is pretty bad. As convincing emotion it is much too belated. In fact, I have seen no more barefaced lying treachery to a character than that which Wilbraham visits upon his heroine in the last 10 seconds.

And it is difficult not to resent that, for the part of Kit is beautifully played by Katherine Alexander. I am confused as to the merits of this actress, for by now I have seen her in four performances within a single season. Two seemed to me enormously good and two wholly indifferent. This is one of the good ones. Miss Alexander certainly plays flappers, or at any rate tall flappers, a little bit better than anybody else in our theater. And I am not setting this as an estimate of limitation, for this particular performance is a beautiful piece of work and a joy in ease and naturalness.

Diebels and at the Scottish Rite Cathedral by O. Wade Fallert. The former will be assisted by Herman J. Naunheim, baritone, and the latter by the Cecilia Choral Club.

The fifth annual rendition of Sir John Stainer's cantata, "The Crucifixion," will be given on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons at Vandervoort Music Hall, under the direction of William M. Jenkins. There will be a choir of prominent St. Louis singers, with Oliver Smith and G. J. Lehleitner as soloists. Maunder's cantata, "From Olivet to Calvary," will be sung this evening at the Church of the Ascension, Cates and Goodfellow avenues, by a choir of men and boys under the supervision of Ray V. Douglas. Directed by Paul Friess, the choir and chorus of the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church, Cabanne avenue and Kingshighway boulevard, will give selections this evening from the oratorios and Lenten cantatas of Handel, Stainer, Gounod and Dubois.

Miss Edith Piper, St. Louis singer and recent winner of a fellowship of the Juillard Foundation in New York, will give a recital at the Odeon on the evening of April 16 for the benefit of the Evangelical Seminary for Girls, which is to be opened in September.

all road patrons so suspicious of all touring companies that they were getting the stay-away habit.

"One night in Richmond, Va., at the opening of one of my plays at the Academy of Music, the audience called for me to speak from the stage. Instead of doing my usual rubber-stamp form of thanks I determined to ask some questions of the folks in Richmond.

"I asked the folks who saw my play a series of questions. They answered me directly and specifically. They wanted the spoken drama, but they had been stung so often they did not care to be stung any more."

HOTEL SCENE OF STYLE SHOW

French Scheme to Do Away With Individual Displays.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 4.—The exposition of decorative arts will be opened April 29 by President Doumergue in the Grand Palais. Visitors to the exposition, who will run through the spring and summer, will be treated to the spectacle of a complete seaside resort hotel peopled by wax mannequins displaying all the latest and most correct clothes.

In addition to the hotel, there will be a garden in which all varieties of sport clothes will be shown on mannequins and a big tearoom in which afternoon gowns will be exhibited. Then, on the first floor, will be a ballroom in which to show off evening gowns and a formal reception room in which to display court dresses and other attire suitable for official ceremonies. The hotel's big central hall will accommodate mannequins dressed in tailor-made and other everyday costumes. This part of the exhibition will be free to all visitors. It is being designed by Mme. Jeanne Lanvin, head of the exposition's costume section, in order to do away with the rivalries of the separate booths plan.

I believe eczema can be cured to stay. I mean just what I say: C-U-R-E-D and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling over half a million cases of eczema and devoting over 20 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured; all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. Don't be discouraged but write me TODAY and I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged just give me one chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. SHANGHAI ARSENAL MAY BECOME AUTO FACTORY

Capitalists Favor Proposal to Turn It Into China's First Motor Car Plant.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, March 2.—Tired of armed conflict, and realizing that men cannot fight without rifles revolvers and ammunition, Shanghai has welcomed a project to turn the Kiangnan Arsenal into a motor car factory. Deprived of this local source of weapons, warring factions may become more peaceful, it is argued.

The arsenal was built some 50 years ago, near Shanghai, and for half a century it has been the objective of much strife and many warlike clashes.

Recent orders from Pekin said the arms making machinery in the arsenal should be removed from the Shanghai district, possibly to Nanking, and that the buildings be turned over to the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce for commercial uses. Thereafter came the proposal that China's first automobile factory be inaugurated in the old arsenal, and Canton capitalists have the matter under favorable consideration.

TO HUNT FOR SILVER IN ALASKA

Briton to Lead Party to Where He Says He Found Rich Vein in 1900.

HULL, England, March 17.—Headed by John Riley of this town, a party of business men are planning an expedition this month into Alaska on a search for hidden treasure. Riley is the only man who has an exact knowledge of the whereabouts of the treasure in question, which he says consists of a vein of pure silver from two to eight inches thick and weighing probably hundreds of tons.

Riley claims to have discovered the vein during the great Klondyke gold rush of 25 years ago, and has persuaded three men to join him in the quest. They propose to obtain samples of the metal and float a company. If successful in their quest an airplane will be used to convey the silver to Vancouver, B. C.

SHIP DOCTOR BUSY ON RADIO

Physician on Cunarder Antonio Answers Calls for Prescriptions.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PLYMOUTH, England, March 17.—Dr. Erskine Gray, of the Cunard Liner Antonia, was kept busy on the last voyage of the Antonia from New York to Plymouth with calls for medical assistance from other vessels.

Four times daily for five days he prescribed by radio for a sailor who had been badly injured on the steamer Bosworth, hundreds of miles away. Then the American steamer Antinous reported its Captain seriously ill. Dr. Gray diagnosed the case as one of pneumonia, and for three days prescribed treatment, which proved successful. Several other cases of minor nature, from ships many leagues distant from the Antonia, also were treated by radio.

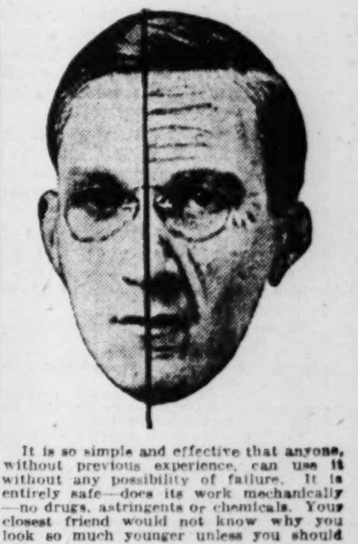
WRINKLES GO FACE "UPLIFTS" IN 5 MINUTES

Without Any Chemicals, New Process Takes Out Wrinkles, Lines and Crowsfeet.

Uplifts Sagging Checks, Lessening Age-Appearance From 5 to 30 Years.

We all wish to appear youthful—to have good-looking faces and clear complexions. Dr. Bailey's new process for uplifting sagging cheeks and the removal of wrinkles, lines and crowsfeet will be received with delight by thousands of women who wish to have young-looking faces free from wrinkles, lines and other beauty-marring things, as most of them are afraid of the usual knife-operations for this purpose.

This process, made and vouched for by the world's most widely-known dermatologist, plastic surgeon and beauty specialist, is 100 per cent perfect in its work and will remove INSTANTLY the wrinkles and lessen the age-appearance of the face from 5 to 30 years.



It is so simple and effective that anyone, without previous experience, can use it without any possibility of failure. It is entirely safe—does its work mechanically—no drugs, astringents or chemicals. Your closest friend would not know why you look so much younger unless you should tell.

Bear in mind your face has a Social and Dollar Value—that the young-looking face is the ACCEPTABLE FACE at all social functions and in business. It will get one much further along than the face made homely by wrinkles, lines, crowsfeet and decadent, sagging tissues.

Dr. Bailey says that it is not an indication of vanity to wish for a good-looking face, but an indication of good business sense.

If your face needs any kind of improvement, it costs you nothing for the advice of the world's most widely-known facial specialist.

Men whose faces would get them farther along in business if they could look from 5 to 30 years younger, should write for Dr. Bailey's FREE BOOK, "The Social and Dollar Value of Your Face." It tells how.

For full details of this new process and for book, address the Gordon Dermal Laboratory, 517-J Exchange Bldg., Denver, Colo.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off With Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed wit a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

75TH ANNIVERSARY OF VANDERVOORT'S

Merchandise Company to Celebrate Diamond Jubilee April 13-May 13.

The diamond jubilee of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney will be observed April 13th to May 3d, with a number of civic and merchandising events. Two four-year scholarships are to be awarded the winners of an essay contest, the subject of which is "St. Louis and Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney; 75 Years of Progress." Either Washington or St. Louis University may be chosen by the winners. The music hall in Vandervoort's to be converted into a museum and articles of interest have been loaned for exhibition, including sentimental and historic keepsakes of the past 75 years.

Much of the anniversary celebration was planned by the late Melville L. Wilkinson, who died last month. Special mains have been constructed to bring heavy currents of electricity to the store, and the outside electrical decorations planned at the cost of thousands of dollars will make the block occupied by the store a center for sightseers at night. A "diamond necklace" of lights will completely surround the store on four sides, with festoons of lights dropping from the necklace at many points. Huge diamonds of lights will revolve at heights and there will be big birthday cakes, lighted by 75 giant birthday candles at various entrances.

There will be $1,000,000 worth of diamonds on exhibition in the store during the celebration, and the diamond will be used as the emblem and keynote for all the interior decoration. Girls in the costume in 1850 will act as guides around the stores.

Scruggs - Vandervoort - Barney was founded in 1850 under the name of McClelland, Scruggs & Co., on Fourth street between Locust and St. Charles. In 1854 it was moved to the corner of Fourth and St. Charles streets, in 1888 moved to Broadway and Locust street, having been incorporated five years previous to that as Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co. In 1907 the present building at Tenth and Olive was built and 1913 the Century Building, adjoining and including the old Century Theater, was acquired by the company. In 1917 the company acquired the controlling stock in the Mermod, Jaccard & King Jewelry Co., then in its 89th year, and it was moved to the Vandervoort block. Melville L. Wilkinson became president of Scruggs - Vandervoort - Barney in 1911 and his 14 years in St. Louis made him a leader in many civic and philanthropic movements.

AIR SERVICE ACTIVITY HERE TO BE DISCUSSED APRIL 14

Perkins, representative in Washington of the Chamber of Commerce in its recent efforts to obtain air mail service for St. Louis and establishment of an air service unit here, will speak on obtaining an air service regular army unit located here. Other speakers will be Capt. William B. Robertson of the Air Service Reserve, and Maj. L. S. Churchill, Air Officer of the Seventh Corps Area at Omaha.

Some Thoughts at Election Time

Years ago you authorized—elected—this company to supply you with that which has become a major necessity for everyday life—electricity... So, at this time of choosing public servants, we, a public servant, submit our record in office:

We have voluntarily reduced the cost of electricity to you eight times in the last twelve years. You now enjoy a lower average rate for electricity than the citizens of any other of the 15 large cities of the country. Your electricity is one of the few things that is cheaper than before the war.

We have linked great steam power, like Cahokia, to great water power, like Keokuk, and thereby have set up for you the benefits of dependable superpower.

We have been economical in management. We have so operated this $75,000,000 public service structure that our unit operating costs are as low or lower than those of any other similar public utility in the country, whose record is published.

Since we took office in the public service, new partners have come to us—you and your neighbor and your neighbor's neighbor. More than 16,000 St. Louisans have invested their savings with us in the service of the city. Perhaps that is your vote of confidence. At least we like to consider it as such.

For the Future We Pledge

—expansion of plants in the most modern way to meet any demand for electricity this metropolitan district may make upon us.

—continued efficiency and economy in management.

—whatever further reduction in your rates for electricity, economical management and progress in science can produce—and promptly.

RESS RESUMES FILM WORK

Furnival is Wife of Commander of British Navy.

ence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 20.—Lady Fur- whose peerage in her own is one of the oldest in ex- dating back to 1295, de- recently to take up her act- for the films where she left two years ago, with a play never completed because of mechanical difficulties.

Lady Furnival is the wife of Commander A. W. Agar, of the British Navy, who was awarded the Victoria Cross for his atttack on the Bolshevik warships at Kronstadt during the Russian revolution. Lady Furnival is fairly tall, has light brown hair and features which managers consider particularly adaptable for screen work.

FLOWER SHOW TO AID FIGHT AGAINST SMOKE

Fifth Annual Amateur Exhibit Next Month Will Stress Need of Relief.

A feature of the fifth annual Free Amateur Flower Show, to be held at Shaw's Garden May 23 and 24, by the Garden Club of St. Louis, will be a competition for garden sculpture, designed and executed by local sculptors.

Judges appointed by the Artists' Guild will award a first prize of a bronze medal and $50 in cash as well as two ribbon prizes. Wall fountains, bird baths and any other sculpture suitable for gardens will be considered in the competition.

One of the purposes of the show, according to A. E. Brooker, president of the Garden Club, is to arouse popular interest in the smoke question.

"When St. Louisans realize that the smoke evil is so bad that nurseries will not guarantee evergreens to thrive east of Union boulevard for more than two years, we feel that the people should demand a remedy," he added. "Small evergreens planted in Forest Park less than a year ago are dying because of smoke.

"We want to arouse a popular interest in garden work, for when people see that their back yard gardens and window boxes cannot thrive in smoke, we feel they will become active for smoke abatement."

PROPOSED TURKISH LAW BARS WEDDING FESTIVITIES

Statesmen Are Bent on Enforcing Economy in Private Life.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 8.—Prospective brides in Turkey have taken a keen interest in proposals of the General Assembly to regulate extravagance in connection with marriage celebrations, as well as other forms of entertainment. Turkish statesmen are determined, if possible, to bring about economy in private life as well as in state affairs, and have taken steps to encourage the frugal and Spartan habits of angora in every way possible.

By the regulations proposed, the bride of the future will not be allowed to provide furniture for more than one room in her new home, and the bridegroom may not present his wife-to-be with more than a single ring valued at not more than 20 Turkish pounds. Banquets and festivities in celebration of births and weddings would be barred altogether by provisions of the new bill.

It Finally Happened
The chord has been struck; soon its harmony will be heard throughout our land.
Highest praises are due the group of theatrical performers with high ideals, in our greatest metropolis, for their refusal to take part in plays containing obscene lines, immoral scenes or degrading thoughts.
Young minds of today are the old minds of the future and nothing creates a more lasting impression than a stage scene or a moving picture; second to schools as educators.
The more elevating the impressions the higher the aims of those impressed. WELCOME THE ACTION!

NEGRO HEALTH WEEK OBSERVANCE IS BEGUN

Tuberculosis Society to Send Out Literature—Sermons and Letters Scheduled.

Observance of the eleventh annual National Negro Health Week, founded by Booker T. Washington, was begun in St. Louis today with sermons and lectures in negro churches and distribution by the Tuberculosis Society of literature on promotion of health and prevention of disease.

"Tuberculosis day, to be observed Wednesday as part of Negro Health Week, should be especially significant this year for the death rate from tuberculosis among negroes in Missouri continues to be almost four times as high as among whites," said Mrs. Ernest Jonas, chairman of the Educational Committee of the Tuberculosis Society.

"Of the total population in Missouri, negroes constitute more than 5 per cent; of all deaths from tuberculosis in Missouri, negroes contribute nearly 18 per cent. Since 25 per cent of all negroes in this State are ebployed as household servants, laundresses, barbers, porters or in some similar vocation which brings them in personal relationship with whites, excellent opportunity is afforded for the dissemination of tuberculosis. Education as to the prevention of this disease thus becomes necessarily an important part of a negro health program."

EX-AID OF KAISER DIES

BERLIN, April 4.—Gen. Von Pluskow, who recently died at Cassell, served for many years as aid-de-camp to the former Kaiser and was known as the tallest officer in the German army. He was 6 feet 6 inches, and so generously proportioned that he attracted attention in any company.

When President Felix Faure died in Paris, Von Pluskow, who was then a Major, attended as the Kaiser's representative and was much discussed by the French press. One paper said of him: "Il s'appele Pluskow car il est plus que haut," which, translated, is: "He is called Pluskow because he is the tallest." The phrase "plus pue haut," or "tallest" is pronounced almost the same as Pluskow.

Mrs. Kindrick Made $70.00 On Chickens

Once A Sick Woman—Now Full of Ambition

"I had pains (gas) in my side and could hardly do my housework. Was told I had 'female trouble.' I began taking Adlerika and in two weeks I began to feel better. Now I do all my housework, raised and sold $70.00 worth of chickens and worked two gardens. I cannot say too much for Adlerika." (Signed) Mrs. O. Kindrick.

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports from Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

PRAISES CATHOLICS' SOUTH AMERICAN WORK

Bishop McConnell of Methodist Church Says They Have Civilized Wild Peoples.

By the Associated Press.

MONTEVIDEO, April 4.—A tribute to the evangelistic and social service efforts of the Roman Catholic Church in South America was paid by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, resident bishop of the Pittsburg area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in a report prepared by the Commission on Church and Community for presentation to the Congress on Christian Work in South America.

"The Roman Catholic Church, which is the Christian organization which from the commencement has had the care of these Latin-American countries, doubtless had not in its mind the embracingly social duty which is implicity in the ideal of the Kingdom of God," said the report. "Neither did the church of the reformers conceive this, for it is a modern ideal, the fruitage of the studies due to the progressive discovery of the spirit which animated primitive Christianity.

"Nevertheless, the Roman Catholic Church in Latin-America has done a very appreciable work in the sense of forming the character of the Creole populations, especially by means of its teaching establishments, its moral influence being particularly appreciable among women.

"The Roman Catholic Church has labored in favor of the civilization and Christianization of the wild peoples (primitive races) and of the imported negroes, although, in countries such as Peru and Bolivia, the civilizing work has been precarious, and, even today leaves much to be desired.

"In these latter days, the Catholic Church has taken on a social outlook. It produced, in the last century, such men as Iamennais, Graty and Pope Leo XIII. In Argentina, as in Chile, this tendency is opening a path today with men such as Edwards, de Andrea, Franceschi.

"From a recognition of these points, the organizations affiliated with the Committee on Co-operation in Latin-America should be able to deduce that the best chance of advancing Christianity in these countries will be found in assisting to intensify the sociological drift of the Roman Cahtolic Church, which is the spiritual power of the greatest traditional prestige at work in these countries.

"Such a work of real co-operation can be carried out in Latin-American aided by Latin-Americans."

AMERICAN INVENTOR FUSES SOLID METALS BY WIRELESS

English Steel Industry to Adopt Crucible Heated From the Interior.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., April 4.—Recent reports from England that the wireless furnace was to be adopted by the steel industry of Sheffield for use in melting solid metals, brought to light today that Dr. E. F. Northrup of Princeton, inventor of this furnace, recently has perfected a process whereby an alloy of copper, nickel and iron is made which protects electrical meters from the effects of wide temperature variations. This alloy is made in a wireless heated crucible.

Dr. Northrup's invention consists of a crucible surrounded by a cold copper coil which, having no contact with the crucible heats the metal placed inside by electrical induction or radio. Inasmuch as heat is generated only in the contents of the crucible the metal is said to "melt itself," being vigorously stirred, meantime, by the electrical current flowing into it. It is described as a radio process with the distance spanned only a few inches compared with the miles of distance spanned in most radio operations.

The invention of "permalloy," which gives the newest submarine cables a capacity of about 1700 letters a minute, is said to have been made possible by the wireless furnace.

Back Yards of Suburban Homes

Health and happiness may spring from the soil of a back yard turned into a garden spot.

There are many such yards in the suburbs of St. Louis—where wise city folk have founded their homes and planted their gardens.

A trip North, West, South will disclose wide avenues bordered with comfortable houses—each the abiding place of a contented family. There the sun is bright—the air is pure—the flowers bloom—and there's play space.

Take your family into one of these communities where home life flourishes, where neighbors are friends and where your influence as a citizen will be felt.

Begin to build financial protection for the future by investing your money in real estate, instead of spending it for rent. Increasing property values will help to swell the dividends you realize on such investment.

There is no time like TODAY to make your choice, and there is no choice as large or as interesting as you will find in the "Real Estate" columns of the Post-Dispatch. Make a list now for investigation, and do not stop until the deed for your home is in your hands.

ENGLISH PAINTER DISMISSES HAIR BOBS WITH WORD 'UGLY'

President of Royal Academy Says Women Are Determined to Disguise Their Good Looks.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 4.—What will the generations of the future think of the fashions of today? This is the question raised by Sir Frank Dicksee, one of England's painters, who has come out flat-footed against the prevailing styles for women. He dismisses the modern craze for bobbed hair and shingling with the one word—ugly!

Women of today appear determined to disguise their good looks by adopting the clothes of the times, says Sir Frank, who is president of the Royal Academy, in his attack upon inartistic fashions. He says that an artist who loves his art will not paint the modern woman in her modern dress which makes the hip level the waist line.

People 50 years hence, he fears, will point to the styles of 1925 as "absolutely impossible." Most critics, knowing "Dawn," "The Light Incarnate," "The Redemption of Tannhauser" and other paintings, agree that Sir Frank Dicksee is a great artist, but they conclude that his views of modern styles are away behind the times.

DOUMERGUE DISCARDS SPATS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 4.—Yellow gloves and no spats is the fashion set by President Doumergue for formal afternoon dress. The chief executive appeared thus attired at the inauguration of the museum of the National Order of the Legion of Honor—and with horn-rimmed spectacles to boot.

M. Painleve, president of the Chamber of Deputies, followed the example of the President of the republic, as far as "fresh butter color" gloves were concerned, but he compromised on the spats issue by wearing gray cloth-topped shoes. Premier Herriot along among the civilian notables present, remained true to the spats doctrine, his being of very loud purple with large buttons. Things seem to be coming to such a pass that the only men who are sure to be correctly dressed at public functions in France are Marshals and Generals. In uniform they can hardly go wrong. Even Marshals and Generals, however, are allowed a considerable latitude in dress. For example they have the choice between fringed epaulettes and shoulder straps, and may wear regulation knee breeches with puttees, or "slacks," meaning long trousers.

MILLERAND IS CANDIDATE FOR SEAT IN THE SENATE

Former President Is Bitterly Opposed But Chances Are Regarded As Good.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 4.—Former President Millerand tomorrow will be the center of that unusual political activity which has prevailed throughout France since the new government was installed. He is the leading man of half a dozen or more candidates for the seat in the Senate from the department of the Seine. Among his friends his chances are regarded as good. His enemies are considered as rather confirming this by the desperation with which they are fighting him.

The winning candidate must poll a clear majority of the votes cast on the first ballot, or a plurality on the second or third ballot. Senators are elected in France by what is called "suffrage in the second degree"—that is, by indirect vote instead of universal suffrage.

There are 1026 electors in all in the Department of the Seine. Of them 158 are delegates by virtue of their offices as deputies, general councillors and councillors of arrondissements. The rest are elected by municipal councils. There are only 30 in Paris, 439 in the arrondissement of Saint Denis and 399 in the arrondissement of Sceaux. Electors chosen by municipal councils are obliged to vote under penalty of a 50 franc fine. The others may vote or not as they like.

The man who, on paper, would have the best right to vote will be excluded from doing so. He is Andre Marty, 10 times elected municipal councillor and as many times declared ineligible because at the time he was in prison in connection with the Black Sea mutiny.

BETHLEHEM CORPORATION IS SEEKING SWEDISH ORE

Negotiations Are Under Way for Entire Outp ut of Nation's Largest Iron Company.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, March 16.—Recent reports, emanating from well-informed circles, to the effect that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was negotiating with the Trafik Aktiebolaget Oxelosund-Grangesberg, largest of the Swedish iron producing companies, for the entire output of its mines, have caused comment here. While the negotiations have not progressed to the stage where a public announcement can be made, it is known that the American concern placed large orders for Swedish ore during the last year, and that the output of the mines will probably be almost doubled during 1925.

Swedish exports from the big mine fields of Lapland amounted in January of this year to 645,000 tons compared with 160,000 tons in January of last year. Much of the increased export was due to the growing demand for Swedish ore in Germany, but a majority of the shipments went to America.

It is estimated that the mines of the Trafik Grangesberg, as the Swedish company is called, could produce a maximum of about 11,000,000 tons of ore annually. Sales of this entire output to an American company is opposed in some quarters on the ground that Sweden would lose its market on the continent should the deal go through.

Breath Bad?

Something is out of order inside of you

THE strain and hurry of modern living conditions exact a heavy penalty from many men and women. Constipation is rampant today more than ever in history before. Yet, harmfully as congested bowels act in undermining the general health, it is fortunate that they frequently give plain-spoken notice of the damage they are doing.

Bad breath is one of the warning signals. At the first sign of it, wash out your stomach and bowels with efficacious Pluto Water.

Pluto Water isn't like the uncertain, slow-action over-night cathartics. Pluto Water acts promptly. In 30 minutes to two hours after taking, the foul accumulations that cause bad breath begin to leave the system—and Pluto Water never gripes after use.

Keep a bottle of this safe water physic in your home at all times. It is prescribed by physicians, sold by druggists and bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

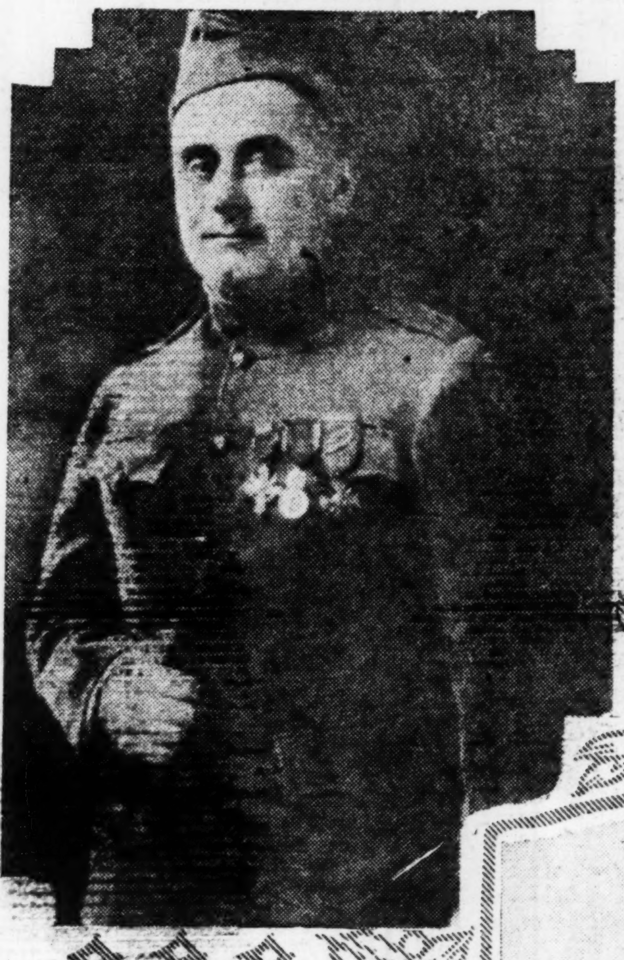
'GREATEST JEWISH SOLDIER SINCE JOSHUA' MEETS HIS LAST ADVENTURE

Sam Dreben, Free Lance of Fortune Who Came Unscathed Through Many Wars, Is Accidentally Poisoned

He Fought in Mexico, Honduras, Nicaragua, the Philippines, China and France Under Various Flags—Won Fame as "The Fighting Jew" and Praise From Great Generals—Was One of the Last of a Band of Roving Warriors Who Fought for Fighting's Sake.

SAM DREBEN.



By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, April 4.

DEATH and Sam Dreben might have met in a Luzon paddy field, or on the road to Pekin, or in a Nicaraugan cane brake or at some embattled outpost in France. Wherever the bullets whistled their grim call during the last quarter century, there Sam reben was likely to be. That he should have died in peacetime at Hollywood through istake of a nurse in giving him the wrong medicine is but a quirk of chance; he died an dventurer and soldier of fortune none the less.

Sam Dreben was top sergeant in the War God's own command. His flag was the bat- flag, though when it came to nations he preferred the Stars and Stripes. Not for lit- braveries was he called "The Fighting Jew." He followed danger half across the rld. Under the torn rag of some Honduran rebel chief, behind the red banner of a xican revolutionist, shadowed by the proud standards of a dozen nations it was all the me to Dreben. Pot luck at the field kitchen and Devil's favor on the firing line. He s a fighter.

A Russian Jew, who came to the United ates as an immigrant youth of 20 he made gambler's choice at the outset. A tenement the East Side of New York, or a tent in e perilous bivouac? A sewing machine a machine gun? A needle or a bayonet? peaceful dollar or a soldier's pittance It not take him long to decide. He enlisted the regular army and was sent to the ilippines. Thus began a gambler's career. r 27 years he stood ready to wager his against an hour of battle. Had he chosen other course he might have lived to be- e a wealthy clothing merchant. As it ned, he lived to be called "the greatest ish soldier since Joshua," by Gen Hines, American Chief of Staff. Undoubtedly, considered himself the winner; what oth- thought did not concern Sam Dreben h.

A strange figure he seemed, for such a ca- r. He was not a Captain Macklin; there no grace of romance, no swagger to him. ort, thick set, almost rotund, in him all days was a deep humility. He was al- t obsequious to superiors and with equals rank he showed deference. Perhaps some ained servility of race, perhaps the real- ion that he did not look the hero made so. Perhaps it was because he looked war with the eyes of a professional sol- r, and would never admit its glamour y tell of him that during an action in ce a comrade remarked on his indiffer- to the enemy's fire.

The First Campaign

"Those Germans can't shoot straight," he ed, as if reducing his fearlessness to a e matter of calculation.

is first campaign would have cured any- but an inveterate fighter of war. He d the Spanish-American battles by a months, but arrived in time for the cam- against the Filipino rebels. Here was in a steaming jungle, war under tor- ial rains with rivers more dangerous Mauser bullets. Day after day Ameri- columns hacked their way through with hetes, ate moldy, stale supplies and lived a bloody raid now and then on some Fili- village. Aguinaldo's bolo men kept up ant guerilla warfare, stealing up on s at night and taking the heads of un- y sentries.

reben liked to tell of the time when his t cornered a band of the insurrectos. sides were surprised at coming upon other and there was no time for a reg- fight on approved military lines.

me of us fixed bayonets," Dreben used "and some of us clubbed rifles. They on us with their crooked knives so it was each man for himself. When t a way cleared we started shooting the black powder smoke spoiled our . We killed a good many, but a lot got in the smoke." Dreben was always an ate of smokeless powder.

The Boxers arose in China pledged to drive "the foreign devils" from their country. After murdering missionaries and scattering white families in a general massacre the fanatics lay siege to the foreign legations at Pekin. The countries having nationals in jeopardy contributed troops to an allied army which marched to the relief of the beleaguered refugees.

Along with English, Germans, French, Russians and Italians marched Sam Dreben and his comrades. In that polyglot army he adventured. All but the English and American soldiers had been sent dressed as if the march were to be a parade. As the Boxers fell back before the advance they tore up rail lines and set fire to villages. Their rear guard made forays against the invaders and all prisoners captured were put to death by decapitation or ling chi, a form of torture in which the victim is slowly cut to bits. Among this soldiery, as brave as any, and looking down on his foreign brothers with the true contempt of an American private, marched Sam Dreben, the fighting Jew. High adventure, surely, under a foreign sun, his way picketed with heads taken by the enemy, his ranks closed in by Russians in bright yellow, Frenchmen in white, Germans in gay blue and Italians in red and blue.

When Pekin fell, the Allies looted the Forbidden City of the Emperors. Sam Dreben did his share of the looting. No stouter lifter of jade dragons and bronze vases was in Pekin, and no one wrapped his plunder in richer silken hangings.

"You couldn't show those fellows mercy," Dreben said, afterwards, in judicious vein. "You didn't feel much like being soft after looking at the heads they had stuck on poles. We gave 'em the bloodiest we had."

When things had quieted Dreben was sent back to the United States and discharged, his term of enlistment being over. Perhaps it was his desire to see a bit of civil life that led him to go to work in a Los Angeles tailor shop. He did not stay at it long. Joining the army again he spent four years at Fort Bliss, Tex., and watched the Russo-Japanese war go by, longingly. You could buy your way out of the army in those days, after a certain time, but Dreben never had money enough long enough to do it. He was a gambler. With money as with his life he was all for high stakes.

In 1907 Dreben went to Panama as a Government employe. Shortly after arriving he learned that there was a revolution in Nicaragua. He set out in a small boat for the Nicaraguan coast, fearful that the fighting would be over if he went the longer way by land. It chanced that the revolutionists were the first he met, and he joined them. Had a Federal detachment been the first he would have joined them. Dreben was not one to argue the merits of wars.

In Honduras

His Nicaraguan experience brought him in touch with others like himself—Gabe Conrad, Billy Pitman and Johnny Gordon—soldiers of fortune all, using their swords for one side or the other, it mattered little which. While Dreben usually chose the best paying side it could not be said that he fought for gold. Gold meant little. He was paid $2000 and given a grant of land by the Nicaraguan rebels when they won the revolution. He lost both in a poker game in one night. Why besides, he learned that the grant of land lay in a swamp.

Next door was Honduras. Gen. Lee Christmas was leading a revolt there. He was glad of Sam Dreben's services. By this time Sam had become an expert machine gunner. Great nations hire Generals; revolutionary juntas hire machine gunners. Sam Dreben was engaged at so much per month gold to work a machine gun for Gen. Lee Christmas' side. It was his profession. He made of it an art. Poets who deal in glory have pictured war in soft and alluring colors, but to Sam it got down to a businesslike affair. You had so much ammunition and so many men to be killed, say; well, you just sat on the little jigger seat and pressed the butt piece against your chest out there in the sand and heat. Brmrmrmmm-r-r-r-mmmm! If the barrel didn't get too hot and the feed belt didn't jam and you stayed alive you most generally won the fight.

The Honduran revolt lasted only three months. Once more Dreben was out of a job. However, Madero was starting his revolution against President Diaz in Mexico. Pino Suarez, who managed the details for Madero, needed machine gunners. To him in New Orleans Sam applied for a position. He was put in charge of a band of Maderistas and sent to the state of Campeche. Madero won out; Sam collected his pay in gold and drifted to El Paso, Tex.

Newspaper correspondents saw him there, loafing about the lobby of the Paso Del Norte. Clean shaven. Round. Swarthy and to all appearances, peacefully content. Smoking good cigars and tipping his hat to the ladies. He looked more like a dry goods drummer than a warrior, Sam Dreben, the fighting Jew, who had exchanged the sights of war for the prospects of a town; who had traded the warpath for the sidewalk; and who seemed to be happy in his bargain.

Against Madero

But he was not happy. Within a year Orozco and Salazar started rebellions against Madero. To Orozco's red banner flocked the restless warriors—Tracey Richardson, Tex O'Reilly, Tom Zimmerman, Dynamite Creighton, Red Norton and with them, of course, Sam Dreben.

Gen. Emilio Campa, one of the revolution- [illegible] gold to handle a machine gun in his army. At the battle of Parral Dreben had charge of the only weapon of this type Campa possessed. The revolutionists started to attack the town but were faced by a vicious counter attack on the part of Pancho Villa, bandit who was working for Madero.

Above—Sam Dreben and General Ynez Salazar taking it easy during a campaign against Madero. Below — A snapshot of Dreben taken while he was fighting under Orozco in the revolution against Madero.

Dreben's Mexican comrades fled precipitately, and he was in the path of 500 or more loyalists. Still, he continued to fire his gun. After checking the pursuit, Dreben picked up the gun and dropped back several hundred yards. When the loyalists started after him he dropped into a position and started firing. He continued these tactics until dark, holding the pursuers at bay. Then he shook them off and made his way after the retreating Campa army.

Tracey Richardson, a Missourian and one of the great soldiers of fortune, mentioned in his memoirs what happened to Dreben after this escapade. It seems that Dreben made so bold as to resign from Campa's army. When the General asked him why replied:

"I do not like to fight under a General who retreats."

In a great rage the General arrested Dreben, Richardson and Jack Zimmerman:

"Without any sort of evidence against us we were sentenced to death," wrote Richardson. "Dreben decided to make a final plea. 'If you have anything against me, General,' he said, 'shoot me, but don't shoot Richardson and Zimmerman.' The General replied in Spanish, 'You are all Americans and I am going to shoot the three of you.'

"They stood us side by side, with my old friend, Sam Dreben on my right and Zimmerman on my left. We had given up all hope of being saved when the unexpected happened. Major Zapata was one of the staff officers of Gen. Campa. He had witnessed the skill with which Dreben, Zimmerman and myself operated the machine guns, and had studied our methods of directing the men under us. Major Zapata made a very pointed talk to Gen. Campa in our behalf. He intimated very strongly that the staff officers would take matters in their own hands if Gen. Campa insisted on carrying out the execution."

Gen. Campa, seeing that he would place himself in jeopardy if he insisted on the execution relented. He confessed that he had nothing against Richardson and Zimmerman, offering to give them commissions as Captains in his command. But he insisted that Dreben, who had mortally offended him, should leave the army. All three decided to leave, and after numerous adventures Dreben and his comrades reached El Paso.

HOME AGAIN, GONE AGAIN--WORTHINGTON CHILDRE

Twice Spirited Away by Father and Brought Back by Big Sist

She, as Their Guardian, Is Determined That James Worthington, Wealthy Former St. Louisan, Shall Not Have Custody of Three Youngest Sisters — Once He Took Them to Illinois and Once to Canada, but She Trailed Him and Regained Custody of Mary, Alice and Ruth.

THE Worthington children were at home to a reporter the other afternoon. Miss Grace, who is 22 and the eldest, announced that the interview would be given in the parlor of Forest Park University, Oakland avenue and Clayton road. Her aunt, Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, 84 years old, president of the school until it closed last year, was taking a nap, but would be down after a while to say that everything the children told was the solemn truth.

They gathered in a wide semicircle, extending from the corner of the grand piano to the oil portrait of Mrs. Cairns by a window. The twins, Mary and Alice, 5 years old, slid onto chairs and writhed under the portent of the occasion. Ruth, 7 years old, had more poise, and only twisted her apron a little bit at one corner. James, being 14, marched in boldly and shook hands. Helen and Anna, well along at high school, sat with composure, waiting for their sister, Grace to give the cues. And Harriet—Mrs. J. J. O'Neill, if you please—also awaited her older sister's lead.

Miss Grace is the head of the family. The Court has appointed her guardian of Mary and Alice and Ruth. She it is who has been carrying on a four-year litigation with their father, James A. Worthington, wealthy former St. Louisan, now a resident of New Orleans. The points at issue between father and daughter are:

Alice.

Mary.

Ruth.

Father Worthington wants them to come and live with him and their stepmother in New Orleans. Sister Grace desires that they stay with her and their aunt in St. Louis.

By Unanimous Vote

"Which do you want to do?" the three were asked.

"I'm going to stay with Grace," said Ruth.

"So am I," said Alice.

"Me, too," said Mary.

The other Worthington children nodded approbation. Here was a family aligned eight strong against their father. And here were children who had fought their parent for four years, resolved to stay together.

"Why?" was the next question.

Ruth looked at Mary and Mary looked at Helen and Helen looked at Harriet and Harriet looked at Grace.

"Well, he was mean," said Alice, before anyone could stop her.

Miss Grace Worthington frowned. Their father's behavior, she explained, had been described in court, and there was little use in going over all that again. A suit was in progress even then in Judge McElhinney's court at Clayton in which she is asking an injunction to prevent Worthington's further interference with her guardianship.

"He comes and kidnaps us," piped up Ruth, at this juncture.

"He's done it four times," volunteered one of the other girls.

"Father Will Get You If—"

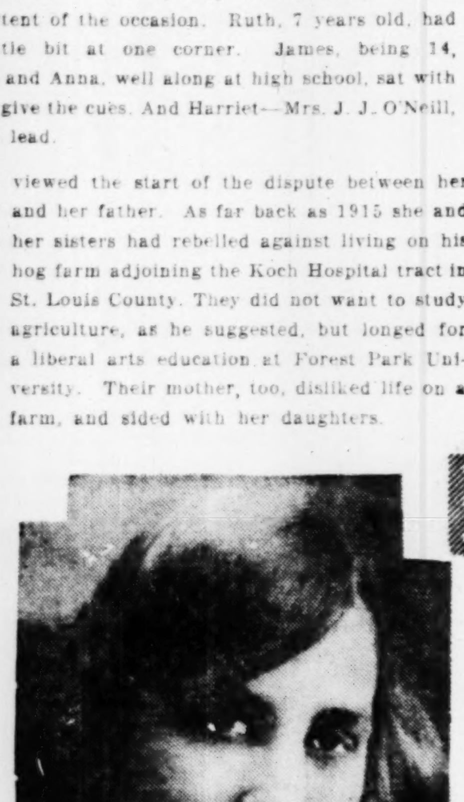
At last the purpose of the meeting began to define itself. This was to be a forum of the Worthington Children, Inc., on the subject of "How we have defied our father." Worthington so far has been baffled at each attempt to assert what he believes is his rightful parental authority over his son and daughters. No less than six proceedings have been instituted in St. Louis County and St. Louis courts during the last four years. Each time the children, through Miss Grace, have circumvented him. Twice he resorted to out-and-out abduction of the younger children, but twice Miss Grace got them back.

It was clear from the frightened expressions worn by Mary and Alice and Ruth that the bugaboo of the family is "Father will come and get you if you're not good." Sister Grace perhaps had told them that when they were naughty. Mary and Alice have been abducted four times; Ruth, three times.

"We've seen men lurking about at night," said Miss Grace. "We're afraid father will try to take them away again. We're so afraid that we don't let them go to school. They have their lessons here and we elder girls teach."

An air of excitement swept about the semicircle. In this great school building, deserted of scholars since Mrs. Cairns closed classes a year ago, the eight Worthington children feel themselves beleaguered. They believe they are holding a fort against their father.

While her "family" listened, Miss Grace reviewed the start of the dispute between her and her father. As far back as 1915 she and her sisters had rebelled against living on his hog farm adjoining the Koch Hospital tract in St. Louis County. They did not want to study agriculture, as he suggested, but longed for a liberal arts education at Forest Park University. Their mother, too, disliked life on a farm, and sided with her daughters.



MRS. HARRIET WORTHINGTON O'NEILL.

Mrs. Cairns became involved in the dispute and several times Mrs. Worthington and the children moved to Forest Park University to live. Worthington filed suit against Mrs. Cairns for alienation of his wife's affection and for alienating the affection of his children. His petition for $40,000 damages is still pending.

The children tell stories of mistreatment, poor food, punishments, and bad housing at their father's hands and their affidavits in support of the allegations have been filed in the present suit at Clayton. Whatever the truth of these allegations, there was an open break between Worthington and his wife and he sued for divorce a short time before her death in 1920.

He Took His Own Children

On two occasions during this period Worthington forcibly carried the younger children away from Forest Park University and obliged them to stay with him on the farm. Mrs. Cairns usually acted as intermediary to persuade him to allow them to return to her school. Matters stood at this pass when Mrs. Worthington died of pneumonia.

Grace petitioned the Probate Court at Clayton to name her guardian of all the children, and in her testimony alleged that her father could not give them proper care. She presented sufficient testimony to satisfy Judge Hodgdon and he issued the order of guardianship. The act has been attacked by Worthington on the ground that he was not notified of a hearing into his competency and was entitled to a trial by jury.

"Alice and Mary were playing on the lawn of the school one day," Miss Grace related, "when father drove up in an automobile with another man. He picked them up and placed them in the tonneau. The first thing I knew they had disappeared."

The three Worthington children who have figured most prominently in the clash between their sister, Grace, and their father. They are left to right: Mary, 5 years old; Ruth, 7 years old, and Alice, 5 years old.

Alice and Mary, sitting on their chairs, looked self-conscious.

"I was determined to bring them back," their sister continued. "I didn't want father to have charge of their upbringing. Besides, the Probate Court had made me their guardian. So I set out to find where he had taken them.

"A friend who was staying at the farmhouse near Koch promised to watch father's mail for us. We then appealed to the police and to the church authorities. I guessed that father would place them in a Protestant or Catholic school somewhere.

The First Rescue

"My first plan worked. Father received a letter from a Catholic convent at Nauvoo, Ill. We judged from this that the children were there. I went to the school, explained what father had done and showed my court papers. The school didn't want to give up the children, but finally we persuaded the head that I was in the right."

"Now tell about the other time," said Ruth.

"Yes, the other time," said the twins.

"The last time," explained Anna, to keep everything straight.

Miss Grace smiled, a little sadly.

"The last time was in May, 1923," she related. "We got careless and let the children go to the Dewey School. Helen was to keep an eye on them——"

"No—it was Anna——" said Helen.

"No, you were," said Anna.

"Anyway," continued Miss Grace, firmly, "someone was to watch. Ruth was walking home from school with the twins when an automobile swerved into the curb and father got out. He had a helper with him.

Vanished Again

"A schoolmate saw father carry the twins and Ruthie away in the car and had presence of mind enough to take down the license number. As soon as she told me what had happened I was wild. I knew that father had plenty of money and could take the children almost any distance.

"So I tried to stop him before he left St. Louis. He had, however, obtained an injunction from the Circuit Court in the county restraining me from having him arrested for taking the children. Besides, I was unable to locate him here, although the police helped and our friends all over town looked for him.

The eight Worthington children with their mother, who died in 1923.

"I had circulars sent out, and I went over the same ground we had covered when father took the children in 1920. The Catholic Church authorities gave me letters, I had letters from Judge McElhinney and other officials, and my guardianship papers. But these were no use unless I could find the children.

"Once more I was lucky. A friend told me that William Habum, a Brazilian who used to work for father was riding around in a new automobile.

"I said to myself, 'Well, if he has a new car he's been doing some work for father.' I learned that he took his meals every evening at a restaurant down on South Broadway. So I got policemen and a lady from the Juvenile Court and we went down to arrest him. Sure enough, he came in and I walked right up to him. I said, 'Tell me where my father took the children.' He turned pale and stammered and when he saw we meant business offered to tell all he knew if I would not press charges.

"We learned from him that father had hired him to drive to Buffalo, N. Y. He had last seen father and the children there. That could mean only one thing. Father was taking them to Canada. I decided to make Toronto my headquarters for a detailed search.

The Children Are Found

"I went to Toronto and we began a survey of all the orphanages and schools in the city. We found that father had placed Ruthie and the twins in a Methodist orphanage.

"The orphanage people refused to let me talk to them. I saw them in a large room with other youngsters, but when I started toward the door it was slammed in my face. The management absolutely refused to recognize my guardianship.

"We found the children in August, after a search of three months. My attorneys told me it would cost $15,000 to institute court proceedings in Toronto and take witnesses there for a trial. I tried, but I couldn't raise that much money. Even then there was no assurance that father would give up. He might appeal and appeal. He had more money than we, much more. It looked pretty hopeless.

"I came back to St. Lou[illegible] I was determined to return to Toronto and be near the children. So after a few weeks I sta Canada, intending to get work in T I didn't have much hope of ever seeing and the twins again.

THE AMAZING DENNISTOUN CASE---AS TOLD BY THE PRINCIPALS

Colonel's Wife Confesses She Paid the Price for His Promotions in the Service

After Her Affair With Gen. Sir John Cowans, Mrs. Dennistoun Divorced the Colonel So That He Could Marry Lady Carnarvon, But She Says He Failed to Keep His promise to Provide for Her and the Jury Took Her View of the Matter but the Judge Set the Verdict Aside.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 24.

IT seems to have been all a question of price. Col. Ian Onslaw Dennistoun wanted appointments and promotions. His wife, Mrs. Dorothy Muriel Dennistoun got them for him from Gen. Sir John Cowans, Quarter master-General of the British Army, and she says the price was paid with her husband's knowledge and connivance.

Then, unaccountably, the Countess of Carnarvon wanted Dennistoun. Mrs. Dennistoun and the Countess had been such great friends. So Mrs. Dennistoun divorced Dennistoun, in the expectation of getting her price. She didn't get it, so she sued. A jury in the King's Court decided that the Countess must pay the price, which it fixed at £5000, a little less than $25,000 in American money, but the Judge set the verdict aside.

If, on appeal, the trial Judge is overruled, it is the Countess who will have to pay the bill for the damaged husband that she has acquired, because he has nothing of his own with which to pay, having been provided with a flat and spending money by the Countess before she married him and with the $500,000 which he "settled" upon his new wife when they were married. And, anyway, she must repay the $2500 which Mrs. Dennistoun had loaned to her husband, for that part of the verdict was permitted to stand. And most of the court costs too.

The astounding feature of the revelations was that Dennistoun had consented to his wife's liaison with Gen. Cowans for the advantage of the General's influence in his behalf, although Dennistoun vehemently denied that he was consenting to it, defending himself with the declaration that he had no control over his willful wife's morals. But there were other disclosures but little less amazing.

They were married in 1910. In 1914 they were hard up and Mrs. Dennistoun got him a job through Gen. Cowans. Then there were promotions for him and his wife paid the price. In 1921 she divorced him, with his apparent consent. She says he promised to provide for her when he became able. All the providing he did was to give her about $3000 which Lady Carnarvon gave him for the purpose. Lord Carnarvon, who had financed the exploration of King Tutankhamen's tomb, kindly died and Lady Carnarvon married him and assumed all of his liabilities, one of which now proves to be the $25,000 which the jury says is coming to Mrs. Dennistoun.

Charming Mrs. Dennistoun

But as for compensations, there is the happy memory of her associations with the lovely Mrs. Dennistoun, whose charms, Lady Carnarvon said on the witness stand, nobody could resist when she chose to exercise them.

At the trial Mrs. Dennistoun told frankly of the beginning and progress of her affair with Gen. Cowans. After she had seen him two or three times, in behalf of her husband's advancement, he expressed admiration for her and told her that if she became more to him he would do a great deal more for her husband. Returning with her husband from Gibraltar, after Cowans had brought about a promotion for Dennistoun, they stopped in Paris. The General, she testified, had engaged rooms for himself and her and that her husband saw the rooms.

Did you pay the price? Yes.

Later she had a flat.

Did the General spend the night there? He did, on one or two occasions.

Did your husband know that the General had slept at the flat now and again? Yes, he did know.

Did Sir John Cowans make you an allowance? No, he helped me in the house, but he gave me no allowance of any kind.

Did he bear the expenses of the flat? After 1920, yes. He helped me considerably more.

Had your affection for the General increased? I was devoted to him. He was a very charming man and a wonderful personality.

Did you love your husband when you were with Sir John Cowans? I was very fond of him. There was nothing I would not do for him. I was not in love with him, but I would have done anything for him.

Could you have sacrificed yourself more? I do not think that I could have done more.

Did you know that a friendship had grown up between your husband and Lady Carnarvon? I naturally knew.

Tales Servants Tell

Cross-examination:

If the woman who has married your husband is a rich woman—a very rich woman, possibly—how much would she be prepared to pay to prevent a case being opened like this in court? I have never thought of it at all.

Had you a maid called Parker in your employ at the time of your husband's marriage to Lady Carnarvon? Yes.

Did you tell Parker on the day before the marriage that now you would "put the screws on"? I don't discuss my private affairs with servants.

Look at that letter. Is not what you tell your maid in that letter the most intimate secret thing that any woman could tell anyone? Quite true.

In a letter to Dennistoun before he married Lady Carnarvon, Mrs. Dennistoun wrote: "I don't want to annoy Almina." Explaining this, she said she imagined Lady Carnarvon was often at the flat which she had provided for Dennistoun and it was to that she referred when she wrote that she did not want to annoy Almina.

She also wrote to Dennistoun that on his account she could not marry the man she would like to marry. She explained that she could not marry him because she would be coming between the friendship of Lady Carnarvon's son and this man. She said:

An Embarrassing Mixup

"I hardly know how to put it, but Lady Carnarvon's son naturally would not want his best friend to marry the ex-wife of a man who probably to all intents and purposes was going to marry his mother."

As to Lady Carnarvon, Mrs. Dennistoun was devoted to her and dearly loved her.

A letter was shown her in which she had written to Dennistoun, two days after his marriage to Lady Carnarvon:

"Dear Tiger—You can imagine how difficult it is for me to write to you as I am doing. With regard to Almina, I propose to say nothing. She was my friend and I valued her friendship intensely. Through you I lost it when you became her lover."

What do you mean by "became her lover?" It was strongly put, but I meant that they became devoted to each other.

Questioned about Oscar Senhouse, Mrs. Dennistoun said: He is not here to defend himself. He was the straightest boy who ever lived. He was the finest sportsman and he was killed in the first week in which he was in France leading his men.

When you got a telegram announcing his death, did you have a fit of hysteria? I was very unhappy.

Did you tell your husband that you had spent the night preceding his departure for France with Senhouse? I told my husband no such thing. He knew the house party where I was when Mr. Senhouse came over and said good-by. All of us waited up to give him a farewell supper.

Had you a bungalow at Bexhill called "The Moorings?" Yes, the General took it for me.

In 1920, as soon as the General's back was turned, did you have a Mr. Bolin to the bungalow? The General knew. I was never alone with Mr. Bolin for a minute.

The House Was Crowded

Did he sleep in the General's bed? I don't remember. He slept somewhere. The house was very small.

In September, 1920, were you at the Ritz Hotel, Paris, with Mr. Bolin? I do not remember. Mr. Bolin always stayed at the Savoy. I tried to see him as much as I could because we were engaged.

Did you go down in the morning in your dressing gown to Mr. Bolin's room and did your maid say to you, "Be careful, madam, you are playing with fire," and did you say, "Perhaps so. Will have my breakfast upstairs?" My maid would not say such a thing nor would I do such a thing.

Do you know that at that very time your husband was occupying an attic in that hotel? I cannot remember whether he was in the hotel or not.

You say you were devoted to the General? He knew about Mr. Bolin? He knew that I wanted someone to look after me legitimately.

Later she admitted that she spent 12 days with Bolin at a chalet in Switzerland.

Why didn't you marry Bolin? I told Lady Carnarvon all about it and she advised me not to marry him. Perhaps she was right because he was a foreigner and about five years younger than myself. I was guided by her.

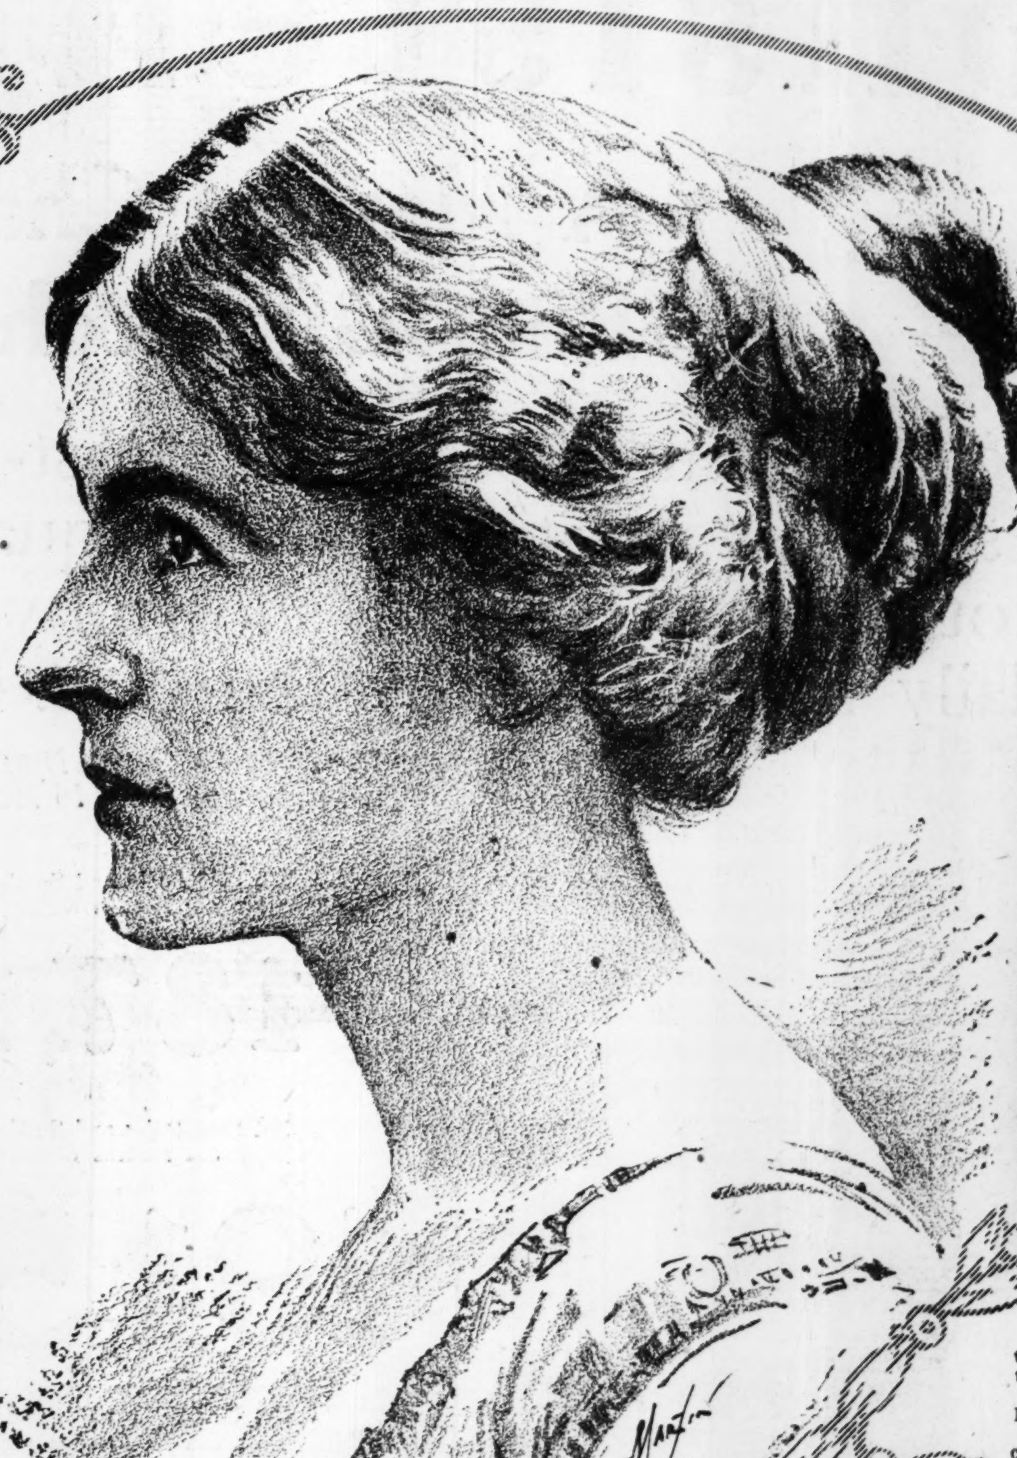
Did you elicit the warmest sympathies of Lady Cowans by producing letters which had been written to you by Sir John Cowans? I told her everything.

Was not the cause of the rupture between you and Sir John Cowans this man Bolin? There was no rupture between us at any time.

As to Senhouse, he was devoted to her and she looked upon him as a very dear friend.

Above—Lady Carnarvon, who married the penniless Dennistoun, and now must pay back what his former wife loaned him.

Below—Gen. Sir John Cowans, who collected the price for Dennistoun's promotions.



MRS. DOROTHY MURIEL DENNISTOUN.

Above—Sir Henry McCardie, President of the divorce court which heard the Dennistoun case.

Below—Dennistoun and his present wife leaving the hearing.

Lois Meredith, motion picture actress, who says she has a packet of Dennistoun's love letters.

Why should this young soldier be devoted to you? I do not know why he should.

How many men in your life have you had devoted to you, a good many? I do not think so.

You have had a great success with men? You like to put it that way. It is your own way.

The opening of this case by your counsel was that Sir John bought you and the price he paid was that he obtained preferment for your husband and that the price you paid was to become his mistress. Do you still say that? I do.

Do you really say that Sir John bought you on those terms? I told you the exact conversation that took place.

Did you say that you felt very honored by his affection? I don't think that I should use such a word. I appreciated his affection enormously.

Before your husband went to Gibraltar had you ever committed yourself with Gen. Cowans? No.

And you say that the first time was at the Ritz Hotel in Paris? Yes.

How long did you stay there? Two or three days I think it was.

You were flattered by the attention of this great man, to whom you were immensely attracted, and you became his mistress apart from anything to do with your husband? That is not so. My husband was discontented and wanted another position.

Your liaison with the General was well known to so-called society? Yes.

He "Knew Quite Well"

As to the circumstances of her going to Paris she arrived there with her husband from Gibraltar and he stayed just long enough to take a bath and went on by the soldiers' train. The General arrived later. Her husband "knew quite well" about it.

Did you ever tell Lady Carnarvon what a scoundrel your husband was? No.

Did you say that he had sold you to Sir John Cowans? I don't think that I ever discussed my husband with Lady Carnarvon.

Until you discovered that Lady Carnarvon and your discarded husband were in love did you ever say a word against him? I told Lady Carnarvon all my personal life.

Do you suggest that your husband ever deserted you? He was living with other women at Paris.

Were you willing to give up Sir John Cowans in 1919 and live with your husband as his wife? I cannot say what I should have done. Sir John Cowans was taking my husband out to Mesopotamia. I suppose that we all three would have gone there.

In April or May, 1921, the agreement was made, you say, on which you are suing your husband? Yes.

Where was the agreement made? At Paris.

But where, Paris is a biggish place? At one of the small restaurants at which I used to take him to lunch. I forget the name.

From April 16 to 22 you were, I suggest, living at the Savoy Hotel, Paris, with Mr. Bolin? I have never occupied one room with Mr. Bolin anywhere. It is absolutely incorrect.

About that time did you ever stay elsewhere than at the Savoy? No.

You told us yesterday that you had never had one room with Mr. Bolin anywhere. Now you say that you never had one room in Paris? We shared a room at the Swiss chalet.

The witness agreed that she was at the Savoy Hotel, Paris, between April 16 and 22 and that Mr. Bolin might have been there, too. Her point was that she did not occupy the same room.

Are you now living the fashionable life of fashionable London—night clubs, dances, society bazars, the best of clothes? I cannot afford to be that sort of woman. I went to one bazar because I was asked to take a stall there.

A photograph was handed to the witness, who said that it was of a man named Maj. Woevodsky. The name was called and a man stood up in court for identification.

Do you know that he is a married man and his wife is a mannequin? Yes.

Does he live with his wife in a flat which is practically a basement dwelling? Yes.

On Jan. 8, 1925, did you go to Paris with him? I traveled to Paris in the same train as he did.

Did you go to the Savoy Hotel with him and ask for two adjoining rooms with intercommunicating doors? I asked for no such thing. I think that I wrote and asked for two rooms, but I gave no particulars of any kind.

Were the two rooms booked to you, and did you pay the account? I paid it on my return journey. There was no object in having two bills, and the Major gave the money back to me.

The witness added: I will tell you at once that I traveled with the Major during the whole trip. It was a business expedition of 13 days. I also stayed at Lisbon and Barcelona. I was asked by a friend to do all that I could in business for the Major.

The relations between you and Mr. W. were entirely innocent? Absolutely and entirely. We both had work to do. He is a man quite able to protect himself.

No Divorce Till 1921

With the exception of the case of Sir John Cowans, of which you have told us, and of Mr. Bolin, to whom you were engaged to be married, has there ever been any other man? No.

Nor been guilty of any acts of intimacy? No.

Questioned as to Mr. Bolin, the witness said that she did not remember the date when they became engaged. He wanted to marry her in 1921, and had told her that he was fond of her in 1920, but she did not think that there was any day of engagement.

At that time there was an impediment in the way of a husband. The divorce was not until 1921, when the decree was pronounced on May 28. When was the Swiss chalet taken and furnished? I don't remember the date.

It is suggested that you left Gen. Cowans at a time when he was practically dying, and that you joined Mr. Bolin? I left him to go and join Mr. Thornton Smith at Barcelona, where he was going to show me properly how to buy and trade. I was there about 10 days, and when I heard that the General was worse, I wired that I would come and see him.

You did not join Mr. Bolin at the chalet until May, after Gen. Cowans' death? Yes.

Mr. Birkett, opening the case for the defense, declared that, in the Cowans affair it was never a matter of bargain at all, but the case of a willful, impetuous, pleasure-loving wife.

Mr. Fryzer, Col. Dennistoun's solicitor, testified that the Colonel settled upon Lady Carnarvon $500,000 at their marriage, but that the money was supplied by Lady Carnarvon. He also stated that before the marriage Col. Dennistoun had been living in comfort and luxury at Lady Carnarvon's expense. As to the settlement, it was Lady Carnarvon's idea to provide the Colonel with a little nest-egg. It was done so as not to hurt the Colonel's feelings, he being penniless. It was Lady Carnarvon's desire to surround her husband with the utmost dignity.

Could Put Screw on

M. Gustave Schaubhut, secretary at the Hotel Beau Sejour, Campel-les-Bains, Switzerland, testified to Mrs. Dennistoun and Bolin occupying connecting rooms at the hotel.

Josephine Cina, chambermaid at the hotel, was difficult. She knew Mrs. Dennistoun as Mme. Bolin, but her answers to cross-examination in French, German and Italian were unresponsive.

Oliver Eaton Bodington, member of the English bar, testified to Dennistoun's acute distress, when consulting him, over what he considered was the conflict between his duty as a soldier and the exercise of his rights as an injured husband.

As to Mrs. Dennistoun's averment that she was not in the habit of talking to her maids, Hannah Parker assured his Lordship and the jury that "her tongue never ceased. She talked incessantly about everything and everybody. She had no secrets. And the night before his marriage to Lady Carnarvon she said: 'I am glad they are going to be married tomorrow. I can now put the screw on.'"

She left Mrs. Dennistoun because the cook told her she was not a good woman. Parker did not think it was fair to believe it but she verified it by observation.

Col. Dennistoun was questioned about his wife's relations with Oscar Senhouse a few months after the marriage.

Did she at any time tell you about her attitude toward Senhouse? Yes, she told me that she was very fond of him.

What attitude did you take toward that? It

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

The Dennistoun Case—Some Points of Testimony

was no use taking any attitude. She was a much more dominant figure than I was, all the way through. She told me everything, where she had been and what she had done.

Why did you not take strong lines about it? I had a certain amount of pride, so I protected her all through.

She went motoring with Senhouse in Wales and told her husband she had great difficulty in making up her mind whether to stay away but decided to stick to her husband. When word came of the death of Senhouse at the front, Mrs. Dennistoun had a complete breakdown and was crying in his arms for three-quarters of an hour while he was trying to comfort her.

He had suspicions about her when he went to Jamaica as military secretary to Gen. Manning, but he did not adopt any different attitude toward her. "I had no control at all over her so far as her morals were concerned," he explained.

Down to the end of 1913 did you love your wife in spite of all that had happened? I did, very much indeed.

As to his appointment to Gibraltar by Gen. Cowans, his wife did not tell him that it was on condition that she go to the General.

When you and your wife returned from Gibraltar to Paris, what did you do? I went to the Bureau at the Ritz Hotel and asked for rooms and found that Gen. Cowans had already reserved a room for Mrs. Dennistoun and one for himself. There was a communicating door between the rooms. My wife was announced. She said she was not going to sleep in a room next to the General's. She took another room.

You were returning from Paris by the soldiers' train. Was there any suggestion that your wife should go by that train? Yes, but she thought she would be more comfortable if she went with Gen. Cowans by the ordinary train.

Is there any truth in the suggestion that when you left her you knew she was going with Gen. Cowans? No.

After you arrived, did you receive a letter from your wife? Yes, from Paris. She said that Gen. Cowans had been to see her and had done certain things.

Did you go to London to see Mrs. Dennistoun? Yes, at the end of April.

What happened? She rounded on me, said that it was all my fault, that she had been driven to do what she had done and that I ought not to have left her in Paris. Did you feel there was anything you could have done which would put a stop to the Cowans affair? No, it was no use doing so. She implied that she was not going to let him drop. She said she was going to live with him and was not going to live with me.

Until the time Lord Carnarvon died, did you receive any money from Lady Carnarvon? Approximately £20,000.

She had furnished a flat for you? Yes.

You were living in comfort—indeed in affluence—on the money with which this woman had provided you? Exactly.

The £100,000 which Lady Carnarvon provided to bring into the marriage settlement was intended to preserve your dignity? Quite so.

Do you think that, after you had accepted £20,000 and a flat from another man's wife, you had much dignity left to preserve? I am not going to discuss that point with you. You can ask Lady Carnarvon herself.

He was at Lady Evelyn Beauchamp's wedding and Mrs. Dennistoun was there and spoke to him outside the church, but he got away from her.

"You shooed her off? I was not going to have a vulgar brawl outside the church.

Do you suggest that she is given to vulgar brawls? Yes. I will give you an example: I was in Bond street and passed her. I had cut her intentionally and as I was talking to Capt. Brinckman she deliberately came in front of me and said: "Oh, boy, I did not mean to cut you just now"

What would have happened if you had come to London and thrashed the General, saying: "To hell with my career?" I should have been courtmartialed and there would have been a great scandal.

Dennistoun said his wife was frightfully pleased when he gave her 600 pounds after the divorce, but it was not given in recognition of any claim that he felt she had on him. Where did he get the 600 pounds? Oh, from Lady Carnarvon, of course.

When Mrs. Dennistoun had a flat at Queen's Gate, London, she entertained Gen. Cowans and Bolin, according to Marguerite Pyronnene, her maid. But once the General came when Bolin was there. Mrs. Dennistoun told her to take Bolin to the basement until she got the General out of the way, but Marguerite wasn't quick enough. Bolin beat her to the basement.

Lady Carnarvon testified about her intimacy with Mrs. Dennistoun.

Did she ever talk to you about her husband? Often. She said that he was an awfully sweet man, kind and a gentleman, but that he was too stupid for words; in fact, a washout.

Mrs. Dennistoun told her about her affair with Cowans, but not that it was with the knowledge and connivance of her husband.

Are you fond of Col. Dennistoun? I love him with all my heart, my soul and my body.

Will you tell me when it was that Mrs. Dennistoun first knew that there was anything beyond an acquaintance between you and her late husband? Mrs. Dennistoun was fully aware, step by step, of the growing friendship developing into affection and culminating in love.

Did she encourage the affection between her late husband and yourself? She encouraged it with all her might.

She provided the money for Dennistoun's marriage settlement upon her because she knew his sensitive, refined nature.

NCARE'S TIME LIMIT FOR A MEAL IS 15 MINUTES

Former Premier Also Confesses to French Lawyers He Drinks Nothing But Water.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 4.—"I never take more than a quarter of an hour for a meal, and I drink nothing but water." This was the courageous confession of Raymond Poincare, former President of France, to prominent members of the bar and of the magistracy, at a meeting over which he presided. M. Poincare's statement, has given his critics the opportunity of declaring it contains an explanation of a certain alleged lack of sympathy between Poincare and his fellow countrymen shown in the last election.

The meeting was held to commemorate Brillat Savarin, whose reputation as the author of a treatise raising cookery to rank in the arts on the level with painting and music, has led to forgetfulness of the fact that he was 27 years a Judge on the Cassation bench, the highest court in France. After having been lawyer, Deputy and Chief Judge of the Department Court, Savarin was driven from the country by the revolution. He went to England and then to the United States, where he supported his wife for two years by playing a fiddle in small theaters.

M. Poincare, after having declared his incompetence to deal with the subject of cooking, requested Maitre Fernand Payen to take up the task. Payen then rose and finished the address for M. Poincare.

"Cookery," said Payen, "always has been a French art. From the sixteenth century our cook shops have been as celebrated as our historic sites and monuments. France would no longer be France if people ate here as they do in London and Leipsic or drank here as they do in New York."

MUNICH PAPER MAKES FUN OF U. S. HOTEL ADVERTISEMENTS

Describes Hostelry 365 Stories High—So Large It Has Two Members in Congress.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 4.—The Neueste Nachrichter, Munich newspaper, inspired by an advertisement depicting the immense size and complete equipment of a great American hotel, prints the following fantasy:

"The greatest hotel in the world has been built at Dingstown, North America. Some figures will give our readers some idea of the establishment:

"It has 365 stories, the upper 20 of which are in the region of perpetual snow and are therefore used only for cold storage and skating rinks.

"The guests are served at table by an electric railway, as a 14-year-old boy, starting afoot at one end of the tables would be an old man before he reached the other end.

"The hotel is so complete that it has its own Mayor and two members in Congress.

"Twelve rafts of logs from the Mississippi River are required daily to supply the guests with toothpicks.

"Fifty-horsepower brushes polish boots on every floor.

"Two aniline factories employing 200 men each are working constantly to supply the coloring necessary to convert whitefish into mountain trout, and a completely equipped electric line carries the guests from room to room."

THE DENNISTOUN CASE—SOME POINTS OF TESTIMONY

toun's hands with no will, absolute putty, a mere rag.

The jury found for Mrs. Dennistoun, both on her claim for support under the alleged verbal promise of Dennistoun, and for loans made by her to him. The Judge set aside the judgment for support on the ground that the agreement was not enforceable in law. He upheld, however, the part of the verdict finding that Mrs. Dennistoun was entitled to recover about $2500 which she had loaned the Colonel. She also was awarded the costs of the action, except those growing out of the allegation of breach of contract.

A general stay in execution was ordered until further action of the Court and the plaintiff was given liberty to appeal. So the end of the case is not yet.

PIMPLES ITCHED ALL THE TIME

Face Disfigured. Lost Rest. Healed by Cuticura.

"I was troubled with pimples for a long time. They were large, hard and red and some of them festered. The pimples were very annoying as they not only disfigured my face but burned and itched all the time, causing me to scratch. The scratching caused eruptions and I lost my rest at night because of the irritation.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using four cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and a half boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Mildred Leveen, 1516 Seventh St., Rock Island, Ill., July 14, 1924.

Mrs. Coolidge Bars Conversation in Her Box at the Theater

She Frequently Attends Concerts Unaccompanied—Wayfarers Return to Capital for McLean Easter Breakfast.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 4.

ONCE more President and Mrs. Coolidge are the only members of their family in the White House, for both Mrs. Andrew I. Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Coolidge, and John Coolidge, have left for New England, where Mrs. Goodhue will reopen the Coolidge home in Northampton, Mass., and John will return to his studies at Amherst.

Mrs. Goodhue had been a guest at the White House since shortly before the inauguration, on her first visit there since her son-in-law became President.

Mrs. Coolidge has won a reputation in Washington society as one of the most constant of concert goers. With the exception of two or three concerts, she has heard every great star who has played or sung in Washington this season. Frequently, Mrs. Coolidge goes unaccompanied. She is a genuine music lover and never permits any conversation in her box during the performance and always is a leader in the applause with generous handclapping.

Mrs. Edwin S. Puller entertained at dinner Thursday for her guest, Mrs. John H. Crawford of Orange, N. J. Mrs. Crawford returned recently from a trip to South America.

One of the most unique teas given in Washington this season was that given by Col. and Mrs. Charles R. Burnett in honor of Ambassador Matsudaira of Japan and his wife. Col. Burnett is the former military attache of the American Embassy in Tokio. Mrs. Burnett's friendship with the Ambassador's wife began when she came to Mrs. Burnett in her quaint Japanese costume as lady-in-waiting to the late Empress bearing gifts of tiny cakes to invite Mrs. Burnett to the palace for the reading of the imperial poems. Mrs. Burnett won distinction by mastering the Japanese poetic language to such a degree that her poem, entered in the Japanese New Year contest, was selected to be read to the imperial family. Madame Matsudaira's two little daughters were present in their flowered silk Japanese costumes, looking like two dolls. Madame Matsudaira herself wore smart clothes from European fashion centers.

Mr. and Mrs. George Post Wheeler are in Washington pending Mr. Wheeler's assignment to some embassy. They returned recently from London, where he was first secretary and for a period charge d'affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, the former a well known poet and the latter a successful novelist under the name of Hallie Ermine Rives, are familiar figures in Washington.

The annual breakfast given each Easter Monday by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean at Friendship has brought many wayfarers back for the Easter season. Mr. and Mrs. McLean arrived from Palm Beach the later part of this week accompanied by their children. The members of the diplomatic corps and official and resident society compose the lists of guests at the breakfast.

Representative and Mrs. Edward Britten entertained at dinner last week in honor of the Arctic explorer, Donald McMillan. Ranking officers of the army and navy, and prominent society people filled the auditorum of the Army and Navy Club to overcrowding to hear the lecture by McMillan on his visit to the North Pole.

The Missouri State Society will entertain at a reception April 20 in honor of the Missouri delegation to the Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Bessie Parker Bruggemann, who will preside at the meeting, is in charge of arrangements. Representative and Mrs. Cleveland Newton and the other officers of the society, will assist in receiving.

Miss Helen Walcott, only daughter of Dr. Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, chose Tuesday, her father's birthday anniversary, as the date of her marriage to Cole Younger of New York. The event was one of the most brilliant of the early spring weddings.

Before leaving Washington on the Yacht Lyndonia, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. K. Curtis were entertained at luncheon Wednesday by Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant. The other guests included Former Secretary of State Robert Lansing, Senator and Mrs. Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot

The marriage of Miss Mildred Ogle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell H. Ogle of 7050 Washington boulevard, and Edward H. Meister, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Meister of Russell avenue, will take place at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Grace Methodist Church, and will be followed by a reception at the Ogle home from 9 to 11 o'clock. The bride will be attended by her sisters, Mrs. Thomas Archer Cleveland and Miss Marion Ogle, as matron and maid of honor respectively, and Misses Helene Sproule and Alice Henderson as bridesmaids. Walter F. Meister will be best man, and Robert Hammerstein, Joseph Ogle Atto. F. Meister Jr., and Edward Gereke, groomsmen.

It will be a pink wedding, with the gowns of the bride's attendants shading from an ombre flame, worn by the matron of honor, to peach blow worn by Miss Ogle. They are chiffon, veiling taffeta, made with a circular skirt, and trimmed with ribbon and French flowers. Mrs. Cleveland will carry American beauty roses and the bridesmaids pink roses.

The bride will wear white satin trimmed with pearls and Venetian lace, made simply, with godets in the skirt covered with the lace embroidered in pearls. There will be a satin court train weighted with orange blossoms and a tulle bridal veil held in place by a lace and pearl coronet. Her flowers will be lilies of the valley.

Among the pre-wedding parties for the bridal party were a luncheon and shower March 27 by Miss Katherine Meyer of Webster Groves; a bridge party the following day by Miss Sproule; bridge luncheon by Miss Henderson, April 1; dinner at the Coronado Hotel by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Meister and Mr. and Mrs. Hammerstein, April 2 and an evening bridge by Mr. and Mrs. Baker de Camp April 3. Mr. and Mrs. Ogle will entertain the party at a buffet luncheon after rehearsal April 7.

Mr. Meister and his bride will motor East on their honeymoon and will occupy an apartment on the Clayton road. Mrs. Norbourne Rudy of Louisville and Miss Isabel Fiscus of Chicago will be here for the ceremony.

COATS WOMEN WILL WEAR THIS SPRING

Hart Schaffner & Marx Newest Paris Models

FIRST there are the new single and double breasted tailored coats—of smart tweeds and cheviots in the soft colorings of the Scotch moors. Then for dress wear, lines that cling closely to the figure from the snug shoulders and narrow untrimmed collar to the bottom of the coat. Here, fur is used lavishly—sometimes following the straight hem of the coat, sometimes added to a graceful flare.

There are other smart coats for dress, sport wear and motoring, all of them in the finest domestic and foreign fabrics. Rare knitted designs, cord effects, stocking weaves, sunset patterns and soft one tone shades. You'll be as delighted with the reasonable prices as you are with the styles and tailoring.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

Don't be afraid of living. Enjoy all the wonderful modern advantages!

While famous laboratories have been perfecting radio, the great manufacturing chemists have been busy producing a formula for restoring gray hai that should be as superior to old-fashioned hair dyes as the perfected cold white electric light is to the old-fashioned smoky lamp.

The Brookline Chemical Co. guarantees their product as a simple, absolutely harmless means of bringing back gray or faded hair to its original natural color, leaving it glossy, soft and lustrous.

Price, $1.10

Easy to use, because perfectly clear, not sticky and will not rub off or stain the scalp. No trouble at all to use; a few minutes in your room is enough. Every bottle sold with the positive guarantee that it cannot cause the slightest harm or annoyance to hair or scalp. Once the hair has returned to its original color it is easily kept so, and can be washed or curled without affecting the color.

How to Wave Hair to Appear Naturally Curly

Apply a little liquid silmerine with a clean tooth brush just before doing up the hair. This will impart a bright lustre suggestive of "hidden sunshine," and the hair will have a delightful wave, perfectly natural in appearance, that will last many days. It will prove beneficial to the hair, instead of making it brittle and dead-looking as the hot iron does. Instead of your tresses being mean and contrary, you will find them quite easy to do up in any form, and there will be no odor, grease or stickiness about the hair. Ask your druggist for a few ounces of the liquid silmerine (costs about 20c an ounce).

LANE BRYANT—ESTABLISHED 1900

Lane Bryant—the Originator and Pioneer Exponent of Slenderizing Apparel

If you were in search of pictorial beauty you would go to the museums where large collections of the works of great masters are to be seen in great quantities. You would not be satisfied with cheap reprints of catalogues or the laborious copies of mediocre artists.

If you were in quest of knowledge, you would go to the source and fountain head of enlightenment, the great writers and thinkers of the past and present.

In all things, you would naturally go to the beginning, the source, the origin—where inspiration and execution were fused into the product of genius, thus avoiding imitations.

Nearly 25 years ago Lane Bryant originated the idea of adapting designs that accentuate slenderness. This idea has developed into an INSTITUTION with magnificent stores, retail and mail order in New York, Brooklyn, Chicago, Detroit and next week

VATICAN ADMITS PUBLIC TO VIEW ART TREASURES

Models in Wood by Michelangelo Among Works Connected With History of St. Peter's.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ROME, March 6.—Priceless art treasures connected with the history through the ages of St. Peter's, the mother church of Christendom, hitherto jealously guarded in the impenetrable chambers of the Vatican, now may be examined by visitors to Rome, thanks to the opening to the public several days ago of the Museum Petriano.

Among its treasures are many associated with the old basica which was destroyed on orders of Pope Julius II in 1505 to make way for the construction, started April 18, 1506, of the present church. There are models in wood by Michelangelo and Sangallo, the statue of Sixtus IV done by Pollaiolo, the huge statues of St. Peter and St. Paul done on orders from Pope Pius II by Paolo Romano, the magnificent sculptures carried out for the tomb of Pius II by Mino da Fiesole and Giovanni Dalmata, one of the angles of the famous Giotto mosiac, and countless other remarkable works.

School Candidates to Speak.

The W. C. T. U. Federation will meet tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at Luccock Lodge, 3628 Delmar boulevard. Mrs. Elias Michael and Prof. I. Lippincott, candidates for the Board of Education, will speak.

DELMAR CULVERT COMPLETED

Straightaway Traffic Over River des Peres There Resumed.

Work having been completed on the culvert under Delmar avenue at its intersection with the River des Peres, it was announced yesterday that straightaway traffic over the culvert again would be resumed.

For several months a temporary traffic way, which detoured slightly to the north, was used for street cars, vehicular and pedestrian traffic. Since the completion of the culvert a new, heavily-boarded roadway has been laid in alignment with the former road over the Delmar avenue bridge. This roadway will be used in future for vehicle and pedestrian traffic. The old temporary roadway will be used entirely for street car passage.

EX-CONVICT'S SUIT LEADS TO INFORMATION

Negro, Held on Woman's Charge, Admits Serving Prison Term for Assault.

The fact that Dee Hayes, 50 years old, a negro accused of attempted assault on a woman, was wearing a suit of the sort issued by prisons to released convicts enabled Police Captain Kirk to wring the admission from him yesterday that he had served 25 years in Fort Madison, Ia., penitentiary, 20 of which was for criminal assault.

He had been released from Fort Madison in January, he admitted, and had come to St. Louis shortly afterwards. But he denies he is guilty of the offense he is alleged to have committed Friday night.

Mrs. Agnes Brockman, 54 years old, of 2726A St. Vincent avenue, identified Hayes as the man who seized her in front of her home at 11:45 p. m. She struggled and screamed. Her shoulder was dislocated in the fight. Neighbors went to her rescue and the assailant fled. Police signal lights flashed, and detectives, apprised of what had happened, picked up Hayes near Michigan avenue on Lafayette avenue. He was returned to the scene and Mrs. Brockman cried, "He's the man." An attempt by neighbors to harm Hayes was thwarted by the police.

Hayes told Capt. Kirk at the Soulard station yesterday that he was first sentenced for five years for burglary. While a trusty at the prison he assaulted a negro school girl and was sentenced to 20 years more.

PLEA OF MRS. LILLIAN STUART FOR MAINTENANCE IS HEARD

Former Actress Says She Prefers Alimony to a Return to the Stage.

Mrs. Lillian Stuart, who said she earned $2000 in eight weeks with the Greenwich Village Follies, prefers alimony to a return to the stage, she testified in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday. She wants her husband, Frank J. Stuart, steel manufacturer, to support her while the Supreme Court is deciding whether Circuit Judge McElhinney did right in refusing both the Stuarts a divorce.

The former musical comedy star said, "My present occupation is attending to five law suits. Conferring with attorneys and attending trials is about the best thing I do. No, I'm not going back on the stage when the suits are decided."

She declared that $100 a month allowance for clothing would be too little: she was used to much more. Previous allowances by the court had so reduced her in purse that she had to pawn her diamonds, she testified.

DIPLOMATIC IMMUNITY DENIED

Chicago Judge to Grant Divorce to Peruvian Consul's Wife.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Diplomatic immunity which previously had saved Dr. Matridates de Plata, Peruvian consul in Chicago, from facing a divorce suit was overruled today by Judge Joseph Sabath, who indicated he would grant a decree to Mrs. Ednee de Plata, teacher of languages. Her attorney presented affidavits to support his contention that a State Court had jurisdiction.

Mrs. De Plata alleged that the consul while en route to Peru met a dancer at Colon, Panama, and became so enamoured that he returned with her to New York and announced their engagement to marry. She testified her husband had numerous affairs and presented several letters and telegrams. The chief witness was Louise De Plata, seven years old, who told of going to New York with her mother. She also told of her father attacking her mother with a butcher knife.

COOLIDGE'S EASTER ECONOMY

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 4.—President Coolidge's action in sending his hat to be re-blocked for Easter has been commented on by the British press, which, since the high taxes hit the British public, has persistently clamored for personal as well as Government economy.

It is recalled that one of the famous Dukes of Devonshire invariably attended the smartest English race meetings in the same hat year after year. The Duke's explanation was that the particular hat was particularly comfortable, fitting the shape of his head exactly and he hated the idea of giving it up. But finally, 24 of the Duke's women friends decided that the old hat was a scandal and agreed to send 24 new hats of an accepted type to Devonshire House on the same day. The Duke accepted all the gifts with many thanks, but never wore any of them.

Stowaways Prepared to Swim.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—One woman and four men stowaways found aboard the Norwegian freighter, Bueland, after it was three days out of Cienfuegos, Cuba, were taken to Ellis Island, upon arival of the ship here today. All five stowaways wore bathing suits, which immigration authorities believed was in preparation to swim ashore from the ship when it reached this port. The woman was described as being 28 and was said to be a Russian-Finn.

Bankers Elect St. Louisan.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., April 4.—H. G. P. Deans of Chicago was re-elected president of the Bankers' Association for Foreign Trade. Other officers chosen at the election, which followed the annual dinner of the association here last night, were: W. F. Gephart, St. Louis, and W. B. Miller, St. Paul, vice presidents.

GAVE HUNGRY YOUTH A WORTHLESS CHECK

Soldier A. W. O. L. Lands in Holdover Cell After Boy Eats His Fill.

When Clark Janes, past 16, fresh from Toledo, Ill., in a pair of overalls capped by a lurid, if dirty, sweater coat, walked into Hotel Jefferson and strode through the lobby, hands deep in the front pockets of his jeans, he was the cynosure o fall eyes at noon yesterday.

Apparently oblivious of the attention he attracted, Clark asked the way to the "eatin' place," and when directed to the lunchroom, climbed on a stool and proceeded to demolish a group of sandwiches and a pot of coffee. It was evident his last good meal had been partaken in or close to Toledo.

Having satisfied his hunger Clark drew forth from his overalls a check for $10 and shoved it toward the cashier. It was made out in a scrawling hand in lead pencil to "Harry Miller" and signed "Ed Miller," drawn on the First National Bank of East St. Louis, and for "ten dollars and no cents."

The cashier had one glance at the check, another at the boy and called Detectives Joyce and McConnell, who had been some of the observers of the youth in the lobby.

Caught After Chase.

Where did Clark get the check? A man outside gave it to him because he was hungry. Would he point out the man? He would. On the corner as the besweatered youth emerged from the hotel with the detectives a form darted around toward Locust street from Twelfth. The detectives on his heels caught him half a block away.

He said he was William Knutson, 22, of Scott Field, Belleville, enroute to Odgensburg, Wis., his home. Yes, he had given the boy the check. Twenty-one other checks in blank were in his pockets. He said he was homesick. He had been attached to the corps at Scott Field a year, had a year and a half to go but couldn't resist the temptation to go home. He had left his uniform at the field and had borrowed the clothing he wore with another man's name in them. He wasn't exactly a deserter yet because 10 days has to elapse before a soldier "deserts" his corps. He had given Clark the check and was going to have him cash some more to raise funds for the trip to Wisconsin.

Told of Funds in Bank.

Clark amplified the story somewhat. He had been sitting on a railing "somewhere" in East St. Louis yesterday mornnig waiting for something to turn up. It did in the person of Knutson who asked him for a match and gave him a cigarette in return. Knutson climbed on the railing, too and confided he had $200 in bank and wanted to get some of it out.

Clark was hungry and he let it be known he had walked all the way from his home in Toledo to Mattoon, some 20 miles, without partaking of anything more solid than water. He had just left home to "get a job." Toledo was a small village and there "weren't no jobs wurth havin'" there. His mother Tessie, a widow, supported him and another boy so he "jes decided" to start out for himself.

His idea at the time of meeting Knutson was to get something to eat. Knutson offered to show him a means thereby and led him to a bank and told him to go in and get some blank checks. He got a handful. They came over to this side and then as Clark tells it this is what happened.

Auto Fenders for Desk.

"We walked aroun' a bit and then he stopped by an outo fender and takes out his pencil and writes a check out for $10 on the fender. He says to me 'Now for the grub' and gives me the check. He pointed out the place and I went in an eat. Say that's the best coffee in the world. I never did taste anything so good. I reckon its been all of three days since I had a square meal. It sure was good."

Clark, having unbosomed himself, curled around the arm of a bench at headquarters, put his head in crooked arm and proceeded to gaze out of a window with a faraway look. "I was hungry but I ain't now," he concluded.

He was taken to House of Detention and Knutson was given a place in theh oldover.

24 ST. LOUIS GIRLS OFFERED PLACES IN CARROLL'S REVUE

THE leading pianos, from the most inexpensive to the more pretentious, are sold by Conroys

Now while this sounds like a pretty strong claim analyze this statement and you will find it is merely a question of experience and financial strength.

As for experience, Conroys have been operating for almost half a century.

And no one questions the fact that Conroys is one of the strongest piano stores financially in America.

ELECTIONS IN EIGHT TOWNS IN COUNTY TUESDAY

Most Heated Campaign in University City Where Contests Are On for Mayoralty and School Board.

TWO OUT FOR MAYOR OF WEBSTER GROVES

Law Enforcement the Issue in Maplewood Where Mayor Burks Has Opponent for Re-election.

Eight suburbs in St. Louis County will conduct town elections next Tuesday, coincident with the St. Louis municipal election. On April 28 there will be a special election throughout the county on a proposed bond issue of $5,000,000 for roads and $715,000 for a new courthouse and jail. All the town elections are on a nonpartisan basis.

The most heated suburban campaign has been in University City, where there are hard-fought contests for Mayor and for the School Board. Oliver Abel, an optometrist, and A. O. Cunningham, a civil engineer, are the opposing candidates for Mayor. Abel has stressed his promise to give an economical, business-like administration and Cunningham has emphasized the fact that a small-town executive is chiefly concerned with engineering problems, for which his experience fits him.

Fights in University City.

Both candidates have been making liberal use of the customary advertising devices, with various frills. An echo of the feeling aroused is contained in the $20,000 damage suit filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday by Abel against G. S. Ammerman of 7056 Pershing avenue, sales manager of the Standard Auto Parts Co., on the allegation that Ammerman slandered Abel in discussing his candidacy. In answer, Ammerman's attorney, John F. Mooney, said the defense would attempt to prove the accuracy of the allegedly slanderous statement, and challenged Abel to consent to the public taking of depositions in the case in the suburb's city hall tomorrow.

Even more feeling has been aroused in the University City School Board campaign, reviving the discussion of lack of harmony in the board, which had reached a climax last spring. There are two tickets, each claiming to be the "harmony slate." One comprises John M. Atkinson, Alfred Fairbank, Roy C. Sutton and Harry H. Wright. The other, which the first slate declares is aligned with elements that are behind the discord, comprises Atkinson, Dr. Louis H. Renfrow, Mrs. Minnie F. Todd and Earl J. Karm.

Many women are backing the first-named group, while the League of Women Voters has indorsed Mrs. Todd and many league leaders are backing the slate which she is on.

Three men are seeking to be Collector of University City. There are two candidates for Aldermen in both the Second and Third wards, but only one in the First. There are two candidates for Police Judge and City Marshal George Ward has an opponent.

Situation in Webster Groves.

Webster Groves, the largest suburb, will choose between J. B. Chipman, the incumbent, and Marshall B. Peterson for Mayor, and will pick two out of the following three men for the governing commission: C. A. Riechardt, L. S. Booth and Willard H. Guest. Riechardt and Booth are incumbents and, with Chipman, form one slate, which has made the most active campaign, pointing to the commission's work for improvements.

Law enforcement has been made an issue in Maplewood, where it is claimed that Mayor Eugene Burks, seeking re-election, has "cleaned up" the town. His opponent, E. E. Johnson, is making the race on a business administration platform. F. P. Kasper and George M. McGregor, incumbent Commissioners, are opposed by William Robinson and William Weber.

In Kirkwood, Wallace A. Bell and R. L. Jacobsmeyer, who is active in county Republican political circles, are running for Mayor. Acting Mayor A. S. Cerny, who was appointed to a vacancy in the office recently, is seeking re-election as Third Ward Alderman, and has an opponent. Aldermanic candidates in the other three wards have no opponents and three candidates for as many places on the School Board have no opposition.

Ferguson Mayor Unopposed.

Mayor William H. Tiffin of Ferguson is unopposed for re-election, and there are no contests for Aldermen of the Second and Fourth wards, but there are two candidates each in the First, Third and Fifth wards, and two for City Marshal. One of the two opponents of incumbents seeking to retain two places on the School Board is a woman, Mrs. Kate Barkley.

Richmond Heights will choose Aldermen. Mrs. Mary Hassman is opposing the Second Ward incumbent and there are contests also in the First, Third and Fifth wards, but no contests in the Fourth and Sixth.

Clayton, the County seat, will have a quiet election. There are no contests for Aldermen in the First, Second and Fifth wards, but two candidates each in the Third and Fourth. The Police Judge is unopposed for re-election.

The five members of the Brentwood Board of Trustees will be re-elected, since they are unopposed.

Dr. John H. Harris Dies.

Minister Freed on Appeal.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 4.—County Judge Noonan today reversed the verdict of Justice of the Peace Rozan of Cheektowaga in convicting the Rev. Charles C. Penfold on a charge of outraging public decency sever months ago. Penfold, pastor of the Sentinel Methodist Church of this city and known as a vice crusader, was arrested by Constables while in an automobile outside the city limits with a woman said to have been a choir singer in his church. Justice Rozan sentenced the minister to 30 days in jail and imposed a $50 fine. "The conduct charged is trivial in character," Judge Noonan said.

JOINT APPEAL MADE FOR HONEST ELECTION

Clerks of Election Supplied With List of Voters Known to Be Disqualified.

A joint statement calling upon the citizens of St. Louis to assist in obtaining an honest election Tuesday was issued yesterday by members of the Election and Police Boards and Circuit Attorney Sidener and Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer.

In addition to general instructions, the statement points out, judges and clerks of election have been supplied with lists prepared by the police showing names of registered voters who are believed not to be qualified to vote. Police officers with copies of the same lists are to be stationed in all precincts and are instructed to make arrests ordered by judges and clerks. Any applicant who, in the opinion of the judges and clerks, is not qualified to vote will be turned over to the officers for further action.

Assurance of immediate action on all cases of election law violations brought to its attention is given by the grand jury, which will be in session throughout Tuesday. Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer's office will be open throughout the day to proceed in misdemeanor cases and a Circuit Judge, sitting in the criminal division of the Circuit Court, also will be in readiness to act.

Persons observing any violations of the law are requested to report immediately to those signing the statement.

CHURCH CORNERSTONE TO BE LAID THIS AFTERNOON

Eden Immanuel Evangelical Congregation Adds $160,000 Improvement.

The cornerstone laying ceremony of Eden Immanuel Evangelical Church, Page boulevard and Temple place, will take place at 3 p. m. today. The Rev. Karl Schneider, pastor of the church, will officiate, assisted by pastors of other churches.

The lower part of the church was erected about four years ago. In dition to completion of church, a modern Bible school building is being added.

The buildings are designed in the Tudor Gothic style. The treatment is in dark red brick with stone ornamentation. The auditorium will seat about 700 persons, exclusive of a large gallery. The pipe organ is concealed behind ornamental screens above the sanctuary. The Bible school building connects directly with the ground floor and main floor auditoriums. The cost of the entire improvement is about $160,000, including the auditorium on the ground floor, which is provided with a stage.

BOSTWICK TO ASSIST IN LIBRARY WORK IN CHINA

Public Librarian to Sail for Shanghai From Seattle Shortly, Returning in July.

Arthur E. Bostwick, librarian of the Public Library, will sail April 9 from Seattle for Shanghai, China, at the request of the American Library Association to assist in the advancement of library methods there. He will be absent three months.

The Chinese library associations expect to get financial aid for development of their libraries from the $15,000,000 Boxer indemnity fund which the United States is returning to China. At present Chinese libraries are inaccessible to the masses.

Dr. Bostwick expects to return to this country in July and will address the American Library Association meeting at Seattle July 6 to 10 on his observations in China.

FOLK TUNE STIRS DOUMERGUE

So Bizet Score Is Always Played at French Functions.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 4.—Strains for Georges Bizet's music written for Alphonse Daudet's ever-popular play, "L'Arlesienne," likely will become a sort of official anthem for President Doumergue during his seven-year term.

M. Doumergue, who hails from the sunny southland of France, has expressed particular fondness for the rollicking music of the "Farandole," a native dance, which Bizet incorporated in his score, and because of the fact once the official rendition of the "Marseillaise" has ended at public functions, the famous Garde Republicaine band invariably strikes up the air from "L'Arlesienne." The president almost always smiles or winks at fellow southerners present at the function and looks suspiciously as if he would like to dance the Farandole. Because of the rendition of the Bizet tune, France seems in a fair way to acquire a personal salutory air for its President, comparable with the American "Hail to the Chief."

Mail Carrier Admits Thefts.

Charles Dister, a letter carrier, of 5314 Janet avenue, allowed a fondness for gambling on pool games to lead him into small thefts from the mails to pay his losses, he confessed to postal inspectors yesterday. He said he had taken about $100 in the last seven months. The inspectors caught him by placing a test letter in his pack, which they saw him remove and open. He is married.

GAVE MILLSPAUGH EVIDENCE OF GORIN BANK'S CONDITION

Kansas City (Kan.) Banker Notified Commissioner Trust Company Wouldn't Pay Own Cashier's Check

"YOUR OWN AFFAIR," WAS HIS REPLY

Notification Was Given a Week Before Depository Was Closed by Its Directors.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 4.—C. N. Prouty, cashier of the Exchange State Bank of Kansas City, Kan., is prepared to testify in the impending grand jury investigation of Frank M. Millspaugh, recently removed State Finance Commissioner of Missouri, that he gave Millspaugh sufficient notice to indicate to any banker the insolvency of the Citizens Trust Co. of Gorin, Mo., a week before that institution closed. It is a matter of record that Millspaugh did not send an examiner to the bank in the 13 months of its existence, but that it closed of its own accord.

To notice from Prouty that the Gorin bank was unable to pay its own cashier's checks, Millspaugh replied "that is a matter between you and them."

The Prouty-Millspaugh correspondence, which became public today, is additional evidence for the grand jury to that provided by the correspondence of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis with Millspaugh which was published more than a week ago, and which showed that for several weeks before the trust company closed Millspaugh had official knowledge of its unstable condition, and yet did not move to examine or close it.

It will be recalled that Roy T. Myers, cashier of the trust company, in his confession to Attorney General Otto and a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch in El Paso, Tex., two weeks ago, said that Millspaugh was cognizant of the condition of the trust company throughout its existence, that he did not examine the bank, that Millspaugh's debts to the amount of $25,000 were taken care of by the trust company officials, and that in addition Millspaugh received $4500 in three $1500 checks.

Bank's Letters to Millspaugh.

The correspondence with Prouty arose over the failure of the trust company to pay its own cashier's check, which, Prouty said, was complete evidence of its insolvency.

After the check had been protested, Prouty wrote to the State Finance Department July 24, 1924:

"On the 9th of July we sent for a customer of ours to the Citizens Trust Co., at Gorin, Mo., a check for $1500, drawn by one of its customers. The item was held for several days, and after writing them two or three times and calling them up over the telephone, they finally sent us their cashier's check in payment.

"We forwarded the check to the Quincy-Ricker National Bank and Trust Co., their correspondent in Quincy, Ill. They advised us that they were authorized to charge items on the Citizens Trust Co. of Gorin to their account and send them to them, but they did not have sufficient funds. They wrote us that their experience with the Gorin institution had been that they held their items, so the item was sent to the other bank at Gorin, and when it was presented, payment was refused on their own cashier's check, and the item was protested and we have that notice today and it is being returned.

"We have wired the Citizens Trust Co. today that if they do not pay this item we will start proceedings at once. We wish to know from you what recourse we have? Is the bank being closed or what is the trouble? We must know at once and will appreciate any help from your office in the matter. We have called them and written them and done everything we could to get this item paid, with the above result.

"Won't you kindly wire us at our expense if there is anything that we can do that will protect our customer, who understood from the first that if for any reason the item was not finally paid, he would fully protect us in the matter, but this is unfair to him. Could you wire the trust company at Gorin to pay this check or close their doors? We want to do the thing that is best, and will appreciate your assistance."

Teply From Millspaugh.

The correspondence which followed indicates that Prouty's letter was not answered in the usual course of business in the Finance Department, but was held for Millspaugh's personal attention. The reply was written by Millspaugh July 29, five days later. It was:

"I am in receipt of your favor of the 24th inst., which came during my absence from the city, and hence the delay in replying.

"I am not wiring for the reason that this is a matter between you and the Citizens Trust Co. of Gorin, and while this department will be very glad to call the matter to their attention, which I am today doing. I am sure you will agree that this is a matter for you to take up with the trust company yourselves."

Procedure in Kansas.

Prouty replied to Millspaugh outlining something of the course the Kansas banking department would take if a Kansas bank was unable to pay its cashier's checks. He wrote:

"We are just in receipt of your letter from reference to the Citizens Trust Co., Gorin, Mo., advising that the honoring of their own cashier's check is a matter between them and us.

"We certainly will have to admit this but we do know this, that any bank in the State of Kansas not honoring and not able to pay its own cashier's check would certainly receive prompt attention from our banking department. What show does a bank stand in accepting a draft or a cashier's check from another bank if they can refuse payment of it and still be allowed to run?

"We think we are entitled to your interest and attention in the above."

There was no reply from Millspaugh to this. By the time it had reached the State Finance Department in Jefferson City, the directors of the trust company had decided to close their doors and so notified Millspaugh. He then sent an examiner to take charge, the first time an examiner ever had been in the trust company.

Prouty today said that if Attorney-General Otto had need for his testimony or any assistance he could give in the investigation of the Gorin bank transactions he would willingly give it.

DRUG PEDDLER GETS FIRST PAROLE UNDER FEDERAL LAW

Suspension of 4-Year Sentence Conditional on Future Good Behavior.

The first parole here, under the new Federal probationary parole act, approved by the President on March 4, was granted yesterday by Federal Judge Faris. Sam Tocco, 1134 North Seventh street, who was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary for peddling narcotics, on his plea of guilty three weeks ago, was the recipient.

Since his arrest Tocco has been of much assistance to narcotic agents in destroying a small ring of drug peddlers, but the day he came up for trial the chief agent was ill and could not intercede with the court. The parole is conditional on Tocco's keeping at work steadily and making a satisfactory, written report to the court monthly. He has been offered employment by Viviano Bros., spaghetti makers.

More Interest in Olive Street, First National Buys Mortgage Bonds

Negotiations for Corners, Reconstruction, New Building Plans and Bond Sale Are Features of Activity.

By Berry Moore.

Olive street, which is destined to attain greater importance with the widening of this thoroughfare under the provisions of the $87,000,000 bond issue, is challenging the attention of business interests and investors, to say nothing of speculators.

A plot 20x109 feet, with a three-story brick building at 1110 Olive street, was purchased yesterday by Albert Zwibelman. Negotiations were handled by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust through Roy Nobel, salesman. Consideration was not disclosed. Mrs. Carrie Steedman and Mrs. Eugenia Edmunds were the grantors in the transaction.

Zwibelman made the purchase as an investment with plans for replacing the present improvement with a taller and more modern structure.

Negotiations are being carried on for Olive street sites, both east and west of Twelfth boulevard, including several prominent corners. An attractively situated corner east of Twelfth boulevard is wanted for a pretentious theater for stage productions.

A 17-story office building for physicians recently was announced for the northwest corner of Fourteenth and Olive streets, while the southwest corner of Twelfth and Olive streets has been focusing the attention of both hotel and theater promoters, in view of its commanding situation.

$3,500,000 Bonds Purchased.

The First National Co. has demonstrated its faith in this section of the city by purchasing $3,500,000 of first mortgage serial gold bonds on the Century, Syndicate Trust and Annex buildings.

The bonds were executed by the Consolidated Investment Co., of which W. K. Bixby is president and W. J. Holbrook, secretary, and which holds title to the property. The other directors of the company are S. T. Bixby, J. D. Perry Francis, John Shepley, Allen T. West and James H. Grover. Capitalization is at $2,500,000.

The Syndicate Trust and Century buildings, 16 and 12 stories, respectively encompass the entire block from Olive to Locust and Ninth to Tenth streets. The annex consists of a 12-story building on the north side of Locust street, between Ninth and Tenth streets.

The buildings and ground covered by this mortgage are appraised at $7,685,000, more than twice the amount of the loan, while the net rental income from the buildings for 1924, available for interest charges, depreciation and Federal income taxes, was $502,525.32, according to the First National's published advertisement, offering the issue to investors.

The Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co., which also operates department stores in Columbus, O., and Denver, Colo., through subsidiaries, is the principal tenant of the three buildings.

Exemplifying his faith in this thoroughfare, Paul Brown, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., is virtually replacing the Odd Fellows' building at the southeast corner of Ninth and Olive streets, with a 11-story, steel frame, fireproof building.

The building will be new with the exception of the first story, comprising stores leased to tenants who refuse to surrender their quarters. The old structure already has been removed exclusive of the third, second and first stories.

Wade Engineered Deal.

Several years ago the Ely & Walker Co., increased its available working capital appreciably through the sale of its imposing group of connected buildings on Washington avenue and Locust street, at Sixteenth street. The buildings were acquired by Paul Brown through the Mercantile Trust Co.

'SMALL COST' APARTMENT ON VIEW IN PERSHING HEIGHTS

The "small cost" furnished apartment, which is being shown in Pershing Heights by the Davis Realty & Mortgage Co., has been visited by many persons since the formal opening two weeks ago. The exhibit was arranged under the supervision of Ross Crane, interior decorator.

Several of the plans on exhibition are now being carried out in actual construction in Pershing Heights and Davis Place.

The "small-cost" apartment is a demonstration of how a small apartment can be artistically furnished and arranged at a modest cost. The apartment has a living room, dining room, bedroom and kitchen. The apartment will be open today to the public from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m. and every afternoon this week from 2 to 6 p. m. COUNTRY CLUB COURT

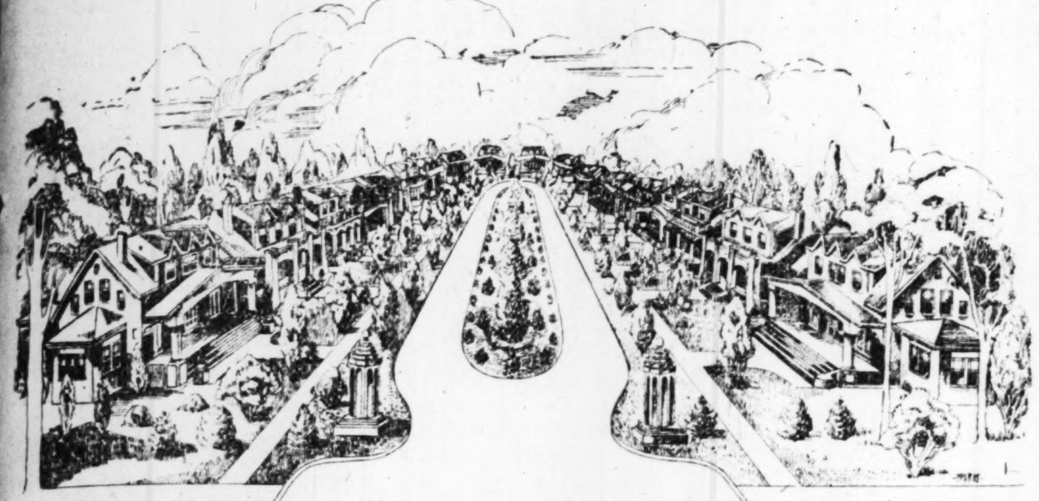
Hanley Road, One Block North of Wydown Boulevard



This beautiful Court will be improved with residences of superior quality only. No apartments. No flats. When completed it will consist of eighteen attractive homes grouped in horseshoe form around a concrete roadway which surrounds a park planted with evergreen trees and shrubbery. A number of these homes are now occupied by their owners; others are completed and ready for sale, some are in the course of construction, and will be completed in the very near future. Forty more houses will be built on ground adjacent to Country Club Court.

The homes in this Court have seven, eight and nine rooms, with sun rooms and large front and rear porches. They have every modern convenience; are beautifully decorated, have very attractive lighting fixtures, and are metal weatherstripped. The entire house is finished with Huttig's Satin Brand millwork.

These homes must be seen to be appreciated. They are today the best buy on the market. Don't fail to inspect these homes before buying or building. TO THE MANY DISAPPOINTED BUYERS.

I THANK YOU

for your words of encouragement and your anxiousness to await completion of plans for the erection of 10 more bungalows on the same street and appreciate your conviction that they will be equally as good and the same honest, substantial construction and can assure you there will be no miscarriage of the faith imposed, and I will reiterate that LIKE THE MARINERS OF OLD, BE GUIDED BY THE STARS,
FOLLOW THE CROWDS TO ☆ GANSS CREST HILL ☆

I THANK YOU

For your tolerance and patience in weighing the false and erroneous statements of some unscrupulous agents and profiteering builders and last but not least have demonstrated that I have delivered the property as represented.

Keeping Those Nest Eggs in Safe Baskets

IT'S an old, old story, that putting all of the eggs in one basket is not a safe procedure. Yet it is as good advice today as it ever was. And nowhere does it apply with greater force than in the matter of investments.

When you buy the First Mortgage Real Estate Notes of the Davis Realty and Mortgage Company you are putting your "nest eggs" in a "safe basket," an investment which is secured by modern income-producing property in West St. Louis. Also you are giving your money a chance to earn 6% interest from the start. Notes are sold in denominations of $50, $100, $250, $500 and $1000 and bear interest coupons payable every 6 months.

You will appreciate the advantage of this form of investment when you read the interesting booklet "SITTING IN WITH THE BUILDERS OF ST. LOUIS." We will be glad to mail it to you.

20 YEARS FOR MORMON JOE

Ute Indian Sentenced for Killing Jail Cell Mate.

By the Associated Press.

CORTEZ, Colo., April 4.—Mormon Joe, aged Ute Indian medicine man, pleaded guilty to second degree murder and was sentenced today by District Judge Searcy to 20 to 25 years in the State penitentiary for beating to death a Mexican prisoner, his cell mate in the county jail here.

Sheriff Cowlin of Montezuma County departed immediately for the penitentiary at Canon City with Mormon Joe. United States Marshal Schaffer of Durango departed for Rueblo with Plat Nay, Mormon Joe's son-in-law, who is charged with murder of his 18-day-old baby girl. Nay will appear before the Federal grand jury next Tuesday. Mormon Joe, held in the Montezuma County jail for Federal authorities following the alleged burial alive of the papoose, killed his cell mate because he taunted him for the barbaric practices that led to his arrest. The Mexican was beaten to death with a table leg by the Indian.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY FOR A FIELD MANAGER

A manufacturer of high-grade men's clothing is desirous of appointing a few experienced field managers in virgin territories; preferably with organized sales forces which can start at once selling the most sensational clothing line in America. Territorial protection is guaranteed.

No other clothing can equal this line—neither for economical price or honest value. A sales force will produce more business with these clothes, as the suit sells for only $14.85, yet embodies real tailoring, genuine suiting fabrics, good fit and up-to-date style. More appreciable value per dollar is built into these suits than any other line—that what makes it such a sensation—it sells easily because the value is so apparent. A large selection of fabrics enables every taste to be satisfied. Do not confuse this with ordinary advertised cheap clothing sold through specialty salesmen and now flooding the market.

The commissions paid are consistent to the other superior features of this super-clothing line. If you are the man we are seeking you may be assured that our representations have not been exaggerated. You and your entire sales force will make bigger profits with less resistance than it is possible to make with any other merchandise.

Applications will be treated in the strictest confidence, be given preferred attention and the courtesy of an acknowledgment is guaranteed. Address Dept. Y08, P. O. Box 1158, Chicago, Ill.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY FOR A FIELD MANAGER

A manufacturer of high-grade men's clothing is desirous of appointing a few experienced field managers in virgin territories; preferably with organized sales forces which can start at once selling the most sensational clothing line in America. Territorial protection is guaranteed.

No other clothing can equal this line—neither for economical price or honest value. A sales force will produce more business with these clothes, as the suit sells for only $14.85, yet embodies real tailoring, genuine suiting fabrics, good fit and up-to-date style. More appreciable value per dollar is built into these suits than any other line—that what makes it such a sensation—it sells easily because the value is so apparent. A large selection of fabrics enables every taste to be satisfied. Do not confuse this with ordinary advertised cheap clothing sold through specialty salesmen and now flooding the market.

The commissions paid are consistent to the other superior features of this super-clothing line. If you are the man we are seeking you may be assured that our representations have not been exaggerated. You and your entire sales force will make bigger profits with less resistance than it is possible to make with any other merchandise.

Applications will be treated in the strictest confidence, be given preferred attention and the courtesy of an acknowledgment is guaranteed. Address Dept. Y08, P. O. Box 1159, Chicago, Ill.

ST. CLAIR COUNTY MAY ABOLISH 2 BOARDS TO CUT EXPENSE

Supervisors Ask County Clerk to Submit Proposal to Voters; Would Save $35,000.

The St. Clair County Board of Supervisors at Belleville yesterday adopted a resolution asking the County Clerk to place on the ballot, at the next general election, a proposition to abolish the County Board of Assessors and Board of Review. Of the 58 members of the Board of Supervisors, 30 were present at the meeting and voted unanimously for the resolution.

The Board of Assessors and Board of Review were created by vote of the people in 1920, their duties being to check over and revise assessments on real estate and personal property. Recently these boards have been the object of considerable opposition because of the cost to taxpayers. At the meeting it was pointed out that maintenance of the five members of the assessors board at $2000 a year and the three members of the Board of Review at $1800, together with the salaries of assistants employed, totals $35,000 a year. Under the former plan each township of the county maintained its own assessor.

A resolution indorsing a bill now before the Illinois Legislature calling for the testing of all cattle in the State for tuberculosis also was adopted.

17-YEAR-OLD GRANITE CITY GIRL KILLED BY A TRAIN

Members of Crew Say She Was Sitting on Tracks—Had Been in Ill Health.

Miss Ella Orsey, 17-year-old Granite City girl, was killed yesterday morning by a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy freight train, after she had left the home of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fedorchak, Granite City, where she had been living temporarily.

According to the train crew, the girl was sitting on the tracks when she was struck and instantly killed. Miss Orsey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Orsey, informed police that their daughter had been in ill health for some time, and had been staying with the Fedorchaks, anticipating the change would improve her condition. At midnight she expressed a desire to return home, and was killed an hour later.

U. S. COURT TO CONVENE FOR WEEK AT CAIRO TOMORROW

The trial of George D. Rich, former bookkeeper and teller of the First National Bank at Mounds, Ill., who was indicted by the grand jury at Danville for embezzlement and falsification of the bank's books, is set for Thursday. The indictment charges Rich with having embezzled $6000.

LEGISLATURE TO WIND UP SESSION EARLY THIS WEEK

House and Senate Have Finally Passed 130 of 1250 Bills Introduced; 109 Have Reached Baker.

MOST OF THEM OF SLIGHT IMPORTANCE

Only One of Governor's 27 Measures Acepted; Many St. Louis Salary Bills Slumber in Senate.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 4.—Members of both houses of the Legislature are preparing to wind up the session of the Fifty-third General Assembly, probably Monday or Tuesday. Today was the eighty-eighth day of the session.

The Senate has passed all of the appropriation bills except one covering expenses of the Legislature, which is assured of passage. Most of the appropriation bills have been thrown into conference committees, through rejection by the House or Senate amendments cutting the appropriations to the bone. The conference committee reports probably will be ready for consideration by both houses Monday. The House, which first passed the bills, over-appropriated the anticipated revenue by $9,000,000.

Thus far the House and Senate have finally passed 130 of the approximately 1250 bills introduced. Of the number passed, 109 have reached the Governor. Gov. Baker has signed 12 and vetoed none.

Most of the bills passed are of slight importance from a State viewpoint, many of them being purely local measures affecting some one city or district.

One Outstanding Bill Passed.

Only one outstanding bill of State-wide importance, the workmen's compensation act, has been finally passed.

The bill establishing State control of motor bus lines is further enmeshed in difficulties through the House today refusing to adopt a conference committee report, drafted after the Senate had rejected House amendments which riddled the bill and filled it with inconsistencies. Another conference committee will be appointed to seek a compromise.

Gov. Baker's legislative program, carrying 27 bills proposing various consolidations of departments, abolishing other departments and increasing taxes, has failed. Only one of the 27 bills has been finally passed. That measure, placing a limit on the expenses that may be charged to the State by State employes on official business, was introduced by Representative Freeland of Taney County and indorsed by the Governor.

The Democratic majority in the Senate made good on its early session caucus agreement not to pass any tax-increase measures, without even having to pass on the Baker bills increasing the property levy, State income tax and corporation franchise tax. Disorganization in the Republican majority in the House, where the Baker bills were introduced, and inability of Republican leaders there to hold their members in line, killed the tax bills without them even coming to a vote. They were abandoned without being put up for passage in the House.

Salary Grab Measures Shelved.

While failing to pass the Governor's bills, despite his efforts to crack the administration lash over Republican leaders to get the bills to a vote, the House knocks down a Senate Democratic caucus bill putting teeth into the State income tax law. This was partly in reprisal for the Senate stand on the Baker tax bills. It was estimated that bill would have brought in $1,000,000 a year in income taxes now being loaded.

St. Louis representatives in the House sought strenuously to get general salary increases for "the boys back home," and pushed about 70 salary bills affecting St. Louis, through the House.

The Senate passed the St. Louis salary increase bill which now is in the Governor's hands, but the rest of the salary grab measures are slumbering in Senate committees.

Many of the St. Louis salary bills were referred to the Senate Committee on official salaries and fees. Senator James P. Whitecotton, the chairman, today said rigor mortis appeared to be settling on these bills and he did not believe they would live to get out on the Senate floor. St. Louis members of the House sponsoring the bills have been beating a trail to the Senate trying to get the bills out, but now declare they "are in the morgue."

Reform Bills Defeated.

A bill establishing a State tax exemption board, with powers restricted to St. Louis, St. Louis County, and Jackson County, was reported out of the Senate Municipal Corporations Committee yesterday, but was referred back to the committee. The bill is general in its terms, but is said to be designed particularly to permit an inquiry on real estate held by Washington University. It is slated to die in committee.

Many reform bills were introduced at this session, but most of them went down to defeat. St. Louis Bar Association bills designed to curb "ambulance chasing" lawyers, were cut to pieces and then shelved, as was a bill elevating the educational requirements and standards for a license to practice law.

The medical practices act, sought by the State Medical Association to "clean house" in the medical profession and to elevate standards is to die with the session. The House loaded it up with amendments not acceptable to authors of the bill. The bill originated in the Senate but the House amended it to exclude various classes of healers, and then rejected a conference committee report which recommended dropping these amendments.

Another measure to reform criminal procedure in the courts was amended until virtually all the provisions simplifying indictments, eliminating technical loopholes by which criminals often obtain reversals of convictions in the higher courts, and giving the State a more even chance to cope with the criminal, had been removed from the bill.

Measures Passed.

Among the bills passed and now in the hands of the Governor are the following measures:

Enabling a city to enter into an agreement with a common carrier, such as a street car railway, for service at cost. Under this plan the fare would be determined by the cost of operation, plus a return upon the utility's investment, subject to approval of the Public Service Commission.

Enabling county courts to acquire tracts for county parks.

Correcting defects in St. Louis County law governing registration of voters. Enabling St. Louis County to form incorporated sewer districts, which could issue bonds to pay for improvements.

Correcting defects in the law imposing a 2-cent a gallon tax on gasoline used for motor vehicle fuel, to block evasions of the tax.

Curbing powers of Probate Courts to remove executors of estates when will contests are filed, and to grant letters of administration to public administrators on securities held in Missouri for estate of nonresidents.

Another bill apt to be lost in the rush, with full knowledge by the legislators of its loss, is the antinepotism bill, which would put into effect an anti-nepotism amendment to the State Constitution, adopted in February, 1924, by vote of the people. This bill, prohibiting State and county officials from placing their relatives on the public payroll, has passed the House and is on the Senate calendar for passage.

WALES GIVEN WARM WELCOME IN AFRICA

Heir to British Throne Places Wreath and Replies to Official Addresses.

By the Associated Press.

BATHURST, GAMBIA, West Africa, April 4.—H. M. S. Repulse, with the Prince of Wales aboard, steamed up to within a few miles off this port this morning and threw out her anchor. The Governor's yacht brought the Prince ashore and it was a great day for Bathurst. This was the first landing of the heir to the throne since the Repulse left England March 28 on the long voyage to Africa and South America.

The town was bathed in sunlight and lavishly decorated; natives were in brilliant flowing robes, the predominant colors being blue and red. The great crowds included innumerable children and there was much handclapping, shouting and leaping. The waving of voluminous head coverings added to the novelty of the spectacle.

Pleased by Enthusiasm.

As the Prince's car approached the women in the crowds made sweeping movements, indicating their desire to clear the way for the royal visitor. One car moved in the direction of the cenotaph; this was the car that carried the Prince, and those assembled along the way broke through the guards, quite oblivious of the fact that other cars were following in the wake of the Prince's, and their drivers had to perform wondrous feats of skill, dodging amongst the jostling, shouting throngs of demonstrators.

The trip to the cenotaph was highly amusing because of the smiling natives, whose constant chatter sounded like machine gun fire, and the Prince was evidently pleased and amused at the native enthusiasm. Dignity and perfect silence, however, characterized the ceremony at the cenotaph, upon which the Prince placed a wreath.

Later the Prince held a levee at which the leading European and African inhabitants were present with the protectorate chiefs. He was given an enthusiastic ovation.

Native Blacks Loyal.

In an address of welcome the Governor recalled that this is the first visit the Prince of Wales has made to West Africa but English adventurers of the Elizabethan era made Gambia their base before the days of the Armada.

The Gambian native chiefs presented the Prince with a quaintly worded address breathing loyalty in every line.

"We are black; we cannot read or write English, but we are English," their tribute to the royal visitor concluded.

PLANS ATTACK ON DENIAL OF VOTE TO NEGROES IN SOUTH

Body for Advancement of Colored People to Start Fight on Texas' "White Primary Law."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has issued a statement announcing its intention to fight in Texas courts what it calls "the white primary law," which specifically debars negroes from voting in Democratic primaries."

The statement declared that this fight "will constitute the opening of a general attack upon disfranchisement of colored people in the South."

The legal test, the announcement says, will be made in a case styled Nixon versus Herndon, wherein, according to the statement, Dr. L. A. Nixon, of El Paso, was refused permission to vote in a primary election there under a Texas law quoted in the statement as specifying that "in no event shall a negro be eligible to participate in a Democratic primary election held in the State of Texas." The Federal District Court at El Paso has rendered a decision against Dr. Nixon and an appeal has been taken, the statement said.

The suit involves the question of the constitutionality of the Texas law and similar laws in other Southern States, according to the association's announcement.

ONLY FEW CHANGES EXPECTED WHEN BELGIANS VOTE TODAY

Premier Theunis to Retire and Cabinet Will Resign; Old Coalition Holds Power.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, April 4.—Tomorrow's parliamentary elections seem to promise only a few changes in the composition of the Chamber of Representatives and the Senate. There will be a new Government, however, for Premier Thunis and several of his ministers are determined to leave power and the Cabinet has announced its intention to resign tomorrow night.

The Catholics, who had 77 seats in the Chamber and 73 in the Senate, and the Liberals, who had 33 in the Chamber and 30 in the Senate, generally are expected to be returned to power, although there is some threat of strong gains by the Flemish extremists.

The Chamber, which at present numbers 186 seats, will add one deputy, as Eupen and Malmedy, recovered from Germany, will be represented for the first time. The Senate had 153 members. It is not expected that more than half a dozen seats will change hands. It is considered likely, however, that the Socialists will lose many votes to the Communists.

The prospect of the return to power of the present Catholic-Liberal coalition is based on the fact that this combination polled 1,125,000 votes in 1921, against 804,000 by all the other parties, coupled with the general belief that there will be no great changes.

Federal Prison Built For 1400 Houses 3185

Cots Placed in Corridors and Offices at Leavenworth in Attempt to Relieve Congestion—700 Apply for Paroles.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 4.—With the population of the Federal penitentiary more than double that provided for in the original planning of the prison 30 years ago, steps are under way to relieve the congestion, it was said today by prison authorities.

Luther C. White, newly appointed Superintendent of Federal Prison, will arrive here Monday to conduct a special Parole Board hearing, at which about 700 applications will be heard. These are applications of prisoners who would come before the board at the regular May hearing.

Since the close of the World War, the prison population has steadily been growing. In 1918 the population was 1600. Today, with the reception of 20 prisoners from San Francisco and four from Phoenix, Ariz., the count reached 3185, the highest number in the history of the institution. The prison, as originally planned, had capacity for 1400 prisoners. The dining hall seats 1220.

Crowding has been growing more acute during the last several months and now has reached the point where there is no place to turn. Cots have been placed in corridors, in offices and the next step will be to place cots on the second floor of the segregation ward. Meals are eaten in two shifts and then all cannot be accommodated in the dining room.

It is understood here that no more prisoners are being received at the Atlanta prison and the other at McNeal Island, Wash. With these prisons closed, all prisoners are being sent to Leavenworth. Several months ago about 80 military prisoners were transferred to the United States disciplinary barracks.

Since then more soldiers have been brought to prison and there now are 121 military prisoners. An effort is being made to have the Secretary of War order the transfer of these military prisoners to the disciplinary barracks, where there are 600 vacant cells.

Most of the prisoners brought here today were convicted of violating the Harrison drug act. It is this class of prisoners which is filling the Federal prisons to overflowing.

FURTHER IMPROVEMENT IN SECRETARY WEEKS' CONDITION

Head of War Department Expected to Be Back at Desk Within Week or 10 Days.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Secretary Weeks made further progress today in his fight against the attack of cerebral thrombosis he suffered last Wednesday and his doctors expressed the hope that he would be back at his desk at the War Department within a week or 10 days. Since publication yesterday of the nature of the Secretary's illness, his home has been deluged with inquiries from friends and messages of sympathy.

Weeks' progress toward recovery from the slight stroke which for a time deprived him of the use of his left arm has occasioned surprise among his physicians and the rapidity with which the effect of the clot is wearing off, coupled with the fact that the patient has not yet developed any condition of high pressure, have led the doctors to believe that he will not be long confined.

Because of this hopeful aspect the question of whether the war secretary will be able to continue at his Cabinet post is said not to have been taken up as yet. Unless an unexpected unfavorable condition develops, it is expected that a decision on this matter will be deferred until the secretary is ready to take it up on his own motion.

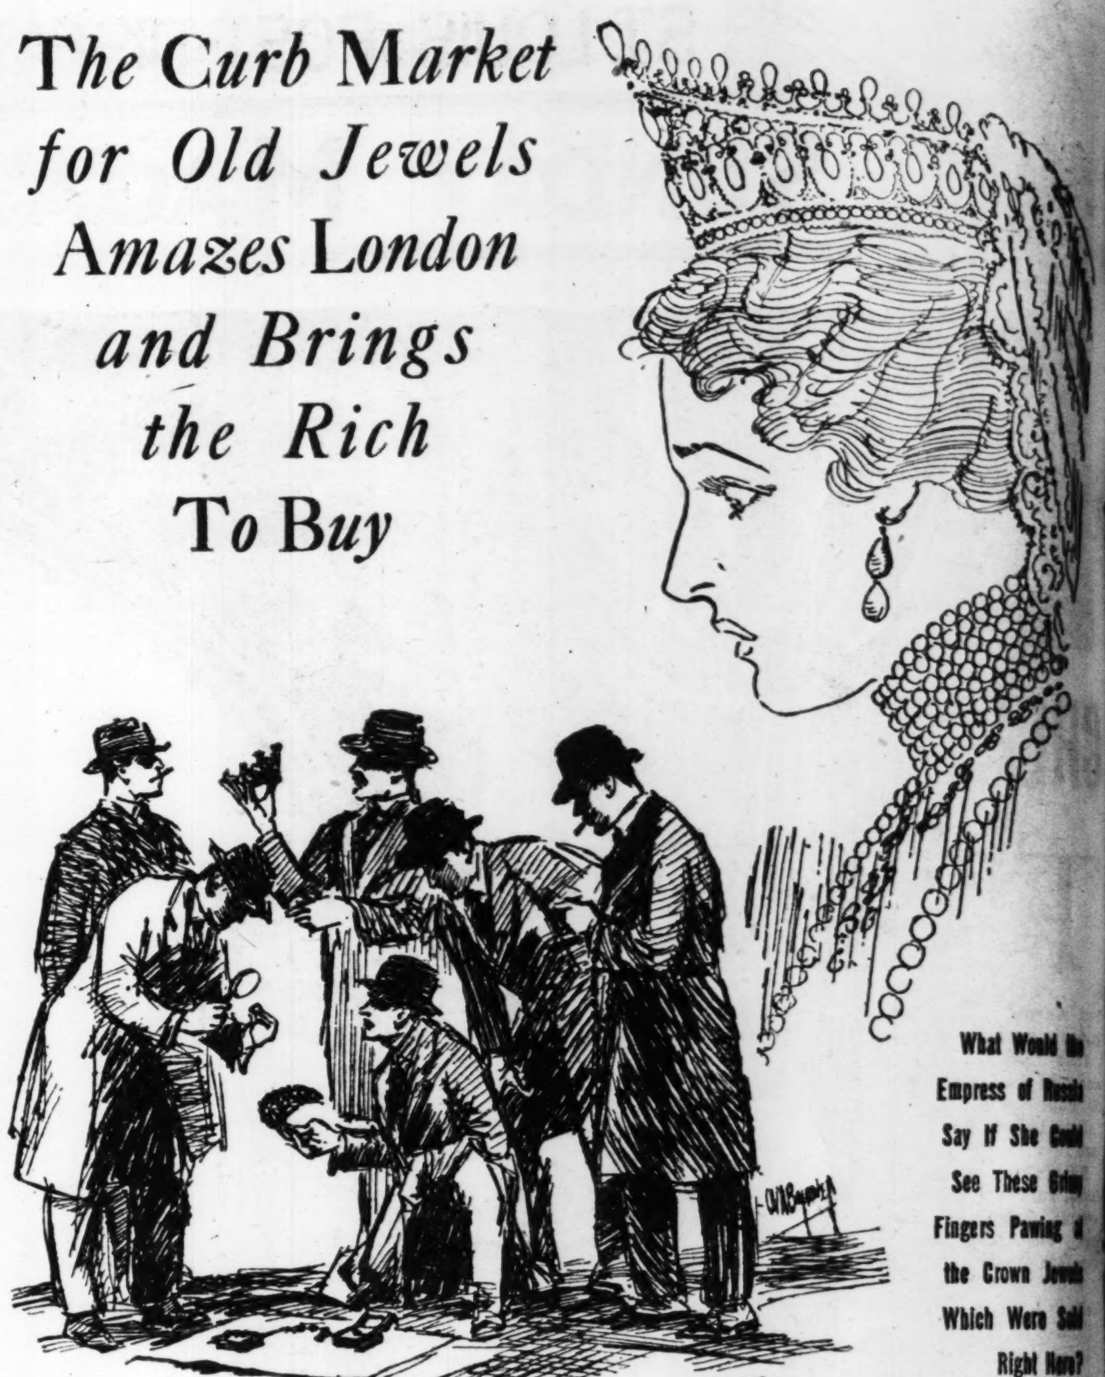
The Curb Market for Old Jewels Amazes London and Brings the Rich To Buy



What Would the Empress of Russia Say If She Could See These Grimy Fingers Pawing at the Crown Jewels Which Were Sold Right Here?

SHABBY little streets in the East End of London which, on Sundays, become curb markets for the disposal of quantities of precious stones, watches, strings of pearls and other jewelry.

Where costly trinkets are passed from hand to hand for inspection or displayed upon cloths spread on the ground.

Where most of the dealers look none too prosperous, but where diamond solitaires may be seen sparkling on grimy fingers and the pocket of a threadbare coat may contain several thousand dollars' worth of jewels.

Where transactions are closed in the doorways of houses, or in small neighboring cafes.

Where some of the Russian crown jewels, which blazed at magnificent ceremonies in palaces and cathedrals before being confiscated in the revolution, were sold recently amid these squalid surroundings.

Where the rule is, "No questions asked!" and where it is not customary to give receipts.

This is the picture of an odd industry in the British capital as it was described a few weeks ago at the trial of Joseph Betts, in the London Sessions Court, on charges of receiving stolen property. A jury found him guilty and he was sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

THE trial of Betts, and his laconic revelations as to jewelry markets in humdrum, obscure streets, received many columns of space in the London newspapers. The "cat" burglaries had been notorious. And the curiosity of Londoners was piqued at the disclosures of an odd institution which had endured for many years under their noses, but of which they never had heard.

Few of them even knew that there was such a street as Duke's Place—a drab-looking, narrow thoroughfare of no great length and lined with commonplace shops, taverns and dwellings.

"The goods are displayed, and it is a question of the highest bidder," Betts had testified at his trial. "Take Duke's Place. Even the crown jewels of Russia were sold there some months ago. There are at least 300 or 400 dealers there every Sunday. In summer I have seen as many as 1000 dealers there."

So, it became rather a fad for fashionable people on Sundays to visit the jewelry markets. Men and women drove up in costly motor cars, which were parked in little lanes around Houndsditch while their owners walked to the assemblage of dealers. The market actually is spread over three streets—Duke's Place, Bevis Marks and Creechurch lane, the latter well known to Dickens and mentioned in more than one of his books. But Duke's Place is the center of the industry

"The transactions take place in public houses or in doorways," Betts had testified. "Dealers put their goods on the ground, on cloths, or on stalls, so that anyone who wishes to purchase can examine the articles. It is not usual to get receipts."

The beginning of a good afternoon's business on the Jewel Curb in London.

JOE BETTS, King of Receivers, and Wolf of the Jewel Market.

LONDON reporters wrote colorful descriptions of the scene as expensively dressed visitors mingled with the motley throng of dealers, asking the prices, examining the valuables displayed, often in an unwashed hand or on a dirty cloth, and occasionally making a cautious purchase.

Some of the dealers sat in the barrooms of taverns, with their trays in front of them on tables. Soberly clad and spectacled, these merchants occasionally would remind the crowd clustered in front of the bar that "the old firm" was there and ready for business. Outside were other dealers, walking about or sitting on house steps or curb, with gold chains and strings of pearls hanging over their forearms and fingers bedecked with many rings. Women from the West End of London, richly gowned and befurred, did not enter the taverns, but patronized the men in the street and departed gaily. They had obtained what is dear to all feminine hearts—a bargain!

"Is Duke's Place a spot where you can buy things and no questions are asked?" inquired the prosecutor, at Bett's trial.

"Yes," replied Betts.

Many of the dealers, it was noted by newspaper observers, came in their cars. Most of them not particularly well dressed and some of them even shabby, they would produce from their pockets in the most casual way such things as studs at $100 a pair, bracelets and rings at prices ranging up to $250, and even a handful of unmounted precious stones. The bulk of the trading was between dealers. Even manufacturing jewelers were there.

"A RUM lot they are," was the comment of one habitue of the open-air market. "Some of them do not know how rich they are, and yet they will not give up the game. It's in the blood, I suppose. One old man retired, not long ago. He owns blocks of property and what not, but do you think he could keep away? He was soon back again, just like the retired theatrical star, selling with the rest of them."

Men who regularly attend this unique exchange admit that there are birds of passage among the dealers. They come, profit by one shady or thoroughly dishonest transaction, and go, to disappear from the Sunday-sparkling street forever. But many of the dealers have traded here for years, and their fathers before them. Most of them, according to an investigator for the Daily Chronicle, sell the real stuff—gold watches and chains, silver articles and pearls and diamonds beyond question. There are also perfectly legitimate sales of imitations of the genuine article.

John Ross, a reputable jewelry dealer, was put in the witness box during the trial of Betts.

"Do you agree that a good deal of stolen property changes hands in Hatton Garden and Duke's Place?" asked the prosecutor.

"I daresay," replied Ross.

One of the dealers slid a ring off his finger and handed it for inspection to a representative of the Daily Express. It looked like a good ring, but the price was nominal, less than $2.

"Take it," said the dealer, persuasively.

"I want a real crown jewel," demurred the visitor.

"Not 'ere, my child," replied the dealer, taking back his ring and slipping it on again with the others. "All bogey-bogey."

By which he meant that the visitor was talking to a vendor of imitations, and that for genuine jewels he must see one of the dealers at the open-air market who handled "real stuff." The incident

CHEATING TIME FROM BEHIND THE THROTTLE

By A. W. KING.

THIS is the story of the fastest run ever made by a five-car railroad train, as told to the Post-Dispatch by the engineer who did it—George A. Miller of Fort Wayne, Ind. The train was late, and in an effort to reach its destination on schedule time it sped from Fort Wayne to Chicago at a rate which, on downgrade, sometimes attained 90 miles an hour.

Time after time the train roared through towns along the way at a speed of 70 or 80 miles an hour. No stops were necessary for passengers or mail. "All we had to do," says Miller, "was to go to Chicago."

Miller himself states merely that it was the fastest run ever made on the division of the Pennsylvania Railroad between Fort Wayne and Chicago. The claim that it set a world's record comes from Gen. Charles G. Dawes, long a personal friend of Miller and now Vice President of the United States. In a campaign speech which Gen. Dawes delivered in Miller's home town, the candidate for Vice President alluded to the affair and said it was the fastest that a train of that size "ever has been run in the world."

On March 1 of this year Miller retired on a pension, after 44 years of service with the Pennsylvania Railroad. It was just in time for him and Mrs. Miller to attend the inauguration ceremonies in Washington as the guests of Vice President Dawes. During a three-day visit the quiet couple from Fort Wayne had special tickets and watched the President and Vice President take the oath of office, saw both branches of Congress at work, also the Supreme Court, and were guided through the White House.

THE summer of 1908 brought the day on which Miller established his record. The Pennsylvania Special, operating on an 18-hour schedule from New York to Chicago, reached Fort Wayne behind its regular time. Miller took the train for the final lap of 128 miles to Chicago, and pulled out of Fort Wayne 42 minutes late. Besides being the special pride of Pennsylvania officials, the train paid a rebate of $1 to passengers for every 55 minutes which it was late at Chicago. Thus there were reasons for making up almost three-quarters of an hour on a fast, nonstop trip scheduled to take three hours, lacking just one minute.

The engineer and fireman who brought the train into Fort Wayne had left Crestline, O., one hour late, and had made up 18 minutes of it.

"You've done pretty well," remarked Harry Tourgee, Miller's fireman, to the retiring engine crew. "We'll make up the rest of the time."

"No," replied the engineer, "you can't do it."

"Bet you a dollar we go into Chicago on time," persisted Tourgee. The offer was accepted.

The train started, and Miller turned to Tourgee, saying:

"You bit off a pretty big chunk, I'm afraid."

"The engine's hot," answered Tourgee. "Take it out of her. Get to Chicago on time."

ALL the conditions were favorable, says Miller, for this attempt to crowd still more speed out of what was ordinarily an exceptionally fast train. He had a good engine of the powerful Atlantic type and a competent fireman. The "blocks" into which the line is divided were clear. The weather was fine, and even the wind was helpful. Often, on the downgrade, the string of heavy Pullmans made a mile in 40 seconds.

At Sweeney Junction, only half a mile or so from Fort Wayne, the train went by like a whirlwind. There had been no delay in picking up speed. At Arcola, a hamlet some seven miles farther on, the train was going some 65 or 70 miles an hour, despite an upgrade which stretches all the way from Fort Wayne to a point three miles outside of Arcola.

Next, after 11 miles, was Columbia City, county seat of Whitley County and a good-sized, prosperous place. The train dashed through the town as though it had been a wheat field, at 75 miles an hour.

GEORGE A. MILLER—the modern Casey Jones of the roaring road. Vice-President Dawes claims Miller set a world's record.

Then came Larwill, a small town, eight miles from Columbia City, and at the top of what railroad men call a hill. The train was now doing only about 70 miles an hour, retarded by the upgrade. But a downgrade commences two miles beyond. The train "commenced picking up," in Miller's phrase, and boomed through Pierceton, three and one-half miles from Larwill, at a speed of 80 miles.

"We were getting there," says Miller.

LEST the reader should imagine that people in the towns and country districts recognized the train's extra dash of speed and gaped accordingly, it must be mentioned here that they did nothing of the kind. Only the railroad men along the way knew about the spurt. Onlookers at the stations were accustomed to see the limited whirl past as though disdainful of small towns. On this day it is doubtful if any of them marked a difference.

Neither, during the trip, were Miller and Tourgee bumped about in their engine cab as one imagines must be the case at speeds up to 90 miles an hour. "There was a little rocking," remarked Miller, "but we paid no attention to it."

Meanwhile, the tardy limited has been romping along the downgrade of six and one-half miles from Pierceton to Winona Lake, a pleasant summer resort which that day could have seen, if it would, heavy cars rushing past at a rate of 85 to 90 miles an hour. Then comes a level stretch of two miles to Warsaw, a fair-sized town, through which the train maintained a rate of 85 miles an hour.

Another six and one-half miles, in which some climbing was necessary, and the little town of Atwood had a chance to see what a train looks like when it has slowed down to 80 miles an hour. The upgrade continues four miles more to the village of Etna Green, where the speed was about 75 miles, and despite a little upgrade this was maintained for another four miles to the town of Bourbon.

Then level tracks permitted the train to do some "picking up." When another five miles devoured had brought it to the little town of Inwood, the speed was back to 80 miles an hour. Six miles more, and the limited exhibited not much more than its cowcatcher and its rear observation platform to Plymouth, largest town between Fort Wayne and Chicago on the Pennsylvania line. The town is in a hollow, and the favorable approaching grade had assisted in building the rate of progress up to 90 miles.

"I was going to Chicago," says Miller.

SEVEN miles more and the train passed through the little town of Donaldson, still going at a terrific gait. Another seven and one-half miles and the larger town of Hamlet seemed to fly at the train, pass it and twinkle behind.

At Inwood stands mile post No. 378, and at Hamlet is mile post No. 398. This 20 miles had been done in 15 minutes flat. Furthermore, two and one-half miles west of Donaldson is a mile post which marks a distance of 73 miles from the station of Fort Wayne. The train passed this mile post exactly one hour after the moment it had started from a standstill at Fort Wayne.

At Davis, which is six and one-half miles from Hamlet, it was necessary to slow down the train to 60 miles an hour, for taking on water. A long tank between the rails holds the water, into which the fast-moving train drops a scoop and the water runs up into the tank on the coal-tender. The tank on Miller's engine held 7000 gallons, and they filled it to overflowing.

Hanna, some three or four miles farther along, was passed at a speed of about 65 miles. Wanatah, another small town, six miles westward, was passed at 65 to 70 miles an hour. Here and at various places where other railroads crossed the Pennsylvania line, clear blocks showed Miller that he need not slacken speed. It is about nine miles from Wanatah to Valparaiso, three miles east of which a downgrade begins. The train's speed at Valparaiso was between 80 and 85 miles an hour.

Up crept the rate of speed. At Hobart, 10 1-2 miles farther on, it was between 85 and 87 miles. In the next three miles, to Liverpool, there is first a rise and then a downgrade. The rate at Liverpool was 87 miles, having in the meantime declined and been won back again. It was at Liverpool, and onward, that the operators began reporting the time of the train by seconds as well as minutes.

"I was bound to get there on time," says Miller.

AT GARY, three miles farther on, the speed was close to 90 miles. Neither here nor at other towns, large or small, was there any restriction imposed on the train's onward rush by its crossing of streets. Always it kept on at the full speed which other circumstances permitted.

The only intentional slowing down occurred at Toleston, a short distance west of Gary, where there is a crossing of the Michigan Central Railroad, and a train was on the crossing. The Pennsylvania train, for safety's sake, reduced its speed to about 35 miles an hour, so that the other might get out of its way.

"No, we didn't like to do it," commented Miller, "but by that time we felt pretty sure that we would go into Chicago on time."

Next was Clarke Junction, three miles from Toleston, by which time the train was making some 80 miles an hour. At Indiana Harbor, after another four miles, the speed was about 75 miles, which was maintained to the State line. Now, at last, the hurrying train was in Illinois and approaching her goal.

"It looked like we'd make it," says Miller.

SOUTH CHICAGO was reached, and the train slowed down to 70 miles, because of a Baltimore & Ohio crossing, then rolled on five miles more to Grand Crossing, where it slowed down again for a crossing of the Michigan Central. Next was Englewood, just seven miles from Union Station, Chicago, where the train stopped for passengers. It made another full stop at Sixteenth street for a railroad crossing, then proceeded a little more than a mile to Union Station and got there on the dot.

The train should have left Fort Wayne at [illegible] a. m., and really departed at [illegible] a. m. But it came to the end of its journey in the Union Station at the scheduled hour, which was [illegible]. In other words, the train had made up [illegible] minutes of time in the [illegible] miles.

"All the conditions were just right," says Miller, modestly. "Otherwise we wouldn't have made it."

CHEATING TIME FROM BEHIND THE THROTTLE

By A. W. KING.

THIS is the story of the fastest run ever made by a five-car railroad train, as told to the Post-Dispatch by the engineer who did it—George A. Miller of Fort Wayne, Ind. The train was late, and in an effort to reach its destination on schedule time it sped from Fort Wayne to Chicago at a rate which, on downgrade, sometimes attained 90 miles an hour.

Time after time the train roared through towns along the way at a speed of 70 or 80 miles an hour. No stops were necessary for passengers or mail. "All we had to do," says Miller, "was to go to Chicago."

Miller himself states merely that it was the fastest run ever made on the division of the Pennsylvania Railroad between Fort Wayne and Chicago. The claim that it set a world's record comes from Gen. Charles G. Dawes, long a personal friend of Miller and now Vice President of the United States. In a campaign speech which Gen. Dawes delivered in Miller's home town, the candidate for Vice President alluded to the affair and said it was the fastest that a train of that size "ever has been run in the world."

On March 1 of this year Miller retired on a pension, after 44 years of service with the Pennsylvania Railroad. It was just in time for him and Mrs. Miller to attend the inauguration ceremonies in Washington as the guests of Vice President Dawes. During a three-day visit the quiet couple from Fort Wayne had special tickets and watched the President and Vice President take the oath of office, saw both branches of Congress at work, also the Supreme Court, and were guided through the White House.

THE summer of 1908 brought the day on which Miller established his record. The Pennsylvania Special, operating on an 18-hour schedule from New York to Chicago, reached Fort Wayne behind its regular time. Miller took the train for the final lap of 128 miles to Chicago, and pulled out of Fort Wayne 42 minutes late. Besides being the special pride of Pennsylvania officials, the train paid a rebate of $1 to passengers for every 55 minutes which it was late at Chicago. Thus there were reasons for making up almost three-quarters of an hour on a fast, nonstop trip scheduled to take three hours, lacking just one minute.

The engineer and fireman who brought the train into Fort Wayne had left Crestline, O., one hour late, and had made up 18 minutes of it.

"You've done pretty well," remarked Harry Tourgee, Miller's fireman, to the retiring engine crew. "We'll make up the rest of the time."

"No," replied the engineer, "you can't do it."

"Bet you a dollar we go into Chicago on time," persisted Tourgee. The offer was accepted.

The train started, and Miller turned to Tourgee, saying:

"You bit off a pretty big chunk, I'm afraid."

"The engine's hot," answered Tourgee. "Take it out of her. Get to Chicago on time."

ALL the conditions were favorable, says Miller, for this attempt to crowd still more speed out of what was ordinarily an exceptionally fast train. He had a good engine of the powerful Atlantic type and a competent fireman. The "blocks" into which the line is divided were clear. The weather was fine, and even the wind was helpful. Often, on the downgrade, the string of heavy Pullmans made a mile in 40 seconds.

At Sweeney Junction, only half a mile or so from Fort Wayne, the train went by like a whirlwind. There had been no delay in picking up speed. At Arcola, a hamlet some seven miles farther on, the train was going some 65 or 70 miles an hour, despite an upgrade which stretches all the way from Fort Wayne to a point three miles outside of Arcola.

Next, after 11 miles, was Columbia City, county seat of Whitley County and a good-sized, prosperous place. The train dashed through the town as though it had been a wheat field, at 75 miles an hour.

GEORGE A. MILLER—the modern Casey Jones of the roaring road. Vice-President Dawes claims Miller set a world's record.

Then came Larwill, a small town, eight miles from Columbia City, and at the top of what railroad men call a hill. The train was now doing only about 70 miles an hour, retarded by the upgrade. But a downgrade commences two miles beyond. The train "commenced picking up," in Miller's phrase, and boomed through Pierceton, three and one-half miles from Larwill, at a speed of 80 miles.

"We were getting there," says Miller.

LEST the reader should imagine that people in the towns and country districts recognized the train's extra dash of speed and gaped accordingly, it must be mentioned here that they did nothing of the kind. Only the railroad men along the way knew about the spurt. Onlookers at the stations were accustomed to see the limited whirl past as though disdainful of small towns. On this day it is doubtful if any of them marked a difference.

Neither, during the trip, were Miller and Tourgee bumped about in their engine cab as one imagines must be the case at speeds up to 90 miles an hour. "There was a little rocking," remarked Miller, "but we paid no attention to it."

Meanwhile, the tardy limited has been romping along the downgrade of six and one-half miles from Pierceton to Winona Lake, a pleasant summer resort which that day could have seen, if it would, heavy cars rushing past at a rate of 85 to 90 miles an hour. Then comes a level stretch of two miles to Warsaw, a fair-sized town, through which the train maintained a rate of 85 miles an hour.

Another six and one-half miles, in which some climbing was necessary, and the little town of Atwood had a chance to see what a train looks like when it has slowed down to 80 miles an hour. The upgrade continues four miles more to the village of Etna Green, where the speed was about 75 miles, and despite a little upgrade this was maintained for another four miles to the town of Bourbon.

Then level tracks permitted the train to do some "picking up." When another five miles devoured had brought it to the little town of Inwood, the speed was back to 80 miles an hour. Six miles more, and the limited exhibited not much more than its cowcatcher and its rear observation platform to Plymouth, largest town between Fort Wayne and Chicago on the Pennsylvania line. The town is in a hollow, and the favorable approaching grade had assisted in building the rate of progress up to 90 miles.

"I was going to Chicago," says Miller.

SEVEN miles more and the train passed through the little town of Donaldson, still going at a terrific gait. Another seven and one-half miles and the larger town of Hamlet seemed to fly at the train, pass it and twinkle behind.

At Inwood stands mile post No. 378, and at Hamlet is mile post No. 398. This 20 miles had been done in 15 minutes flat. Furthermore, two and one-half miles west of Donaldson is a mile post which marks a distance of 73 miles from the station of Fort Wayne. The train passed this mile post exactly one hour after the moment it had started from a standstill at Fort Wayne.

At Davis, which is six and one-half miles from Hamlet, it was necessary to slow down the train to 60 miles an hour, for taking on water. A long tank between the rails holds the water, into which the fast-moving train drops a scoop and the water runs up into the tank on the coal-tender. The tank on Miller's engine held 7000 gallons, and they filled it to overflowing.

Hanna, some three or four miles farther along, was passed at a speed of about 65 miles. Wanatah, another small town, six miles westward, was passed at 65 to 70 miles an hour. Here and at various places where other railroads crossed the Pennsylvania line, clear blocks showed Miller that he need not slacken speed. It is about nine miles from Wanatah to Valparaiso, three miles east of which a downgrade begins. The train's speed at Valparaiso was between 80 and 85 miles an hour.

Up crept the rate of speed. At Hobart, 10 1-2 miles farther on, it was between 85 and 87 miles. In the next three miles, to Liverpool, there is first a rise and then a downgrade. The rate at Liverpool was 87 miles, having in the meantime declined and been won back again. It was at Liverpool, and onward, that the operators began reporting the time of the train by seconds as well as minutes.

"I was bound to get there on time," says Miller.

AT GARY, three miles farther on, the speed was close to 90 miles. Neither here nor at other towns, large or small, was there any restriction imposed on the train's onward rush by its crossing of streets. Always it kept on at the full speed which other circumstances permitted.

The only intentional slowing down occurred at Toleston, a short distance west of Gary, where there is a crossing of the Michigan Central Railroad, and a train was on the crossing. The Pennsylvania train, for safety's sake, reduced its speed to about 35 miles an hour, so that the other might get out of its way.

"No, we didn't like to do it," commented Miller, "but by that time we felt pretty sure that we would go into Chicago on time."

Next was Clarke Junction, three miles from Toleston, by which time the train was making some 80 miles an hour. At Indiana Harbor, after another four miles, the speed was about 75 miles, which was maintained to the State line. Now, at last, the hurrying train was in Illinois and approaching her goal.

"It looked like we'd make it," says Miller.

SOUTH CHICAGO was reached, and the train slowed down to 70 miles, because of a Baltimore & Ohio crossing, then rolled on five miles more to Grand Crossing, where it slowed down again for a crossing of the Michigan Central. Next was Englewood, just seven miles from Union Station, Chicago, where the train stopped for passengers. It made another full stop at Sixteenth street, for a railroad crossing, then proceeded a little more than a mile to Union Station and got there on the dot.

The train should have left Fort Wayne at 5:56 a. m., and really departed at 6:38 a. m. But it came to the end of its journey in the Union Station at the scheduled hour, which was 8:55 a. m. In other words, the train had made up 42 minutes of time in the 148 miles.

"All the conditions were just right," says Miller, modestly. "Otherwise we wouldn't have made it."

THE GAME: Drop the Handkerchief.
THE PLAYERS: Fate and a Child.
THE STAKES: Death to One Beautiful Woman and Happiness to Another.

By ELEANORE BROWNE.
(Noted Authority on Crimes and Criminals.)

A WOMAN'S handkerchief is a little, tender thing, yet it may sometimes hold many tears. It is so small that a woman's hand may hide it, but so big that it can destroy a romance, torture a soul and, even send police of many countries scurrying across continents; the very flutter of its fragile lace may be the signal for a bullet that ushers in both a happiness and a death.

It is Signor Sylvo Cassini, Superintendent of the Carabinerie of the Police Jurisdiction of Naples, who will verify all these things that may happen because of a woman's handkerchief. He will bring from his private files the very bit of lace of which he speaks, and a photograph, and a tiny derringer pistol, so small that the handkerchief will wrap around it.

"BECAUSE a woman dropped this little thing on the floor, where the moonlight might play upon it," Signor Cassini will explain, "and because I picked it with its four barrels—from this!"

"She was a very beautiful woman," the Signor Superintendent of the Carabinerie, the rifle-armed countryside police of Italy, continues. "That was one of my reflections, which had nothing whatever to do with my duties or my presence, that night, in the little customs house that stands on the Mentone road where it crosses the frontier from France into Italy. It is a lonely road, and after midnight there are few travelers going from France to Italy by car.

"This woman, who aroused my idle thought that she was beautiful, traveled in a great hurry. It was because her car drew up well after the proper hour for a woman to travel alone through the Alps at night that I observed her so closely, while the keeper of the customs house examined her papers. A fragrant night, with the perfumes of mimosa coming up from the gardens along the Mediterranean shore, and very quiet. At such a time even the fancies of a Carabineer may loiter with strange thoughts. I wondered if it might be a romance that was sending this young woman up the mountains in such haste. . . .

"When she dropped her handkerchief she did not observe it fall into a shaft of moonlight that stopped on its way down to the sea from over the Alps, to play about the floor. When I saw that she had not noticed it I went across the room to recover it for her.

"The handkerchief was, indeed, a very little thing, and of a lace arranged in most exquisite pattern. I marveled at the tenderness of it, and I marveled, too, that it seemed to arouse a memory. Now, the officer of the Italian Carabinerie is not one to have memories that are concerned with women's handkerchiefs. Such things are for those whose nights are spent in the bright places down the Mentone road, at San Remo, Nice and Ventimiglia. But I held the bit of lace in my fingers, struggling with this curious memory. The woman saw, and smiled up from her chair at me, and said: 'It is mine, Signor!' Then I remembered!

"AND it was then that I remarked as I put it into her hands: 'I was just considering, Signora, that even such a little thing as this may suddenly become of great importance.' She looked at me with something of fright in her eyes. And I looked at her, steadily, before I bowed and turned away. Just then the customs keeper, who had found her papers quite in order, gave her the passport and said: 'Benissimo! You may pass.'

"Quickly, when she had gone, I called for the record card on which she had signed her name. It was not the name I sought, and was of no concern. Then, also quickly, I demanded that the telephone be opened through to the headquarters of the Police Direction at Rome, and that the stations of the Carabinerie along the upper road to Turin and the lower road to Genoa be connected on the line. The woman had declared that she traveled up to Turin. It was possible that she might turn to Genoa at the mountain pass, a few miles up, where the road divides.

"'Describe to me,' I asked of Rome, 'the Baroness Ena Saroly, once of Austria, and her handkerchief!' . . .

"THEY are sometimes very slow at the headquarters of the Police Direction. I held the line an hour, as did other officers on duty along the roads, while Rome searched its files. Then, when the Baroness Saroly was described to me, and the pattern of the lace in her handkerchief was made plain to me, I knew my memory had not been wandering. 'Be of great haste!' I called out to the Carabinerie listening on the line. 'Observe a red car that speeds either to Turin or Genoa. Follow it to its destination and then hold the woman who descends. It will be the Baroness.'

"They saw the red car flash by and turn at the Col do Tenda, which is the place where the road divides, to Turin. An officer pursued on his motor cycle. And he followed the Baroness, just at dawn, into her house on the Plaza Dolores, in the shadow of the Cathedral of the Saints. Then he confronted her. When she knew that he was of the Carabinerie, she put this handkerchief to her eyes, to dry a sudden dampness there. And in the handkerchief was this—this very little pistol that holds four bullets. She took two of its four bits of soft lead into her heart before she toppled to the floor. When I arrived I was sad for the Baroness, who was, as I have said, very beautiful. But I was glad, also, that I had remembered the pattern of her handkerchief. For another woman, very pretty, too, and a mother, was made happy because I did."

THAT is how Signor Cassini, in his somber-toned office in Naples, tells of the happenings of that night between midnight and dawn. Of what went

"Suddenly the woman's arms folded about the little girl. In an instant both were in the car. And well on its way toward a mystery to puzzle all Europe.

before he tells more swiftly, moving not only from the frontier to Rome and Turin, but from Vienna to Marseilles, to Berlin and Rome and London, and to Lima, in Peru. It is a story that reaches strangely into the souls of women, and deals, in a most unpolicemanlike way, with amazing nuances of love.

WHEN the war was over the young and dashing Count Chanti, Austrian of Italian ancestry, left the battered fragments of his regiment to meet a problem more difficult to him than the reconstruction of his country was to the agencies of the new Government. Two women loved him—two beautiful young women who had waited for him to come home from the front. One of these he had loved when he marched out of Vienna with his comrades. When he marched back his heart had changed to the other. The first was the little Baroness Saroly who had been a childhood playmate. The other was a daughter of the people who had been a singer in the State Opera and who, like so many others of her rank, had done duty in the hospitals.

Count Chanti followed the dictates of his newer affections and married the girl who had been of the opera. It was a quiet wedding that seemed to hold no promise that, after awhile, the police of Europe and South America would be concerned with it.

The Baroness Saroly had been one of that gay Viennese company which more sober orders of society might term frivolous. She liked the cafes and the theater and merry rendezvous along the Ringestrasse. It might have been said of her that she was made to receive love, but not to give it. Be that as it may, she was seldom seen at the merry places after the marriage of her faithless fiance to the girl of the stage. She sold her inheritances and seldom appeared at social affairs. Her friends declared she would never recover her sprightliness.

THREE years later Count and Countess Chanti returned to their winter villa, on the outskirts of Marseilles in Southern France, to discover their servants in great excitement, terror looming in their faces and fright in their eyes. Also the police were in the drawing room, waiting. Little Elizabeth Mary, the future Countess, and the only daughter, had been stolen! A nursemaid and governess had taken the little one for a promenade along the sea boulevard as was the custom of every day. They had stopped at a marble fountain where Elizabeth Mary insisted upon feeding the gold fish in the great pool. An automobile, headed toward Cannes, drew up and stopped. A woman, heavily veiled, descended and, for a moment, watched the antics of the child and the fish. Suddenly the woman's arms folded around the little girl. In an instant both were in the car. When the nursemaid and governess comprehended what had occurred the car was disappearing down the boulevard, well on its way to Cannes.

A gendarme hurried up in response to the woman's screams. He made his notes for his superiors. At his feet, just where Elizabeth Mary had been gathered up by the stranger, the gendarme saw a handkerchief, a woman's, made of lace. He picked it up and put it into his pocket—his only clew!

THE young mother was frantic. Weeks, months, elapsed. The automobile was easily traced. Its driver was found. He reported that he had been engaged by the woman who wore the veil. She had explained that the child she was carrying away was her own. He had taken his hundred francs fee and asked no questions. He had deposited the woman at the railway station in Cannes and saw that she boarded the train. There all trace of her was lost.

Count Chanti enlisted the aid of every European police bureau. He spent his fortune in the search. His beautiful young wife hovered at the edge of reason in a sanitorium in Berlin, piteously calling aloud for Elizabeth Mary. When letters from her husband did not arrive and her questions could not be longer evaded, it was necessary to tell her that Count Chanti had died, suddenly, in Rome, where he had gone on some false hope and where he had succumbed at last to the grief that had broken him down. It was thought that the tottering mind of the young Countess would crumble instantly, but the effect was different. It called her back from the mental abyss, and she took up the search where her husband had laid it down.

As the estates of her husband left but little money the young Countess returned to the stage, not as an opera singer, but as a girl of the dancing chorus, so that she might go from city to city, wherever there was a Chief of Police who might help her. From Rome she procured the only clew the police had not definitely found useless—the dainty lace handkerchief. Always, this handkerchief had interested the police. It was of a pattern and a lace that were strange. Photographs of it had been sent to all the lace mills of Valenciennes, of Picardy and Malnes and even to Nottingham in England. No expert had recognized the pattern.

THEN there came to the Countess, who kept all police bureaus notified of her changes from theater to theater, city to city, a communication from Scotland Yard in London. The pattern of the handkerchief had been identified. A Police Chief from South America, Senor Joseph Crossilat of Lima, Peru, a visitor to Scotland Yard, had studied the photograph of the handkerchief and had remarked:

"That is of lace that is made in my country only —the weave that was handed down to us by the ancient Incas."

When Senor Crossilat returned to his capital the Countess Chanti accompanied him on the same steamer. She would find an engagement there, she said, and dance while the South American police sought a trace of that one handkerchief.

Spurred by the appeals of the distraught young mother and the urgings of the European police whose sympathies she had enlisted, Senor Crossilat called before him in his headquarters at Lima the most important of his country's makers of lace. One of them quickly pronounced the handkerchief a product of his own employes. It was one of the most expensive patterns and one that was seldom sold except to women who purchased them in quantities.

"It is the sort of accessory," the lace maker explained, "that our women adopt in pattern and make individual to themselves. The woman who purchased this one no doubt was of the fancy to possess many more and use them exclusively. And they are not, as a rule, exported. The buyer almost surely made her purchases here in Peru."

Weeks afterward there was a summons for the Countess Chanti, who was dancing at the Revue Espagnole, the gayest of the Lima theaters. Senor Crossilat had examined the records of the passports of all European visitors to Peru during the year before the theft of Elizabeth Mary. If the Countess would spend the time at his offices he would display for her the list he had made of the European women who had come and gone.

Far down the list, after many hours of poring over confusing names, the Countess saw an entry: "The Baroness Saroly."

There her finger halted. "When you have found for me the Baroness Saroly, who loved my husband, you will find Elizabeth Mary!" she exclaimed.

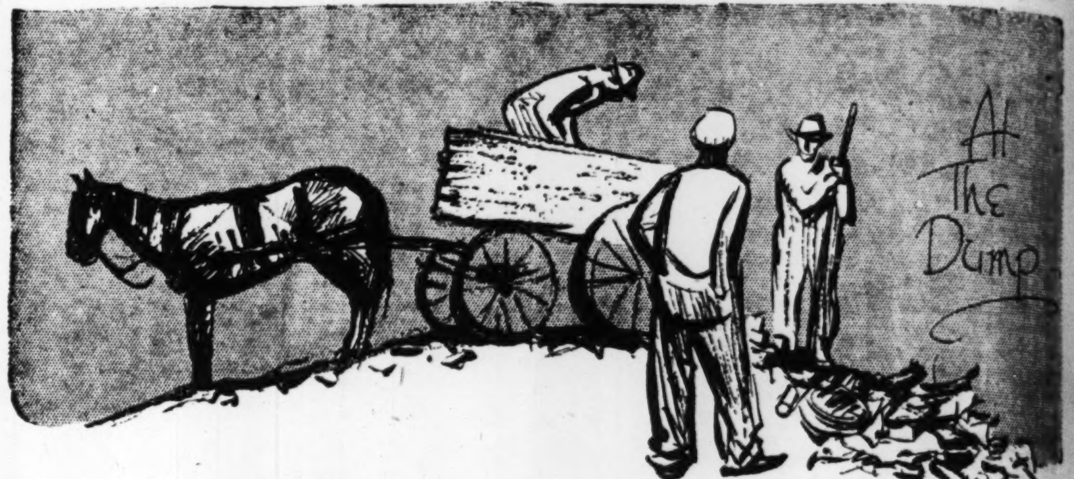
HERE Signor Cassini of the Carabinerie will remark: "A woman's intuition is a wonderful thing. It is like their love, unfathomable."

Rome, Vienna, Marseilles, Berlin joined eagerly in the hunt for the Baroness Saroly. Fragments of accusation swam together like the convergence of a whirlpool. The Baroness had gone from Vienna to a refuge with a family relative who had become established in Peru. There she had been restless, morbid, always wrapped in her regret for the lost lover of her girlhood. It was to her there that news came from a tactless friend of the birth of Elizabeth Mary. To her relative in Lima she had spoken often, the Lima police learned, of her yearning to hold the child of the man she had loved in her own arms. Then she returned to Europe—a few months before Elizabeth Mary was stolen.

So it was that the police of many countries, even the Carabinerie of Italy, were called upon to be ever on the watch for the beautiful Baroness and were reminded, also, of the handkerchief that had been dropped by the kidnaper at the marble pool along the boulevard outside Marseilles.

AND so it was that Signor Cassini was promoted to be Superintendent of all the Carabinerie of the Naples Jurisdiction because he marveled at the littleness of a woman's handkerchief when the bit of lace dropped into the moonlight on the floor of the wayside customs house at the Italian frontier. For the faithfulness of the memory that came back to him, then—of a similar handkerchief and the hunt for the Baroness—the Countess Chanti sought him out at his station and thanked him. Then she hurried to Turin to her reunion with Elizabeth Mary who was found in the house of the Baroness on Plaza Dolores and who had not forgotten her pretty young mother.

Main Street, St. Louis,



AND this," explained Andy, "is Main street."

Andy was our guide, philosopher and friend. Who could have been more friendly? And who more philosophical? As for guidance, Andy was the very owner of the dump.

"So this is Main street," we echoed. "Main street, St. Louis."

"And 4100 south," our guide added, smiling broadly. "That's what they call it. There's a Main street downtown, too. More imposing than this, maybe. But I bet there ain't such good neighbors there."

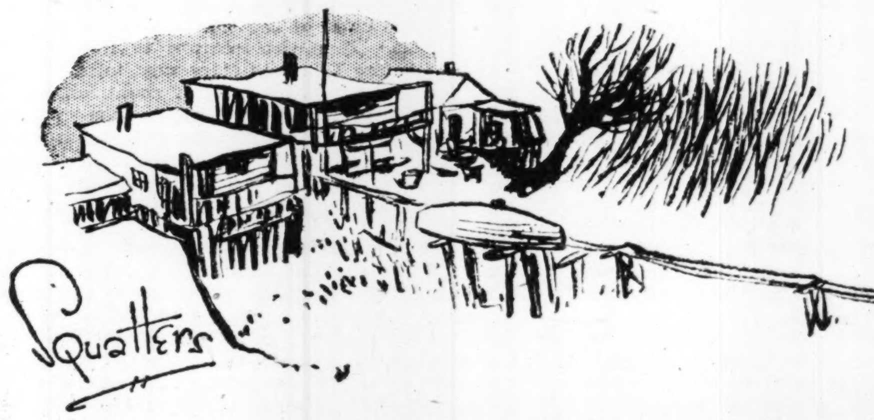
That, one thought, might easily be. Main street, downtown, has no neighbors save those diurnal transients who throng its quaint and picturesque old buildings through certain hours of each 24, making and buying and selling things in sufficient quantity to earn them their daily bread. Here was nothing imposing, save the crumbling old ruin of a Civil War mansion, perched like some old eagle on its aerie, high on a jutting cape of limestone bluff whence it looked down upon Main street, the dumps, reedy swamp lands and the broad tide of the Mississippi, gleaming in silver under the afternoon sun.

Andy's dump was a litter of clay and trash and ashes. With near by a pile of retrieved junk, old gas ranges, old water tanks and, strange survival into another age, a broken old cutter with bright red runners, in which the beaux of 30 years ago drove through merry winter evening by their fur-wrapped city belles. The things once useful, the stoves and ranges, the gutters and pipes, the tanks and old tubs, these things were old indeed. But the cutter, sitting there among its memories of joyous times, was young.

Andy picked up his curious implement, a digging fork bent into semblance of a rake, and crossed the dump to where, atop a heaped-up load of rubbish on a ramshackle old wagon, with wheels that threatened every moment to go in four directions, two languid negroes sat. The wagon was drawn by a big-boned, hammer-headed and woolly horse, black as its shining driver. And the tied-up, patchy harness was decorated as to bridle with a brilliant red rosette.

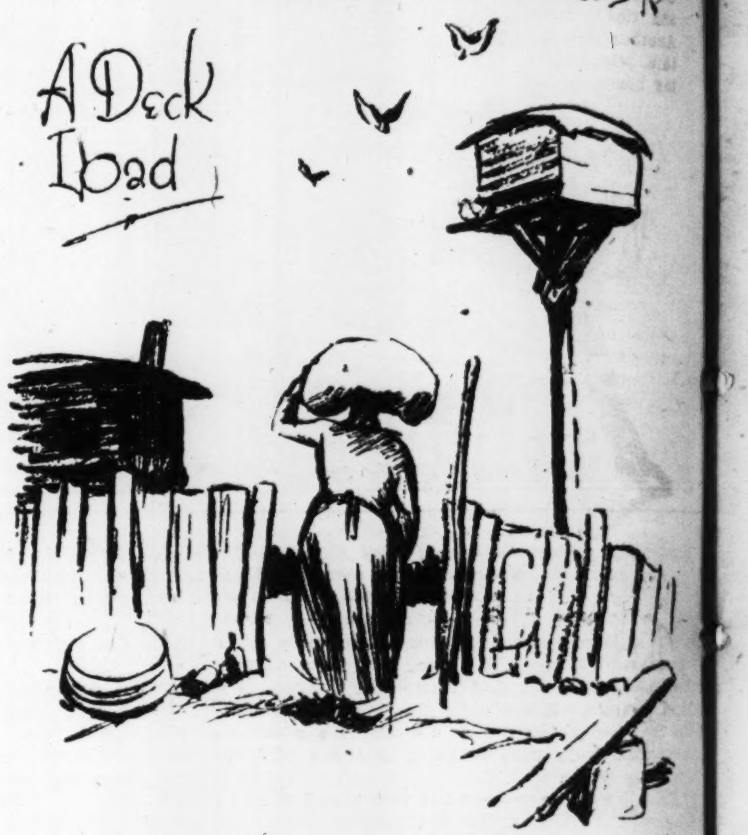
"That load," Andy was saying, "will be 15 cents. You pay before you dump."

An artist's eye had led us here to Main street. Artists aren't always what most folks think they are. Some of them would rather look at a junk-built cabin than the pretty girl of the magazine covers. Fitzpatrick is like that. He drove the car and I misdirected him along South Broadway and Marine avenue and some little cul-de-sacs of streets that ended nowhere, until we traveled back again to Broadway and then down Gasconade street, where we parked at the city dog pound. It was there at 4100 south, that we found Main street.



"LOOK at that color," said the artist. He pointed out the warm sooty browns of a weather-beaten and unpainted cabin. "And that! And that!" One was a bit of Neapolitan blue, such as the fisherfolk of San Francisco paint their boats. One was a scrap of flapping carpet which time and grime and sun had darkened into the ruby of old port wine. It was right for an artist to see these things. There might be color. There was also life. I recalled that a modern essayist had called his book "The Color of Life."

Here, indeed, was color. And form. A mad helter-skelter of both. Not the pink and drab of a West End apartment, but glorious colors from the ash heap of the world. Scraps and tatters of romance, and camaraderie, and brave and cheerful poverty. Form—crazy and drunken. Here was a pigeon house that looked as though built by a modernist sculptor evolving a monument to New York's skyline. A skyscraper of a pigeon house, constructed of odd pieces of scrap timber which had drifted down the river, or by cart onto the dump. It raised its three towers in antic postures, sheathed in scraps of roofing tin and opening to the world through crazy windows of whatever size or shape that had found their way through some decaying journey to the rubbish heap. Abjured of all men, they were treasure trove to Andy, for he had built his dove cote and had within, he told us, 100 pairs of pigeons.



"Yes, there's 200 pigeons on my place. And 11 collie dogs, and seven foxterriers. And I have some chickens and"——

His face was tanned and seamed like the cracked leather of an old shoe. His black hair was rapidly turning white. A purple and white stubble covered the bronzed and determined chin. The brown eyes were deep-set and had the look of piercing into far distances which is common to sailors and those who live out on the windy earth. A fast-graying mustache hid his upper lip. It was close-clipped, as a business man's, but it couldn't give to Andy that crisp, curt look which business men affect. The kindliness of his lower lip betrayed it. His muscular, thin body, in baggy, nondescript old clothes, and a battered and dirty hat completed the picture.

MAIN street has no color line. South of Andy's we learn this. For, while the artist is sketching his comrade spies a marble game. Players are two. A lanky, awkward white girl perhaps of 12, whose gingham dress of faded greenish plaid is trimmed in blue, and who wears tan shoes and stockings, for Main street's respectability will never tolerate your bare-kneed fashions. Her opponent is an impish negro lad of 9, in knickerbockers much too large, and where the strap is broken at one knee the leg hangs like an empty grain sack, flapping about his ankle. That doesn't interfere with play. He jumps and dances about her, trying to make her miss the shot she is attempting.

"Miss-iss-iss-iss-ippi!" he cries.

The girl, if one's boyhood memory is criterion, is expert. She has knuckled flat on the ground, and neither dance nor mystic cry can bother her.

"Plump!"

Her taw strikes his.

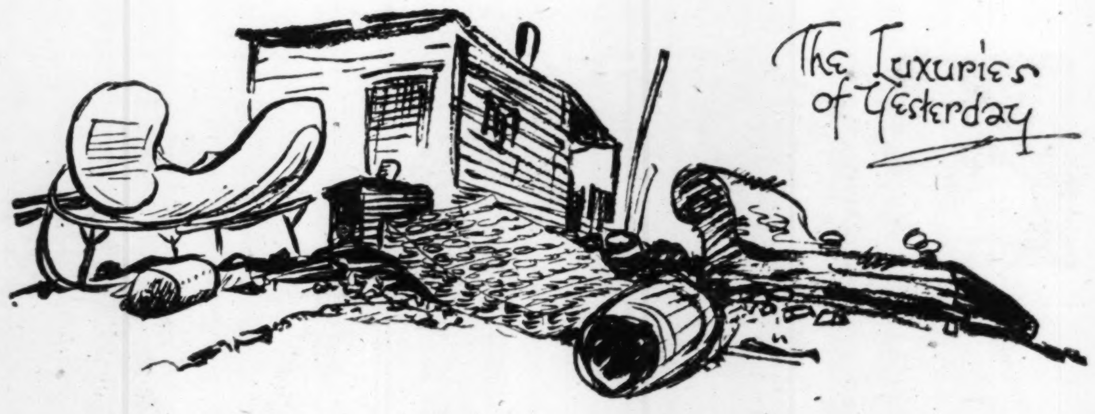
"Goodie! Goodie! Goodie!"

It's now her turn to dance.

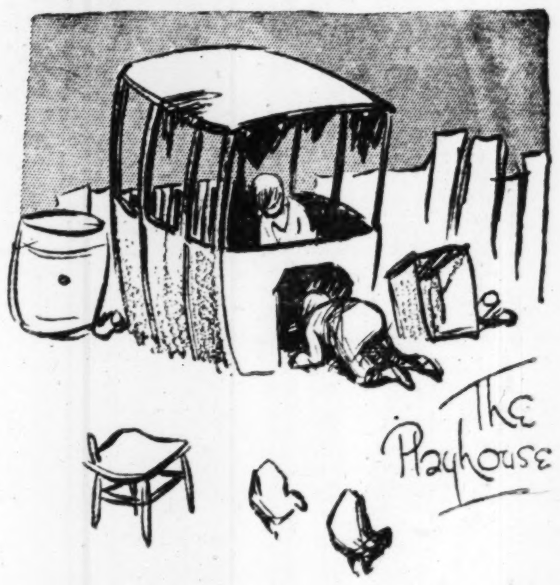
Two well-dressed white boys join the game. About them run two or three woolly headed picaninnies. One's middy blouse is trimmed in crimson and she wears a red plaid skirt. Another has blue coveralls, piped with vermillion. This neighborhood, with its reedy bottomlands, the brush-growth of cottonwood and willows, and the dumping grounds with their treasure-trove must be a paradise for children. What explorations and adventure there.

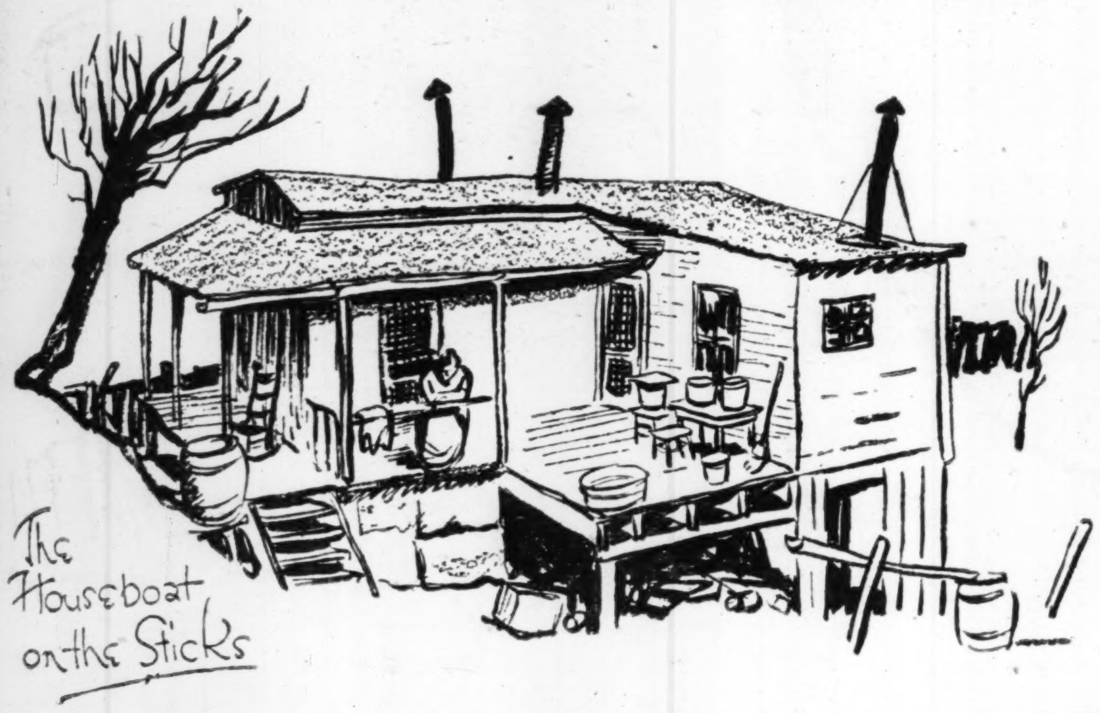
They play by a two-story house, constructed of up-ended planking, with battens to make tight the cracks between. Two galleries run across its narrow front. No paint has ever messed the beautiful warm brown of the weathered wood.

Perhaps that radio attennae, thrust up from the roof, is an old bedspring. It looks like it. Main street makes strange uses of abandoned bedsprings. One home is fenced in with them, placed end to end and tied together with odd pieces of baling wire. Another slightly unconventional fence is of those thin, wire-pierced boards used to make light packing boxes. Stood upright, with the wire ends tied together they give quite an air of privacy to one small garden which thus is set apart.



These sketches of the world we live in were done for the Post-Dispatch by Daniel R. Fitzpatrick and the story is by Harry R. Burke.





The Houseboat on the Sticks

MOST things, Main street can use. One indulgent father has provided for his kiddies a playhouse which is at once a domicile and a motor car.

The old body of a Ford coupe he has set up on the ground. The glass is gone. Perhaps it filled a sash for the house itself. But the body leaves the kids a house with doors and windows, and convertible at a moment's word into a rich and speedy limousine.

Over these dumps—there were none at Andy's—women wander, singly or by twos. One now brings home her plunder, a blue-black negress, possibly of 40 years. Upon her head is balanced the bundle of her gleaning, and her gait beneath that burden is almost queenly. One recalls tales by Lafcadio Hearn of the negro portresses of Martinique, and the regal carriage they develop. Where did she learn the trick, one wonders? Did her mother thus ballance a cotton basket back in slavery days?

Here's a strange bundle of a home. Outbuildings within a fence or corral made up of slats, pickets, shutters and strips of corrugated iron, and the whole bound together in its upper half with a sprawling and luxuriant grapevine. An old window screen, some sheets of tin, an empty picture frame of large dimensions, odd boards, a window sash—these have been woven into the texture of the building and roofed with paper and with scraps of tin, held down with odds and ends of lumber or with bits of rock. Where other materials fail is a strip of flapping carpet. A huge pile of old bottles, man-high, adjoins the shed. The yard is filled with gutters, spouting, water tanks, baskets, pans, tubs, crates, old chairs and a striped awning against the fence.

An old houseboat, perhaps, the house. It has the characteristic boxcar shape. Above the narrow eaves sits a plaster of paris bulldog which once was used to advertise cigars. A flagpole rises from the corner of the eaves, its lanyard flapping lazily from the brass ball which surmounts it. Quaint chimney pots are on the roof—tile shapes decorated in the fashion of the '80s, which came perhaps from some mansion of that day on Lindell, West Pine, Washington or Delmar boulevards. Slim saplings of cottonwood carry high the wires of an aerial. The front of the house is hung with market basket just above the door, with washtub, mop and oil mop. Within, betimes, one catches glimpse of sheer white tablecloth and bending over it a shining face of ebony.

From the dump, each with a basket, two women come. One is white. Above her gray skirt bags a blouse of dingy pink and a cheap gray sweater hangs shapelessly about her.

Her comrade is a negress, tricked out in Peter Thompson dress—much worn and shapeless, but still a Peter Thompson—and the blue, naval effect

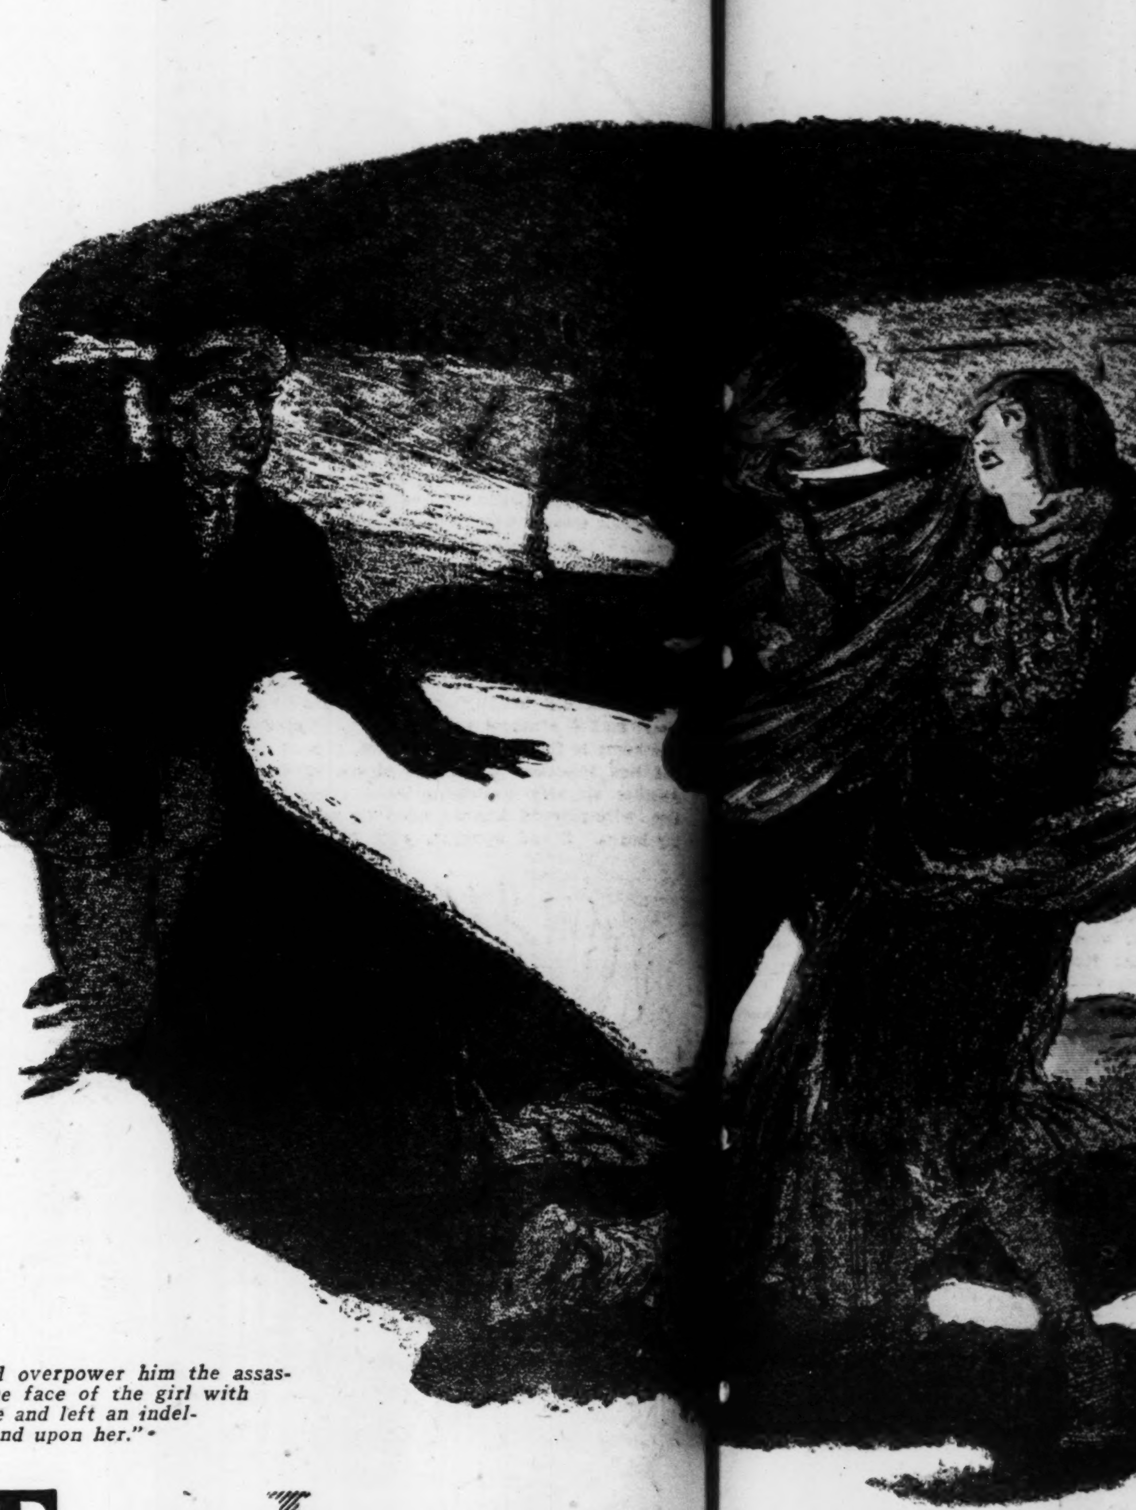
Mumtaz Begum, the Bombay dancing girl, who loved the Maharajah less and the young merchant more.



"Before Vickery could overpower him the assassin had slashed the face of the girl with his long knife and left an indelible brand upon her."

She Dared To Leave A Rajah For A Lover

By HARRY R. BURKE.

MODERN was the technic of those turbaned gunmen, come flying out of midnight in a racing car. Theirs were automatic pistols and they shot to kill. Death, however, was only incidental. They simply sought the Maharajah's favorite dancing girl. They tore her from the arms of her lover. That the lover was killed was but vengeance, according to the fashion of the potentates of the Far East. But that the dancing girl escaped them—that was the tragedy.

IT WAS by the Hanging Gardens on Malabar Hill, Bombay, and it was midnight. Surely—even if the threats of death pursued—Mumtaz Begum and her rich lover believed themselves safe with the curtains pulled in their automobile; with his secretary and his chauffeur as a bodyguard. . . .

But out of the night came another car rushing down the narrow and dim-lighted street. It crowded that of Abdul Kadir Bawla to the curbstone. Its flashing lights cut in ahead. It stopped. And from it first two men, and then four, leaped.

One smashed the window with a pistol barrel and stuck his head into the merchant's car. Then he fired and the ball, grazing the head of Abdul Kadir Bawla, left him for a moment dazed.

Indian tongues cursed foully, "Out with you, Oh, father of a dog."

Dazed, the merchant got out of his car. There followed him into the street the lovely Nautch girl for whom he had braved the Maharajah's anger; with whom he had lived for months under the threat of death . . . .

Then a dozen shots and he fell mortally wounded. Abdul Kadir Bawla, who had traded his life for the girl he loved, would not have repined. He was a Mohammedan, and a fatalist. It was Kismet—Fate.

FOUR British officers, wending homeward at midnight, came upon the scene. Lieut. Saegert wrestled with the man who first had fired, and fell himself with a bullet through his body. Lieutenant-Colonel Vickery grabbed the turbanned bandit who struggled with Mumtaz Begum, the dancing girl. Before Vickery could overpower him the assassin had slashed the face of the girl with his long knife and left an indelible brand upon her.

Cut, bleeding, and in nervous collapse, Mumtaz Begum was hurried to a hospital. On the way the automobile she was in was again attacked, but the second time the kidnapers were beaten off without fatality by the English officers and police.

Out of this midnight tragedy has come, now, a story that has rocked all India. The killing of Abdul Kadir Bawla of itself was a seven days' mystery. But it has developed into a national scandal now that the true story of jealousy and passionate revenge has been disclosed by the fact that among the kidnapers and assassins were a group of men highly prominent in the suite of the millionaire Maharajah of Indore.

EXCEPTING for automobiles and automatic pistols the story might have come from the Arabian Nights. The Indian Government wishes it had. It knows now that Mumtaz Begum was the favorite Nautch girl in the harem of the Maharajah. It has found that among those who attempted to take her from her lover were men high and close to that powerful native ruler. Police say they have to deal with cunning, unscrupulous and powerful hidden forces, secretly bound together, as by the ancient faith of Islam, to avenge the honor of a hereditary ruler whose favorite had been taken from him by a wealthy merchant. They speak of this mysterious group as "The Hidden Hand."

The Maharajah of Indore is rich and powerful, a great potentate among his people. And the Indian press now openly charges that a full investigation of the Malabar Hill affair may reveal a scandal of amazing proportions.

England in India does not want such a scandal. The situation was delicate enough when the notorious "Mr. A" of the London courts was revealed as Sir Harri Singh, Maharajah of Kashmir. A scandal involving the Maharajah of Indore might be even more troublesome.

but 18 now, this girl whose beauty has fraught with such fatality. To Western le more than a child. Four of those years in the purdah—the screened apartments aharajah's palace, which are reserved for avorites and women inmates of high rank. she lived, a beautiful, doll-loke plaything, rth to dance for the Maharajah's amusement when, hookah in hand, he seated himself on silken cushions awaiting to be entertained.

ger he killed—the Maharajah of Indore, with Mumtaz Begum, the dancing girl, drama of love and death, which has sed the entire British Empire.

From infancy the beautiful Mumtaz Begum had been trained as a dancer. She was 13 when she entered the court of Indore.

Her great soft eyes are black as sloes. Her nose is long and the nostrils delicately curved. Her lips are full and sensual but yet of Cupid's bow proportions.

The slimness of childhood was in the lithe body of the dancing girl, tiger-like in suppleness, leopard-like in grace.

FOR the Maharajah, as he sat upon his cushions while the punkahwallahs gently stirred their fans, Mumtaz danced the dance that Nautch girls dance—her wide silken skirts whirling to reveal twinkling glimpses of lithe legs trousered in cloth of gold, and tinkling bells upon her anklets. She danced, in her passionate abandon, as Salome may have danced before old Herod, and the Maharajah of Indore, though he did not pledge unto her the half his kingdom, showered gifts upon this new, delicious toy. She became at once his favorite.

Mumtaz Begum was surrounded with every luxury an Oriental potentate could give. The Maharajah gave her motor cars and a suite of personal servants. He hung about her bosom and on her arms and ankles jewels that were valued at a Prince's ransome.

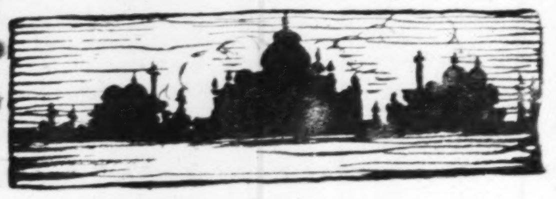
Those gifts of gold and precious stones were worth not less than £60,000—over $300,000.

And she was happy, for Mumtaz Begum was fulfilling her destiny. She would have been content had only the Prince paid some small attention to her.

However, thus marked as a favorite, she had won beyond her girlish dreams, success in the art to which she was born.

In the seclusion of the purdah the favorite is a power. She is the envied of the other women. She may lord it over dancers of less charm. And, like the beauty of the moon at full, her lord had described Mumtaz Begum's charm of feature. So she was content in this first year behind the walls where women must remain.

In 1921 the Maharajah of Indore planned a journey to England to pay a friendly visit to India's Emperor. With him went a retinue in silks and jewels from his pompous court. When Mumtaz Begum asked to go she was refused. Perhaps the jealousy of other women in the harem blocked her way. Some one had complained to the British Government that she was a minor. The order went forth that she must stay at home.



SHE danced that night—and her dance was her appeal, was her living prayer. The flashing of silken skirts, of hennaed toes, the subtle sensuosity of that leopard body in its graceful movement to the plaintive dancing tune — fascinated the Maharajah. It was as though the red-stained feet of Mumtaz Begum were dancing in rhythm to the pulsing of his heart.

She threw herself before him in exhaustion. "My Lord—a boon! I cannot stay without you here. I shall die if I am left behind."

"Light of my heart," he answered her. "You shall go."

He was not one lightly to be thwarted even in a whim. British officialdom closed its eyes to the little dancing maiden in his suite, for it's not in the higher statesmanship to insult a Rajah who brings a pledge of fealty from across the seas—not even if he also brings a dancing girl to while away a homesick hour.

So Mumtaz Begum saw the fairy cities of the West; London that to her was a dream of glory; Paris that flashed splendors of gown and gaiety of entertainment; strange cities of a world quite upside down, where women went about with faces all unveiled and lived and loved outside the shelter of the purdah.

THAT glimpse of the freedom of English women wrecked Mumtaz Begum's life within the purdah. Perhaps she was jealous of their liberty. Perhaps she loved those gowns of the Western world. Or it may have been that others in the prince's retinue found a way at last to disgrace the favorite who for a year or more had ruled in their seclusion.

Intrigues in India are a commonplace. Sir Richard Burton observed quite half a century ago the effect of the ways of the West upon the women of the Orient. "With civilization, which objects to the good old remedy, the sword, they become worse," he said. "Under English rule the evil has reached its acme because it goes unpunished. . . . It was the same in Sind; when husbands were assured they would be hanged for cutting down unfaithful wives at once the women broke loose."

But Mumtaz Begum was still a child. And in Bombay, visiting the Bazar to choose a sari from

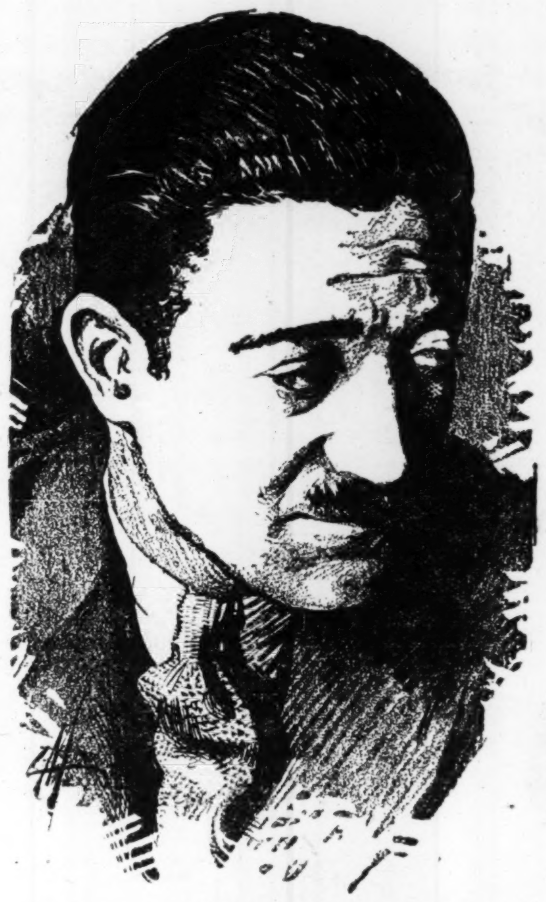
MICHAEL ARLEN



—Drawn for the Post-Dispatch by Carlisle S. Martin.

MICHAEL ARLEN—most popular of contemporary English story tellers—is an Armenian become British.

ONE night we were at a party, George Tarlyon and I, and there were also present some other people. It was not, however, a good party, and we left it before 11 o'clock.

We walked up Park Lane aimlessly, for we knew not what to do nor whither to go. We were further elated by the fact that we could sum up only one cigarette between us.

I suggested that one might do worse than go to bed, but Tarlyon said it was too early for that. "It is never too early," I said morosely, "to go to bed."

"Pah!" said Tarlyon, and so we walked down Park Lane.

And suddenly Tarlyon gripped my arm, and waved his stick and whispered—

"Look at that! Ralph, just look at that!"

Ten yards or so ahead of us loomed the back of a giant. He was striding on with huge steps, a black cloak was flung about him, and he wore no hat. Maybe it was the cloak, swaying this way and that, and one end flapping over a shoulder, that made the man seem taller than he really was—but it was a colossal back.

"It's reminiscent," Tarlyon murmured. "I can't help feeling about that back—it's reminiscent."

"It's reminiscent," I whispered, "of a back I once lent money to. One hundred pounds it was." . . .

We quickened our pace. The huge figure passed under the light of a lamp, and the light fell on his bare head, and his hair flamed up like a fire.

The huge figure, the arrogant walk, the flaming ginger hair. . . .

"Red Antony!" I murmured.

"AND we thought he was dead!" muttered Tarlyon—as though Red Antony could have died without the noise of his death-rattle confounding the thunder of the guns that killed many better men! Could a man who lived so noisily die as other men And yet, because the lean years of peace had passed without sign of him, we had believed the rumor that had it that Sir Antony Poole had risen to be Sergeant in a Canadian storm battlion and had then died; which had seemed natural in a kind of way, for the worst German shot, couldn't, one thought have consistently missed six-foot-four under a crown of flaming hair.

If there was a man who did not know, or know of, Antony Poole in the careless years before the war, then there must have been something the matter with his eyes or ears. For Red Antony was a famous sight in every crowded place in London, and achieved considerable nonentity as the noisest and worst-tempered rascal since Fighting Fitzgerald of the Regency.

He crashed, did Antony, in furious idiocy from row to row and roguery to roguery, so that the day inevitably came when no decent man or woman would be seen speaking to the man. Oh, a calamitous pair, the brothers Poole! For one night his brother, the Great Sir Roger, brilliant and sardonic Roger, dark and successful Roger, good sportsman and lovable fellow—one night our Roger put a bullet through his head, and at the inquest the amazed world heard that he had done this unbelievable thing because the police were hammering at the door with a warrant for his arrest on a charge of fraud.

This we, his friends, did not believe. The police may have been hammering at the door, we said, but the police are notoriously promiscuous about the doors they hammer at. "Fraud be damned in connection with Roger Poole!"—that is what we said. Why, he was fine, that Roger—fine! Thus we mourned him, once the wealthiest and wittiest of our company, and we defended his memory against the few who dared impugn it. But the disappearance of the red giant who was now Sir Antony Poole we did not mourn, for from the day of the inquest, at which he broke down and wept like a stricken child, he had not been seen in London until this night in Park Lane.

"GO quietly," Tarlyon restrained me. "We'll teach Red Antony to walk up Park Lane without a hat."

Gently we approached, one on each side of the colossal back.

"Oi!" we cried.

A wrench, and he faced us. We are tall, but we were as children beneath him.

"Oi to you!" snarled Antony. "Who the blazes are you, anyway?" And the great red expanse given to Antony for a face surveyed us intolerantly. Never what you might call an easy-tempered man, Red Antony.

"We be friends," said Tarlyon somberly.

"That's uncommonly original of you," drawled Antony. "I didn't know I had any." And he pretended not to recognize us—for Antony must always act, always play cussed.

"You haven't," Tarlyon grinned. "But mine was just a manner of speaking." He knew his man; and there passed over Red Antony's face that earthquake and tornado which was given him for a smile and a laugh.

THIS is the first of a series of four brilliant stories by Michael Arlen to be published in this Magazine. Master of a style which is reminiscent of Oscar Wilde, Arlen tells his stories with the same twists and surprises of plot that made O. Henry famous.

"Hell! Always the same Tarlyon! How are you, George?"

"Monstrous," says George.

"But there is no sensation in matter," boomed Red Antony, crushing his hand.

"And this," said Tarlyon, waving his other toward me, "and this, Sir Antony, is your old friend Ralph Wyndham Trevor, whom you may quite have forgotten, since you owe him a hundred pounds."

Another earthquake across that vast red expanse.

"Dear old Trevor—fancy having kept you waiting all this time! Here you are, man, here you are." And from somewhere inside his cloak he jerked a pocketbook into my hand and crushed it against my palm. "You can keep the change, old boy, as you're younger than I am and look as though you need

"Impoverished nothing!" he boomed, and sw on Tarlyon, who backed a step. "D'you remem George, that Roger always said I had a flair making money——"

"There, there!" I soothed him. "And we thou the little man was dead!"

Bother the man! He simply had to make a sc each time he opened his mouth. The policeman w had talked Vine Street to us approached.

"You are no doubt reserved for a more terri end," said Tarlyon.

Blessed if the man didn't wilt! That roari giant—he wilted.

"Don't say that, George," he begged hoarsely. "I a fool remark to make, that. You didn't mea did you?" And he put the question seriously! gaped at him.

"He was only being funny," I explai "He tries his best. . . ."

"I wish you well, Antony," said Tarly out of his surprise.

"God, I need it," Antony growled, surp ingly.

And then I laughed—remembering Antony's old way of acting cussed, just surprise and annoy. But as I laughed, A tony looked at me with furious, hagg eyes, and I stopped laughing.

"What's the matter, old Antony?" Tarly asked, kindly. "You've changed enormo ly. . . ."

"How have I changed?" snapped Anto He hated kindness. He thought he was ing pitied.

"You look a bit worn, old boy, that's a said George lightly.

"If it comes to that, you aren't the you were, what with war, wine and women

"Talking of wine," I thought to say, " always understood that you'd die of dri Antony. That's probably what George mea when he said you looked worn."

I wished I had kept my mouth shut. H eyes blazed over me . . . but he restrained himsel and Antony's "restraint" was a portentous busin —it made a noise like a fast car with the brak jammed on.

"Drink!" he said sharply. "I drink nothing speak of nowadays. I do not wish," he went "that you should think me irresponsible throu excess of stimulant. The things that are happeni to me are not happening through drink, and y must bear that in mind. I am saner than a man, though I can hear and see and smell thin that a sane man would die of. . . ."

TARLYON looked at me meaningly. Ant seemed to have forgotten us. Tarlyon took arm.

"We can't stay here all night," he said. "Let now leave Park Lane in a body and go to my h . . . ."

Antony woke up; he threw back his head a howled: "Taxi!"

Death—An

"All right, sir, all right," said the policeman who stood near us, gently. "You don't need to shout like that." That was a brave policeman.

"I insist on shouting," boomed Antony. "Taxi!"

And, thankfully, a taxi appeared from Mount street, for Red Antony and the police never did mix well. He once arrested two policemen for loitering and took them to Vine street. . . .

Antony flung open the door. A clock began the lengthy job of striking 11 o'clock.

"We will go to my house," said Antony. "I have a charming house, and an appointment to keep in it. Jump in." We jumped in, and we heard him give the driver the address of a house in Regent's Park. How often had we not directed taxis to that house! Tarlyon whistled.

"So you've got Roger's old house!" he murmured.

"I don't see," snapped Antony, "why you should gape about it. Getting back to England four months ago, I found the old house empty, and took it. It seems natural enough."

"I never said it wasn't," Tarlyon murmured. But he thought it wasn't, and so did I. A brother, on coming back to civilization after many years' absence, does not immediately leap into the house in which his elder brother blew his brains out—anyway, I wouldn't.

The taxi twisted through the gates, round the little drive, and to the great door. An odd feeling it was, to stand in front of that door after nine years—but now we faced a house black and still where once had been a house of shining windows, gay with music and the laughter of the most brilliant company in London.

We told the driver to wait, and followed Antony in. We stood still in the pitch-black hall until he should switch on the light, and in the blaze of light in which the cloaked figure faced us I instantly understood what Tarlyon had meant when he said that Antony had "changed." I can only describe the change by saying that the structure of his face seemed to have fallen into disrepair; its brick-red complexion of old had dwindled to a faint pink, so that any ordinary face would have been a ghastly white; and he looked worn with more than the usual wear of passing years. But the wild eyes were still wild, and uncommonly fine he looked as he faced us in the somber hall, the huge dandy in the black cloak with the head of flaming hair brushed immaculately back.

He smiled at us with that sudden charm for which women had forgiven him much—too much; he flung out an arm in the grand manner.

"Welcome to the old house," he said. "And for heaven's sake try to look as though you didn't miss Roger."

But the magic of Roger Poole was not, I thought, in the place; the house was now but a shell for a noisy man.

"CHAMPAGNE is indicated," said Antony; and that indication led us to the dining-room—a long, oak-panelled room at the back of the house. The curtains were not drawn across the two French windows, which gave out to a lawn sloping carelessly down to the water of Regent's Park; and in the second in which Antony fumbled for the electric switch the dark shapes of the trees looked like the van of an impenetrable forest. But dark shapes of trees always look more or less like that.

"Didn't you say something about an appointment?" Tarlyon asked vaguely, as Antony ravished the wire off a bottle.

"Did I?" He looked up at us from his business, very thoughtfully. "Oh, did I?"

"Pop!" said the champagne cork.

We drank, and Antony looked at his wrist watch.

"Damn!" he said. "It's stopped."

"The time being just 11:25," I helped him.

"Thanks," said Antony, very mild,

"I hate to take money from an impoverished aronet," I got in, just to goad him.

"Impoverished nothing!" he boomed, and swung on Tarlyon, who backed a step. "D'you remember, George, that Roger always said I had a flair for making money——"

"But he added," Tarlyon said, "that you hadn't got the brain of a louse to back that flair up with."

BOOMED Antony: "I have studied the ways of lice for five years on end, and must inform you, George, that my brain, though moth-eaten, is c tainly superior. I have made mints of money. I am fat with money. I roll in money. . . ." He was working himself up into that state of chronic excitement in which he might twist the lamp-post. Breakable or twistable things had always a fascination for Red Antony.

"There, there!" I soothed him. "And we thought the little man was dead!"

"There, there!" said George. "Did he make money, now! And we thought he was lying in some forgotten foreign field with a German bullet in his heart."

Bother the man! He simply had to make a noise each time he opened his mouth. The policeman who had talked Vine Street to us approached.

"Dead! Me dead!" And the sweep of his arm flung wide his cloak, and indeed he looked a mighty man of wrath. "As though a Prooshian bullet could kill me!"

"You are no doubt reserved for a more terrible end," said Tarlyon.

Blessed if the man didn't wilt! That roaring giant—he wilted.

"Don't say that, George," he begged hoarsely. "It's a fool remark to make, that. You didn't mean it, did you?" And he put the question seriously! We gaped at him.

"He was only being funny," I explained. "He tries his best. . . ."

"I wish you well, Antony," said Tarlyon, out of his surprise.

"God, I need it," Antony growled, surprisingly.

And then I laughed—remembering Red Antony's old way of acting cussed, just to surprise and annoy. But as I laughed, Antony looked at me with furious, haggard eyes, and I stopped laughing.

"What's the matter, old Antony?" Tarlyon asked, kindly. "You've changed enormously. . . ."

"How have I changed?" snapped Antony. He hated kindness. He thought he was being pitied.

"You look a bit worn, old boy, that's all," said George lightly.

"If it comes to that, you aren't the man you were, what with war, wine and women!"

"Talking of wine," I thought to say, "one always understood that you'd die of drink, Antony. That's probably what George meant when he said you looked worn."

I wished I had kept my mouth shut. His eyes blazed over me . . . but he restrained himself; and Antony's "restraint" was a portentous business—it made a noise like a fast car with the brakes jammed on.

"Drink!" he said sharply. "I drink nothing to speak of nowadays. I do not wish," he went on, "that you should think me irresponsible through excess of stimulant. The things that are happening to me are not happening through drink, and you must bear that in mind. I am saner than a sane man, though I can hear and see and smell things that a sane man would die of. . . ."

TARLYON looked at me meaningly. Antony seemed to have forgotten us. Tarlyon took his arm.

"We can't stay here all night," he said. "Let us now leave Park Lane in a body and go to my house . . . ."

Antony woke up; he threw back his head and howled: "Taxi!"

Death—And Red Antony's Creole Bride

"All right, sir, all right," said the policeman who stood near us, gently. "You don't need to shout like that." That was a brave policeman.

"I insist on shouting," boomed Antony. "Taxi!"

And, thankfully, a taxi appeared from Mount street, for Red Antony and the police never did mix well. He once arrested two policemen for loitering and took them to Vine street. . . .

Antony flung open the door. A clock began the lengthy job of striking 11 o'clock.

"We will go to my house," said Antony. "I have a charming house, and an appointment to keep in it. Jump in." We jumped in, and we heard him give the driver the address of a house in Regent's Park. How often had we not directed taxis to that house! Tarlyon whistled.

"So you've got Roger's old house!" he murmured.

"I don't see," snapped Antony, "why you should gape about it. Getting back to England four months ago, I found the old house empty, and took it. It seems natural enough."

"I never said it wasn't," Tarlyon murmured. But he thought it wasn't, and so did I. A brother, on coming back to civilization after many years' absence, does not immediately leap into the house in which his elder brother blew his brains out—anyway, I wouldn't.

The taxi twisted through the gates, round the little drive, and to the great door. An odd feeling it was, to stand in front of that door after nine years—but now we faced a house black and still where once had been a house of shining windows, gay with music and the laughter of the most brilliant company in London.

We told the driver to wait, and followed Antony in. We stood still in the pitch-black hall until he should switch on the light, and in the blaze of light in which the cloaked figure faced us I instantly understood what Tarlyon had meant when he said that Antony had "changed." I can only describe the change by saying that the structure of his face seemed to have fallen into disrepair; its brick-red complexion of old had dwindled to a faint pink, so that any ordinary face would have been a ghastly white; and he looked worn with more than the usual wear of passing years. But the wild eyes were still wild, and uncommonly fine he looked as he faced us in the somber hall, the huge dandy in the black cloak with the head of flaming hair brushed immaculately back.

He smiled at us with that sudden charm for which women had forgiven him much—too much; he flung out an arm in the grand manner.

"Welcome to the old house," he said. "And for heaven's sake try to look as though you didn't miss Roger."

But the magic of Roger Poole was not, I thought, in the place; the house was now but a shell for a noisy man.

"CHAMPAGNE is indicated," said Antony; and that indication led us to the dining-room—a long, oak-panelled room at the back of the house. The curtains were not drawn across the two French windows, which gave out to a lawn sloping carelessly down to the water of Regent's Park; and in the second in which Antony fumbled for the electric switch the dark shapes of the trees looked like the van of an impenetrable forest. But dark shapes of trees always look more or less like that.

"Didn't you say something about an appointment?" Tarlyon asked vaguely, as Antony ravished the wire off a bottle.

"Did I?" He looked up at us from his business, very thoughtfully. "Oh, did I?"

"Pop!" said the champagne cork.

We drank, and Antony looked at his wrist watch.

"Damn!" he said. "It's stopped."

"The time being just 11:25," I helped him.

"Thanks," said Antony, very mild, very thoughtful. "Excuse me a moment, will you?" And he strode across the room to the folding doors which led to Roger's old library and card-room. He closed the door behind him, but it did not catch, swung open a few inches. No light filled the dark vertical space.

"Never known him so polite before," I muttered.

"He's absent-minded," said Tarlyon, looking thoughtfully at the dark space.

"What I want to know," he whispered, "is what he's doing in there in the dark?"

"Keeping his appointment," I suggested facetiously.

Tarlyon looked from the door to me.

"Poor devil!" he said softly. I thought he was pitying me for my wit, of which I was never very proud.

He put down his empty glass, dug his hands into his pockets, and lounged to the folding-doors. I never knew a man who could walk so casually as Tarlyon; you never expected him to get anywhere, but he always got there before you expected him to.

He kicked the slightly open door a little wider with the tip of his shoe. I was just behind his shoulder.

"Antony!" he called softly.

From the light in which we stood the library was a pit of darkness. Nothing moved in the pit. There was no sound.

"He's not there," I whispered; and I wondered why I whispered.

"Can you smell anything?" a hoarse voice suddenly asked from the darkness.

Tarlyon lounged into the black room. But somehow, I did not feel called upon to follow. I leaned against the door.

Deeply set in the darkness I could at last make out the faintly white patch which must be Antony's shirtfront; and I wondered what tomfoolery he was up to now, asking stupid questions in a startling voice out of a poisonously dark room. I could smell nothing at all, and didn't expect to.

"What kind of a smell?" Tarlyon asked—in a reasonable tone! He stood just within the door, his back to me.

"CAN you smell nothing at all?" the hoarse, subdued voice asked again. "But, of course, it's very faint now."

Tarlyon put up his nose and sniffed. I sniffed. More than faint it was, I thought.

"Been smoking?" Tarlyon asked, and he sniffed again.

"No," came a whisper.

"Oh," said Tarlyon. This was lunatic talk, and I was just about to say so when Antony asked sharply:

"Why did you ask?"

"I thought I smelt smoke," said Tarlyon. "Might be cigarette smoke."

"It is," I snapped, for I was smoking a Turkish cigarette just behind his ear.

"You blasted fool!" said Antony—and with such contempt behind it that from being bored I got annoyed. I stretched out my hand on the inside of the library door and switched on the light.

"Turn that out, you fool!" came a frantic roar, and I had a vision of a red giant murdering the distance between us. I've never thanked God for anything so much as for having directed the body of George Tarlyon to be standing between Red Antony and myself. I turned off the light quick enough.

"Steady, Antony, steady!" said Tarlyon.

"Oh, go to hell!" growled Antony.

I thought to myself that we couldn't be very far from it at the moment. But the spell, or smell, it seemed, was broken. I was thankful for that, anyway.

Back in the lighted dining-room Antony emptied his glass and grinned at me rather shamefacedly.

"Sorry, old boy," he said. I grinned back, as though I had enjoyed it.

Tarlyon asked suddenly:

"Have you got a spare bedroom for me, Antony?"

I stared, Antony stared. Then Antony smiled, and never before had I seen him smile quite like that.

"Thank you, George," he said, almost softly. "Now that's really a friendly action. But I'll be all right—you needn't worry."

Then he addressed me as well; I had never seen Antony so reasonable.

"Come to dinner here tomorrow night," he begged. "Both of you. I can give you quite a good dinner." He seemed very earnest, looking from one to the other of us. I was going to say I was engaged, but Tarlyon answered quickly:

"Right, Antony." And because he looked at me in a certain way, I let it be.

IN the taxi, at last, Tarlyon said: "Ralph, you risked your life by turning on that light, but you did a great service."

"What do you mean?"

"Didn't you see anything?"

I then lost my temper.

"No," I shouted. "I neither smelt anything in the dark nor saw anything in the light, except that red lunatic charging at me."

"He was only preserving his illusion," Tarlyon said mildly. "Didn't you see, in that second of light, the open desk just by us, beside the door?"

"I saw nothing but Antony, but quite enough of him."

"Pity. If you had seen the desk, you would have seen a telephone overturned on it, the receiver hanging down, and a revolver on the floor."

This was getting serious. I struck a match and examined Tarlyon's face. He was not smiling.

"Fact," he assured me. "You would have seen the desk just as it was after Roger Poole had shot himself at it."

"You don't mean——"

"I mean, old boy, that Antony has gone and put everything back exactly as he last saw it in Roger's library. Roger, Roger's wife, Antony and another fellow were in the dining room. The telephone bell rang in the library and Roger went to answer it, telling Antony to come with him.

"He didn't turn on the light in the library. The telephone told Roger that the police were after him. And the two in the dining room heard Roger telling Antony what he thought of him as a man and brother, then they heard a shot; and when they got to the door and switched on the light, they saw Roger dead at the desk and Antony standing where he was standing tonight. Antony went out by the window into the garden—and he has reconstructed the scene exactly as he last saw it even to a dummy telephone and a revolver! In fact, everything is there except Roger. Silly, isn't it?"

Silly was not the word. "But why, why?"

"That's what I want to find out," said Tarlyon. "Antony is playing some sort of a game with himself, and he's frightening himself to death in doing it. He always was a superstitious ass. Giants usually are, somehow—perhaps because, having nothing physical to fear, they fear the psychic. I'll bet he goes into that library every night at the same time—Roger shot himself at about 25 past 11, by the way. Poor old Antony!"

"But what was all that nonsense about the smell?" I asked.

Tarlyon did not answer. At last he said:

"Did you ever hear, Ralph, the theory that if Judas Iscariot had not come after Jesus he might have done all that Jesus did? But as he found he could not because he was too late, he was doomed to crime. In a sort of far-fetched way it was the same way with Roger and Antony. The tragedy of those two brothers has something absurdly, fantastically reasonable about it.

"You see, Roger was a year older and did all that Antony wanted to do, the fine and brilliant things, while poor Antony could do nothing but make a fool of himself, which he did only too well. Antony would have been a man of many accomplishments, for he's no fool, but for the fact that Roger was before him—so Antony thought. And Roger loved Antony, while Antony hated and admired and feared Roger. And at last, somehow or another, he managed to betray Roger.

"No one knows what that last moment held for those two—no one knows what lay behind the insults that Roger heaped on Antony at that final moment. For they were overheard, you know, by Roger's wife and the man who was dining there. But something seems to have stuck in Antony's mind and grown very big with years. I'm rather concerned for the poor devil, Ralph. He's still afraid of his elder brother. Or perhaps he feels that Roger left something unsaid which he must hear, and so he wants to re-create him."

It was as the taxi stopped at my door

Save the Drunkard

Sunshine vs. Moonshine

(Written by a woman who saved her husband from the drinking evil)

My man is very good to me,
So loyal, kind and true.
He never comes home really drunk,
As other husbands do.
But sometimes, when he's "got too much,"
I wish that I were dead;
For there's no sunshine in my heart,
When moonshine's in his head.

Some folks can laugh at such a plight
Of some poor drunken fool.
To me there's naught but aching heart
And pity for Satan's tool.
And, when he's had just "one too many,"
I fear that we must part;
For when there's moonshine in his head
There's no sunshine in my heart.

Within the garden of my life,
Love bloomed in every thought,
But now I fear 'tis wilting fast
And love must come to naught.
I pray before it is too late,
He'll think how oft I've said,
"There's no sunshine in my heart, dear,
When there's moonshine in your head."

• • • • • • • •

I read the book "The National Curse"
Sent me by Dr. Haines;
And I used the "Golden Treatment"
To break the galling chains.
The splendid manhood underneath
Is freed from Satan's snare;
Since there's no moonshine in his head,
Our hearts have sunshine there.

I gave the powder secretly,
He never even knew;
Oh, woman, do the same today,
The act you cannot rue.
Our lives are very different,
Since that first ad I read;
In our hearts are floods of sunshine,
And no moonshine in his head.

that Tarlyon cried out as though he had made a discovery: "Good God, of course!"

"Of course what?"

"Smoke, you fool! It was smoke!"

WHAT was our surprise, on entering the dining room some minutes after 9 o'clock the next evening—for Antony dined late—to see the table laid for four! And then a lady came in—a tall, dark young lady, a strange and unusual lady with a flash of very white teeth for a smile and a gardenia alight on the wing of her sleek black hair! I am afraid Tarlyon and I must have seemed very rude, for we were so surprised that we stared. The white teeth flashed at us. We bowed.

"My wife," said Antony. We bowed again. She was the sort of woman one bowed to. Antony's wife!

"Diavalen," said Antony, abruptly, "this is Lord Tarlyon and Mr. Trevor."

Diavalen—Lady Poole!—said nothing. With that wonderful trick of flashing those wonderful teeth she didn't need to say anything.

"She's a Creole," said Antony, as we sat at the table. He said it as he might have said that she was an orange. Those white teeth flashed at me, and I smiled back, feeling an ass. There didn't seem much to say about her being a Creole. . . .

I don't know how Tarlyon felt about it, but it took me some time to get my mind. "My wife," said Antony! Never a word nor a sign about being married—to that glorious, dark, alien creature with the flashing teeth and sleek black hair! Diavalen the Creole!

Red Antony was never what you might call a good host: not, particularly, at the beginning of dinner. Tonight he was morose. But Tarlyon talked—to Lady Poole. It would take more than a lovely Creole to baffle Tarlyon. He seemed to have inside information as to what were the subjects best calculated to excite interest in a Creole married to a morose English Baronet with ginger hair. Diavalen did not talk. But one did not realize that she wasn't talking, for she was wonderfully expressive with her smiling, flashing teeth. She seemed to have discovered the art of using teeth for something besides eating.

As Tarlyon talked to her she turned her face towards him, and of this I took advantage to stare at her face bit by bit. She was the most strangely lovely woman I have ever seen. And she was the most silent.

Even Tarlyon was at last baffled by the silence of Diavalen. A silence fell. The teeth flashed at me, and I was just about to say something to her when Antony's voice hit the drum of my ear and I dropped my fork.

"I should trouble," said Antony. "She's dumb."

That is why I dropped my fork. The servant picked it up and gave me another. I made a considerable business of it, and then I ate furiously. Red Antony, vile Antony. I didn't look at Tarlyon. He was furious, I knew. He was a man who did not take a very liberal view of jokes like that. But the worst of Antony was that he didn't care what view anyone took; he just said the first thing that came into his great red head.

If the dinner, which was excellent as to food and wine, had been a frost before, it was, naturally, not a howling success after that. The only thing to do was to pretend that Antony had not spoken. It seemed too silly to say to the lovely Creole: "Oh, I'm so sorry!" Poor Diavalen! But I couldn't pretend, I simply could not find anything to say which didn't need an answer. Just try being suddenly planted with a dumb woman and see if conversation flows naturally from you.

AT LAST, Diavalen rose, and we rose. I rushed to the door and held it open. Her teeth flashed at Tarlyon, and he bowed like a courtier. As she passed Antony, he said, "Good night, Diavalen," but he said it as though he didn't care whether her night was good or bad. As she passed Antony she gave him a look out of her large, black eyes. I was glad I did not know what that look said, but I was sure that Antony deserved it. "Goodnight, Lady Poole," I said; teeth flashed at me, a touch of pleasant scent hovered faintly, and Diavalen was gone.

"Heavens, she's lovely!" I whispered, as I joined them at the table.

Tarylon's fingers played with the stem of his port glass.

"Would you mind explaining, Antony," he asked, dangerously, "why you chose that infamous way of telling us that your wife was—well, not quite like the rest of us?" There was, I agreed, something blasphemous about the ghastly word "dumb" in relation to that lovely creature.

Red Antony leant back in his chair and dug his hands deep in his pockets, so that his white shirt-front stuck out like the breastplate of a warrior. He looked bored.

"Favorite trick of hers," he explained, morosely. "Always tries to act as though she wasn't dumb. If you had to live with that silly pretense it would get on your nerves. I can tell you. She does it very well, I admit. Takes a pride in it—making a fool of other people, I call it. On board ship from New York she put it over quite a number of people for a day or two. Lord, it would have got on anyone's nerves, the way she grinned and grinned and showed her teeth!

"Why not be honest and say one's dumb and be done with it? Or let me say it! There's no crime in being dumb, especially with a beautiful face like that. But she won't see it, she must smile and flash her teeth—she's got a repertoire of grins that would astonish a movie star; and she's so proud of them that even if she could speak she wouldn't. And sometimes all that grinning and teeth work gets me so raw that I could put back my head and howl—and she knows it.

"Sorry I offended you, George. But I'm pretty nervy these days. I'm raw—raw!" He shouted that last word at us with a thump on the table; and raw he looked, with the eyes blazing out of him, and his once huge, once red, once jolly face shrunk to a mockery of itself, with the skin drawn tight across his jaws and hollow in the cheeks.

Tarylon picked up a liqueur glass which the thump had upset. "Sorry about your unhappy marriage, Antony," he said, "but, you know, it takes a Napoleon to marry a beautiful Creole. How did it happen?"

"How?" And Anthony laughed; at least he made a noise which was perhaps intended to sound like laughter. "How? Because she made it happen—how else? D'you think because she's dumb that she hasn't got more fascination than a thousand women rolled together? Those eyes? Met eyes like that before, George? If hell has a face its eyes will be like that. I had to marry her. . . . In Mexico, where I went after the armistice. I suppose you fellows remember that I went to Mexico three years before the war. I was in love with the girl who became Roger's wife—inevitable, wasn't it, that the only woman I ever loved should fall to Roger?

"He didn't do it on purpose, of course—it just happened. So I went to Mexico, to try to do something which Roger could not do before me. Last chance kind of thing, you know"—— The rain of words faded out of him. He had moved considerably from the subject of Diavalen, but who could hold a haunted face like that to a subject. I wished I could, for I didn't want him to run amuck about Roger. There was something—well, indecent, in talking about a man dead nine years or more as though he were alive and still wanting to "put it across" Antony at every turn.

I WISHED Tarlyon would say something, but he was silent, his fingers fiddling with the stem of his port glass. Antony was drinking next to nothing; round about his coffee cup were at least six quarter-smoked cigarettes, and now he began to maul a cigar. I never saw him smoke that cigar.

"In Mexico," Antony said, softly, "I found oil. It was very good oil, as Roger said later, but there wasn't much of it. My luck again! But I made Roger share it this time. You remember how I reappeared in England? Through that window over there, while Roger was giving a big dinner party, sitting where I'm sitting now. You were here, George. Roger and I made it up before the lot of you—after a silence of years. Entirely on my side, the quarrel—Roger always loved me. We made it up, you remember, George? I wanted, you see, to plant Roger with that oil. Cascan Oil—it sounded like a big thing at the time. That was the last big dinner party Roger ever gave.

"He was unhappy at home—some love misunderstanding—and he took to me, Roger did. He went head over heels into that bucket shop. Of course, he soon saw through me and my oil—the man wasn't born who could take Roger in—but he let the company go on. He wanted to see how far I'd go. Giving me my head, you know. He had packets of money in reserve, and thought he could put the thing right any moment. But he got reckless—watching me and wondering how far I'd go. Roger had always loved me ever since we were children—he never thought of me but as a naughty baby with a bee in my red head about him.

"I could see all the time he was wondering how far I dared go. And he was unhappy at home, poor Roger; he and his wife somehow couldn't get their particular ways of loving each other to work well together. So he had nothing to do but get reckless and chuckle over the naughty baby. I went the limit. The bucket shop crashed on Roger's head. He tried to pull up, chucked his money in, and other people's, but he wouldn't save it. Clear case of dirty work. A greasy bubble, Cascan Oil.

"Left a nasty mess when it burst. And all the papers signed in Roger's name. Telephone rang in the next room while we were in here. I was sitting where you are, Trevor. Roger looks at me with a kind of crooked smile. 'Come with me,' he says, and I went. Into that room, the library. Roger didn't trouble to switch on the light; the telephone was on the desk beside the door. The police were after him, said the man on the telephone—the police after Sir Roger Poole, Bart, M. P., and all the rest of it! 'Listen,' says Roger. And I listened while he told me a few things about myself. 'A poor husk of a man,' he called me. 'A graveyard of a brother, you are,' he said. 'And the epitaph on your grave will be Dolor Ira,' he said, for Roger was a great Latin scholar and could lash out bits of Tacitus as easily as a person might give you the Bible. I thought he was going to shoot me, I was ready for it—but he'd shot himself. Roger loved me, you know"——

"Then why the hell," Tarylon blazed out, "did you take this cursed house?"

Antony mauled his cigar.

"Because," he said with a grin, "it just happened that way. It was fate to find it empty—a fine, large house like this at a low rent, while all England was yelling for houses. But I might not have taken it if Diavalen had been against it"——

"Oh," said Tarlyon to that.

Antony looked at his wrist-watch, and jumped up in a mighty hurry. "God, the time's gone! Excuse me a moment."

"We will not!" cried Tarlyon and had his back against the library door almost before you saw him leave the table.

But Antony walked his way to the library door without a word.

"Don't, old Antony; don't!" Tarlyon begged.

"OUT of my way!" said Antony. He said it as though he was thinking of something else, which was Antony's most dangerous way of saying anything.

Now, Red Antony was a giant, and irresponsible at that. The two of us couldn't have held him from that library door. Tarlyon let him pass with a wicked word, and has regretted it ever since. Antony slammed the door behind him, and we heard the twist of the key.

Without a word to me Tarlyon was at the French window, opened it and disappeared. I stayed. I was extremely uncomfortable in that madhouse, you understand. Perhaps two minutes passed, perhaps 10. Where the devil was Tarlyon? And then I heard through the library door the thud of something falling. And then in there a window smashed, a sharp smash. I measured my distance from that door and crashed my shoulder at it, and fell into the library on top of the panel.

"Light," said Tarlyon's voice. I switched it on. On the floor between us was a heap of a man face downwards, with the back of a red head half-screwed under an outstretched arm. And there was red on the back of Tarlyon's hand where he had put it through the window.

We knelt on each side of Red Antony, and turned him over.

"Dead," I said.

"Not he!" said Tarlyon. "He's fainted—from fright." But he knew as well as I did that Antony was dead from fright. The huge bulk was as limp as a half-filled sack as we lifted it a little. Antony's eyes were wide open, and they were like the eyes of a child that has just been thrashed.

"He's been shot," I said suddenly.

"There was no noise," said Tarlyon, but he looked at me. There had been no noise, but there was a faint, acrid taste of pistol smoke in the air. It's unmistakable, that faint, acrid smell of a revolver just spent. But Antony had not been shot.

"It wasn't an illusion, then!" Tarlyon whispered softly. "That smell . . . of Roger's revolver! And it's killed Antony in the end."

I stared down at the poor haunted face. And then I heard Tarlyon whisper: "My God!" And again: "My God—look at that!"

BUT I did not look. I knew he was staring over my shoulder, and I was afraid to look. I was afraid of what I would see. And then I twisted my head over my shoulders, towards the far end of the room, where there was a little door from the hall. And I saw the thing sitting quiet in the corner, the black thing with white teeth fashing in a white face and a gardenia in her hair.

In the palm of one hand was a little golden bowl, and from this bowl floated up a wisp of smoke, just a wisp of smoke against the blackness of her dress, and this was the faint, acrid smell of a spent bullet. And Diavalen was laughing with all the glory of ivory teeth and scarlet lips. . . . We left the thing to its joke. We went out by the window, and did not remember our hats and sticks.

The Curb Market for Old Jewels

is a commentary upon the honesty with which the market is conducted, however knavishly some of the stock in trade may have been acquired originally.

AND this Betts of diamond curb-market fame is a queer, taciturn person. Until the World War was nearly over he had remained an honest man, buying and selling various sorts of merchandise. He made money and took care of it. Then one day, while he was drinking his modest glass of ale in a public house, a woman in destitution asked him to buy a brooch from her. She said frankly that it was stolen property. He bought it. He had started toward prison.

Long under suspicion by the detectives of New Scotland Yard, Betts owed his immunity to the fact that he was a licensed dealer in gold, silver and precious stones, had been in business for years and that the police held no real evidence against him. Finally, and the "tip" is said to have come from a rival "fence," the authorities put his house under surveillance.

ONE night Detective Sergeant James Ball saw Betts leave his house carrying a parcel. The policeman stopped him and asked what was in the package. Dissatisfied with Betts' answer, Ball took him to the police station.

Following the arrest of Betts, the police searched his house and found a large quantity of stolen jewelry, including 130 watches taken from a factory. There were many other valuable things, such as silver tableware and desk fittings, wrist watches and jewels.

WHY did Joseph Betts fall from grace? He was already wealthy, and unostentatious. He lived in a well-kept house, but dressed cheaply, drank sparingly, never made bets and had no associations with women. His only hobby appears to have been a rather frequent attendance at the movies.

Betts received his five-year sentence unmoved.

"I expected at least 10 years," he remarked to a friend.

RID YOUR NOSE AND THROAT OF CATARRH

RIGHT AT HOME by a Method being used all over the States and Canada and even in some foreign countries. In these hundreds of homes, noses are being cleansed and freed of Catarrhal mucus. That same sticky mucus is dislodged from its abiding place in the back nasal passages and the throats made clean and wholesome. In addition, the owners of these noses and throats are being built up, where they can resist the conditions which produce Catarrh.

It is a great work and a great reward to know that each day some name or names are added to the now very long list of those who have been rid of Catarrh through the Sproule Method of Home Treatment.

Free Consultation About YOUR Nose and Throat

Find out why your Nose and Throat should not be rid of their Catarrhal infection as so many hundreds of others have been. Send for a list of questions which will enable us to tell how bad your case is and if it is one that can be handled through this Home Method. We have been treating Catarrh for 38 years and it is interesting to see the great similarity with which the disease works in the nose and throat, although every case has its individual peculiarities.

This Coupon entitles readers of this paper to consultation free on Catarrh.

FULL NAME ....

This little coupon is for your convenience. Just sign your name and address and mail to Catarrh Specialist Sproule, 303 Cornhill Building, Boston, Mass.

Specialist Sproule who founded this Home Method and who has been the guiding hand all these 38 years is a graduate of Dublin University in Medicine and Surgery, and served as surgeon in the British Royal Mail Naval Service.

Coming here, he soon saw the great opportunities and need for the betterment of the health of the people. Himself a farmer's son, he realized the difficulties of going to the Specialist for medical treatment. He conceived the idea of sending the help and medical attention to the Catarrh sufferer in his home.

Hundreds of grateful owners of noses and throats rid of Catarrh, bear enthusiastic testimony to the efficacy of the Method.

If you have Catarrh fill out the Coupon and see what can be done for you. It won't cost you a cent to find that out and it may be the means of showing you what life would be like without that gluey mucus in nose and throat and consequently without that hawking and spitting and constant use of the handkerchief. Perhaps you don't realize it—but those dull headaches—that heavy stupid feeling—that everlasting discharge are pulling down your general condition daily.

Just slip the filled out coupon into an envelope right now—mail it and see what can be done for you and what it will mean to you to have your nose and throat rid of Catarrh.

ls accentuated by a sailor hat of midight blue on which she wears a ribbon of vivid cerulean. They make their ay to a cleanly little cabin, and you, f you chance to observe, will note that ere is a place of refreshment.

For a sign on the flagpole tells as uch. It is of plate glass, with neatly ilvered letters, and one wonders whence it came as one reads the laconic word:

"SANDWICHES."

An old tub raised on bricks in the front yard and covered by some grilles f heavy wire completes the story. One who delights himself as do Ethiopian picures may here buy "barbecue."

It is a tiny, shapeless place into which the negress enters. The walls are covered with green roofing paper. Two windows face the street. The one made from a bit of beveled plate glass, the other an odd sash with tiny panes. At both are spotless bits of lace for curtains. Matting and a bit of carpet overhang, for awning, the front door, and under them is an old mahogany settee with graceful rounding back, on which the white woman waits.

Her negro friend brings out some round flat thing wrapped in a bit of newspaper. A pie, perhaps, or piece of cake. Some tid-bit, surely, for the thanks with which it is received. They sit and gossip for a while. Then a few more words of thanks and the other drifts away.

Strange little village, this, at 4000 Main street south. And picturesque are the homes that junk built, which lie here upon the margin of the city and the margin of the river; homes built from the stones and boards and bits of tin that builders had rejected.

She Dared to Leave a Rajah for a Lover

the exquisite pieces of Benarosi silk—crimson, saffron or purple vibrating in ridescent tints under the bright sun and passing shadow—she had seen the young Mohammedan merchant prince, Abdul Kadir Bawla. Rich he was, handsome and tall, straight as an arrow, and one whose skin was softer than the silks he spread before her. Perhaps of him she dreamed now as e danced, her eyes glowing with pasion until they kindled fire once more n the heart of the Maharajah. Perhaps she had been indiscreet.

Whispers poured their poison into the ears of the Prince. No longer was her motor car at the Nautch girl's disposal. When she was permitted to eave the luxury of the palace her attendants were not people of her choosng but spies and guards picked out by hers. Thus life became intolerable behind the purdah's wall.

Mumtaz Begum contrived to escape. She was in his suite when the Maharajah left Bombay for Mussoorie in March, 1924. The train in the early morning had reached Delhi, where it awaited the passing of another, Bombay bound. Outside tea sellers were alling their wares: "Garam Cha! Cha Garam!" And the cries aroused the dozing dancer, who stole from her compartment into the dawn. When the Bombay train passed she was aboard . . .

"MY LIFE is yours," she told Abdul Kadir Bawla, when, after a isit to her mother, she went again to e Bazar. And the young merchant k her to his luxurious home and ere installed her. From that moment ere hung above his head the sword.

To Bawla came large offers if he ould release the Maharajah's favorte. He laughed the gold to scorn. hat need had he of wealth outside e value of his merchandise and the easure of his love? He and the inty Nautch girl lived in a fool's radise of happiness. But when perasion failed, threats followed.

The craft of murder was put in moon as the lovers laughed while skulkg forms watched in the night the ouse where the two were happy. When e went to the Bazar Bawla knew that e was followed, but he went in dayght and with friends. When Mumtaz egum visited her mother she knew at spies surrounded her.

The girl's mother, frantic for the fety of her child, appealed to the pose. Perhaps the threat of an awful ngeance frightened even the law's ardians; they were powerless, at st, to stay the hand of death.

SO CAME that January midnight when the lovers stole from their me for a foolhardy ride. And then e flash of the other car in the dark, the collision, the pistols and ath.

For three days Shafi Ahmed was held prison and no one knew him. Then e one who had been silent spoke his me, under promise of protection, and her arrests and identifications folwed.

The drama is not ended. Those who e befriended Mumtaz Begum wait in r, and the Indian police still seek "higher ups" of "The Hidden Hand." And perhaps The Hidden Hand is king Mumtaz Begum, who in her g mourns the death of a lover for m she gave a Prince's favor.

"For his lips were sweeter than the egranate," she says, "and my heart is broken . . ."

She has left the jewels which the Maharajah gave her, and Bawla, in his will, provided for her future with bequests of several thousand pounds. But money will not buy beauty; and Mumtaz Begum looks upon her scarred face in the mirror and knows her charm is gone. No more can her soft beauty allure the hearts of merchant princes or the hearts of Kings. . . .

I Will Prove To You That You Can Make $100 a Week

Yes, you can make $100 a week. You can make $5,000 a year and not work half as hard as you do now. You can do as well as H. T. Pearl, of Oklahoma, who made $750 in one month. You can begin like R. L. Marshall, of New Jersey, who made $80 in five hours. You don't have to wait. You don't have to invest any money. You don't have to take any course or do any studying. You can start right in next week. You can begin at once to make a really big income. The opportunity is waiting. The money is there for you to get. Do you want it? Then read this ad carefully and answer it, for this offer is meant for you.

Your Profits Will Begin At Once

These records show you how our Representatives make large profits the first day. You can easily do as well.

$16 Profit First Day
That's the record of Alyse Leblanc, of Massachusetts.

$32 Profit in 8 Hours is the result of the first day's work of Adolph Montoya, of New Mexico.

$4 in One Evening is pretty good pay for 2 hours' spare time. That is what Samuel Miles, of Arkansas, made his first day.

$13 Profit First Afternoon
Jacob Myron, of Connecticut, started in the afternoon and cleared over $13 before evening.

$4 an Hour
was what Margaret La Roux, of Michigan, averaged her first afternoon.

$40 in 24 Hours
was the result of the first work of B. Collander, of Massachusetts.

700 Men and Women Wanted At Once

We are now ready to appoint 700 more Representatives in all parts of the country. You can be one of them, and by simply doing what we suggest you can make a net, clear, cold profit for yourself of anywhere from $50 to $100 a week with very little effort. Your first day will bring you big money. W. A. Webster, of Virginia, made $6 in 1½ hours; Leonard Lemay, of Michigan, made $15 his first afternoon; W. P. Stone, of Maine, made $24 in 4½ hours. All without experience or training and you can do as well, or better.

Amazing Profits For Easy Work

We are the originators and manufacturers of "ZANOL" Products—the nationally advertised line of pure food products, toilet preparations, soaps, perfumes, household and laundry necessities—over 350 different kinds. Four million dollars worth were bought last year but none of these products are sold in stores.

We sell direct from factory to customer. By this means we give greater values and lower prices than could be secured in stores. We have thousands and thousands of customers in every section of the United States. But instead of sending their orders direct to us we appoint a Representative in each locality through whom our customers send us their orders.

Exclusive Territory

We offer to assign you an exclusive territory and let you handle all our dealings with our customers in that territory. You will simply introduce our products and let the people know that you have become the "ZANOL" Representative. The rest is easy. Our products are nationally advertised and well known in every locality. We have been in business for 16 years and have resources of more than a million dollars. The local man or woman who becomes our Representative is given complete instructions, full equipment and everything necessary for success.

More Than A Million Dollars Made By Our Representatives In 8 Months

If you want your share of these big profits all you need do now is write. You won't believe how easy it is nor what wonderful profits you can make until you get started and the money begins to roll in.

We furnish all of our people with complete equipment for doing business. We furnish it free. We tell you in detail exactly what to do. We make it easy for you. We help you in every way to get started quick and to make big profits without waiting or delay. You will be given the same proposition that has brought thousands of dollars in cash to E. S. Shelly, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Nona Kerns, of Mississippi; Edgar Banville, of Massachusetts and dozens of others. It has enabled G. C. Henry to make four times as much money as he ever did on a farm and G. A. Becker, of Iowa, to earn more than he did in 22 years in the grocery business.

Send No Money

Just send me your name and I will tell you how to get started. I will give you all the details. I will show you how you can make $100 a week and even in your spare time $8 to $10 a day for a few hours' work. I will show you how you can have a permanent, profitable, honorable, pleasant and fascinating business that will bring in a bigger income than you ever thought possible. It is the one opportunity that you have been waiting for. It is your chance to get ahead. It means thousands of dollars for you. And you are not risking a penny. You are not agreeing to pay anything or do anything.

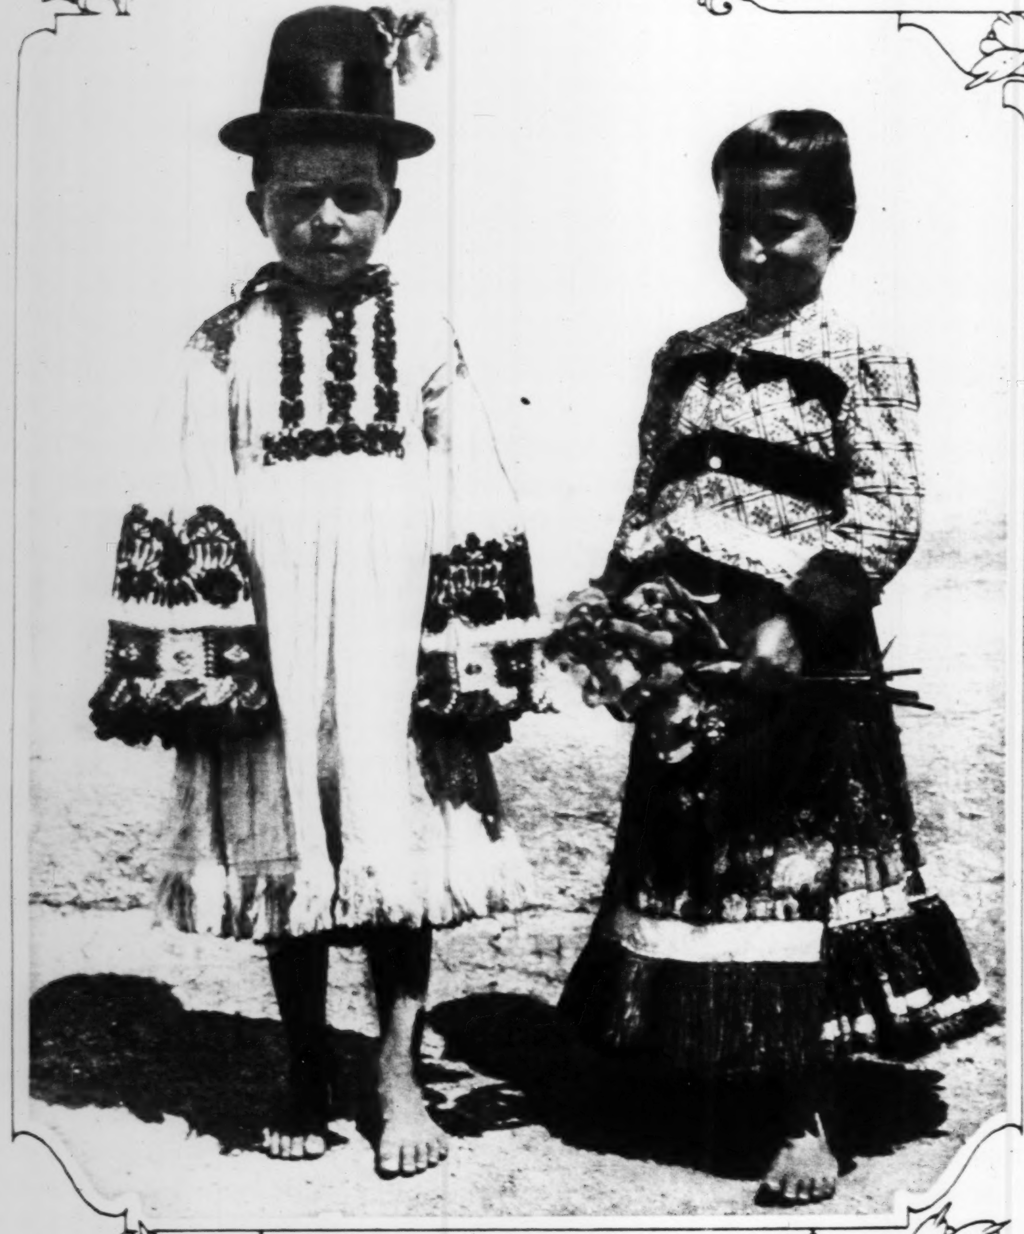
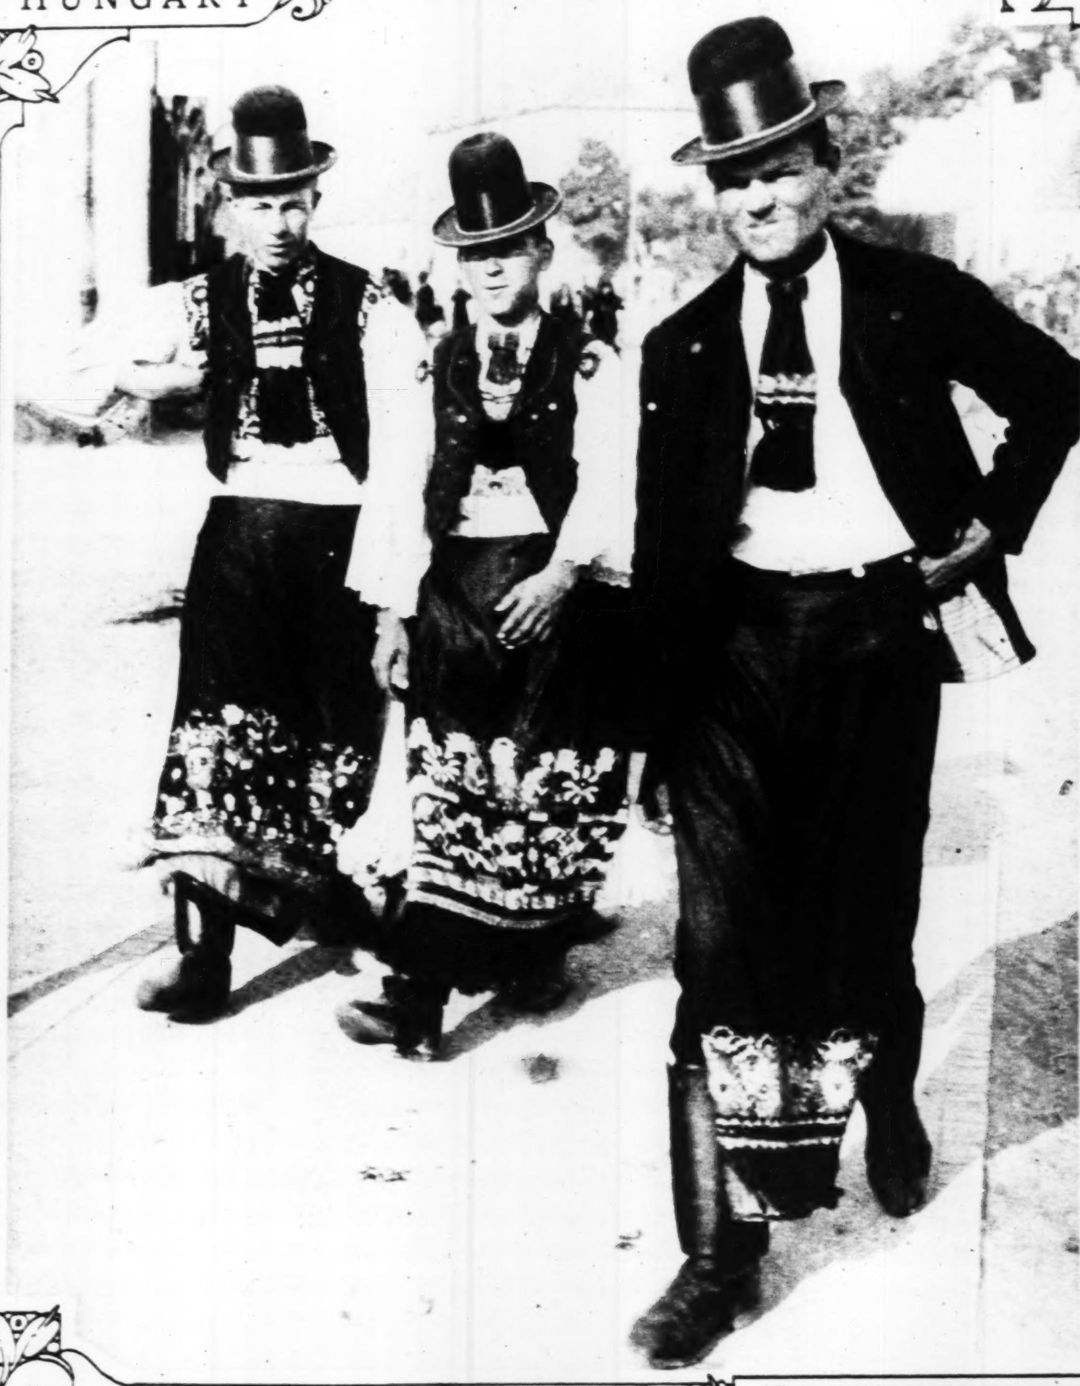
EASTER IN HUNGARY





Two children of Mezokovesd on their way to church. Only a boy wears a hat, the unbobbed girl being satisfied with her rich coat of tan. At right: Three of the village swains in their Sunday best parading down Main street.
—Ewing Galloway

The dainty woman does not KEEP corns

Almost every woman spends hours every week in the care of her face—cold-creaming it, cleansing it, massaging it, to guard against the tiniest blemish. . . . But that doesn't prove her daintiness. It may merely indicate pride and vanity. . . . The real proof of perfect daintiness is the care a woman takes of the things that are not seen . . . A blemish on her foot is as objectionable to her as one on her face. The moment a corn appears, she applies a Blue-jay.

* * *

Blue-jay is the delightful way to end a corn. A tiny cushion, cool as velvet, fits over the corn—relieving the pressure. The pain stops at once. Soon the corn goes. Blue-jay leaves nothing to guesswork. You do not have to decide how much or how little to put on. Each downy plaster is a complete standardized treatment, with just the right amount of magic medication to end the corn.

The beauty of Children's Hair
Depends upon Shampooing

Try this quick and simple method which thousands of mothers now use. See the difference it will make in the appearance of YOUR CHILD'S hair.

Note how it gives life and lustre, how it brings out all the natural wave and color. See how soft and silky, bright and fresh-looking the hair will look.

ANY child can have hair that is beautiful, healthy and luxuriant.

It is NO LONGER a matter of luck. The beauty of a child's hair depends ALMOST ENTIRELY upon the way you shampoo it.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color and leaves it fresh-looking, glossy and bright.

When a child's hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because the hair has not been shampooed properly.

While children's hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, fine, young hair and tender scalps cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating mothers, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure. It does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your child's hair look, just follow this simple method.

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, give the hair a good rinsing. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before. After the final washing, rinse the hair and scalp in at least two changes of clear, fresh, warm water. This is very important.

Just Notice the Difference

YOU will notice the difference in the hair even before it is dry, for it will be delightfully soft and silky.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is.

If you want your child to always be remembered for its beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage—and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Every growing child craves candy. Active little bodies demand sugar. But children's candy must be pure—and they should not overeat on sweets.

Life Savers, the little candy mints with the hole (life saver shape) answer this problem in just the right way. They are china-hard and deliciously flavored.

This means that Life Savers are eaten slowly. Children suck them to make those wonderful flavors last longer. Little tummies are not upset. And there is no sticky, sugary debris to cling to teeth and start decay.

They're safe and wholesome. You may consciously be generous with Life Savers for they are the ideal candy for little folks.

Six flavors are displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: Pep-o-mint, Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Cl-o-ve and Vi-o-let.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

Paris Decrees The Ornamented Cuff

Up to Paris came the news! On the Riviera—at Cannes, Nice, Monaco—over at Biarritz, the ungloved hand is passé.

All because someone created the vogue of decorated cuffs—now gloves are lovelier than ever before, the final complement of a smart Spring costume.

Paris heard the news! Voilà! By cable we received style notes sketched by our representatives.

And now, Madame and Mademoiselle, the modes de rigueur of the Rue de la Paix are to be found in your own favorite shops here in the States.

Just as if you had shopped in Paris you, too, may wear the smart gloves now seen on the Bois, at tea at the Ritz or before dinner at the Crillon.

Kayser observers in Paris keep us posted. So look to Kayser, as other wise women do, for all that is chic in gloves.

MERCURY FOUND IN TWO BODIES IN SHEPHERD CASE

Amount in Organs of McClintock's Mother and Dr. Olson to Determine Significance of Discovery

PRESCRIPTIONS FOR COUPLE CHECKED

Judge Olson Says Neither of Them Took Anything That Looked Like Mercury in Their Illness.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Prescriptions written for Dr. Oscar Olson and Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, respectively physician and mother of Billy McClintock during their last illness called for nothing which looked like mercury, Chief Justice Harry Olson, the doctor's brother, said today after police had assembled the prescriptions.

The bodies of Dr. Olson and Mrs. McClintock were exhumed recently, and it was learned yesterday that mercury was found in the organs of both. Experts said the significance of this discovery would depend on the amount, which has not been determined. Mrs. McClintock's body had been buried 16 years.

Judge Olson added that Dr. Karl L. Thorsgaard, who attended Dr. Olson, believed the latter had administered to himself some calomel, containing mercury early in his illness.

Dr. W. D. McNally deferred filing his report pending tests for arsenic.

Search for Faiman's Friend.

Police today began looking for Winfield Hoegger, an inspector for the Chicago Health Department and alleged friend of C. C. Faiman, who has testified that he obtained typhoid germs from the Health Department.

"Hoegger," Herschell Hewett told Chief Justice Harry Olson, of the Municipal Court, "was formerly in the office of the Health Department, and is now an inspector in the field. He is a man whom Faiman went to at the Health Department. He carried a card of the National University of Sciences, Faiman's establishment, with his (Hoegger's) name on it. Faiman gave Mrs. Earl Clark a note to Hoegger asking him to grant any favors she asked."

Hewett, a salesman of Hammond, Ind., and former chiropractor, said he lectured formerly at Faiman's establishment. At the McClintock inquest he testified to a conversation between Earl Clark and J. P. Marchand about an alleged letter from William D. Shepherd to Faiman. He said he was a close friend of Clark and Clark's wife.

McClintock's Fiancee Improves.

Henry Pope, father of Miss Isabelle Pope, "Billy's" fiancee, was a caller at the judicial chambers. He said his daughter wrote from Los Angeles, where she is recuperating from a breakdown, that she was gradually improving and had gained weight. He said she would be well enough to testify at the trial of Shepherd unless it should be held immediately.

Scott Stewart, counsel for Shepherd, scouted as propaganda reports of the presence of mercury in the exhumed bodies, pointing out that Shepherd's medical representative had not been permitted to take specimens for analysis.
